ULSTER O.A.

Annual open show, Nov. 24, held in Clarence Place Hall, and was a great success, almost 500 entries being staged. The best exhibits in Ireland were on view, and some grand youngsters were staged for the first time. Plainheads were the outstanding feature, and Yorkshires were the best at this show for some time. Crests were not so numerous, but quality better, and the Scotch Fancies were up to other years. Mules and British were well up to other years, except Goldfinches. Mr. Neill won spl. best Scotch Fancy, with a grand young green cock. Mr. Young best unflig. Nor. with a grand yell. tkd. hen.

Much of the success of the show was due to the new secretary, Mr. Brown, who spared nothing to bring it to a success, and he was ably assisted by that sterling fancier, Mr. J. Stewart (president). The proceeds were for the Red Cross funds, and there never was a show in Belfast so largely patronized by the public. Committee: J. Neill, J. Carson, J. Telford, T. Young, W. Teasey, A. L. Hurd, J. McLarnon, D. McBride.

The judges were:—Scotch Fancies, Mules, Brit. and For., Mr. A. Livingstone (Paisley); Crests, Nor. and Yorks, Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington); and their awards gave general satisfaction. The stewards were: W. Teasey, M. Fleming, W. H. Gillespie, A. Creighton, who did their work in a proper way and saw that all birds from a distance were watered, etc. Dublin birds and those from other districts were sent away in time to catch their connections.

EDINBURGH (Open) O.S.

63rd Annual Show, Nov. 18, Buccleuch St. Halls, an ideal and cosy hall for such a grand display of Scotch Fancy and Belgians. Entries were about the same as last year, and the quality was well sustained. The office-bearers are a well-known body of fanciers, had everything in good order, and all worked with a will. The Sec., Mr. Lile, is an adept at secretarial work, and had everything in perfect order, and also did a lot in sending the birds away. The judges were Messrs. Carlow, Conway, Stewart and Paterson, who gave general satisfaction. It was very gratifying to see such a turn out of fanciers from Dundee in the North to Glasgow in the West. The cup winner was a very nice buff piebald shown by W. David, runner-up W. Allan with a hen.

BRECHIN.

53rd Annual Show, held in Temperance Hall, Nov. 4; entries numbering 414, being 20 above last year, although only two Norwich came from Fifeshire and none from Glasgow, which says little for the Norwich Plainhead Club members. Borders were a grand section, both for number and quality, and deserve special mention Mr. Clark must have had his work cut out for him in placing the tickets. Norwich were back in number but not in quality; some of the winners here will win again. British were poor in number, and two of the classes had to be cancelled. Mr. J. Calderwood judged Norwich, Mr. W. S. Clark Borders, and Mr. M'Lean British.

THE BRITISH AND MULES.

Judge: Mr. A. M'Lean.

MULES (5): 1, Kidd, nice var. Goldie, shade small, nice col., good face, wins; 2, Fyffe, excellent Greenf. Mule, fine type and col., well put down; 3, Duncan, Greenf. Mule, fails in col. and cond. to winner; 4, Kidd; 5, Sharp. HYBRIDS (7): 1, Cranna, Goldf.-Bullf., nice one, fine face and cond.; 2, Kidd, Greenf.-Bullf., has the making of a good one, scarcely up in col. yet; 3, Melvin, Redpoll-Goldf., very sweet exhibit; 4, McEwan; 5, Black and Hendrie; 6, Irvine. Mr. Anderson exhibited a Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid which showed its double parentage distinctly. It had broken some of its head feathers, and this possibly kept it out of the awards. GOLDF. (5): 1, Black and Hendrie, rattling bird, needs no comment; 2, Allison, shimmer, but all there for face and tans; 3, Irvine; 4, Ewart; 5, Hutchison SISKIN (13): 1, Cranna, wins, nice size, lovely clear yell. col., good cap, on the stout side; 2, Muir, a buff, but a good one, all there for cap and lacing, well placed; 3, Calder, fails size to leaders, good bib; 4, Hutchison; 5, Fyfe; 6, Black and Hendrie. REDPOLL or TWITE (10): 1, Sykes, good one, nice level col., fine size; 2, McEwan, close up, similar type; 3, Cummings, scarcely finished yet; 4, Lambie; 5, Black and Hendrie; 6, Muir, as good as any, only unsteady. LINNET (12): 1, Cranna, good size and type, but not so good in col.; 2, Corsar, sweet one all over, shining like satin, shade smaller; 3, Sykes, good size, might be better col., too heavy mks.; 4, Allison; 5, McMaster; 6, Black and Hendrie. GREENF. (8): 1, Gentleman, wins easy; 2, Sykes, not up in col. yet; 3, Lockhart, similar to 2; 4, Black and Hendrie; 5, Fyfe; 6, Hird. CHAFF. or BRAMBLE (8): 1, 2, Sykes, leader noted Chaffinch, 2nd well-known Bramble, clear win; 3, Muir, Bramble, best of col. and condition, will make a champion; 4, Richardson; 5, Black and Hendrie; 6, A. Muir. BRIT. HEN (8): 1, Kidd, sweet Bullf.; 2, Gentleman, nice Greenf., ex. size and col.; 3, Sykes, Corn, nice shape, col. and mks.; 4, Black and Hendrie; 5, Smart; 6, Steven. A.O. BRIT. GIFT (12): 1, Craig; 2, Taylor; 3, McGregor; 4, Dalgety; 5, Lyall; 6, Brand.

EASTLEIGH.

Annual open show, Nov. 15, Council Chambers. The hall is almost ideal, roomy, of good shape, and the daylight is so excellent that birds can be judged in their respective positions, saving both time and the disturbing of the exhibits. The entry was capital, and quality quite up to the usual standard of south-country shows. Norwich contained some nice typical specimens, the special for best bird going to Dr. Wecks's well-known Yellow hen, a bird with quite a record of firsts and specials. Mr. Chandler showed an exceptionally good buff marked bird in the Novice classes that won the spl. for best Unflighted. Yorkshires were quite up to standard, exhibits being sent up by such well-known South Coast fanciers as Messrs. Fulford, Troke, Gamble, Matthews, Holliday, etc. The show was splendidly managed by Mr. J. Alderslade, his assistant, Mr. F. Clark, rendering yeoman service. Other helpers were: Mrs. Alderslade, Messrs. Crook, Thornton, Page, Thornback, Legg, etc. The show was well attended by visitors. Mr. H. Norman judged.

CHAMP. NOR. YELL. BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

Fourteenth annual show, Nov. 18. The Co-operative Hall, in which the exhibits were staged, is of capital light, spacious, lofty and free of draughts, a very fine rendezvous. The entry was excellent, upwards of 200, really better than was expected, so very busy night and day are the fanciers around this district, doing urgent work of national importance. Yorks. were a choice collection, gems being put down by Messrs. Stott, Greatrix, Wilson and Darlington, Morton, Browse, Young, Moss and Lloyd. Yorks. Greens were greatly admired, and glorious "dusky" ones were shown by Messrs. W. Jones, Barr, Browse, and Young. Norwich, although not numerous were good, nice specimens were the property of Messrs. Barr, Teare, and Stott. British captivated, those benching our national songsters in tip-top form were Messrs. Baker (Goldie), J. Stott (Linnet), Morton (F.M. Linnet), and Greatrix (Twite). Mr. W. Wilson won well with a very smart and stylish buff 4-pointed Goldf.-Can., in fine fettle. Novice classes contained many exhibits quite worthy of doing duty with success in the champion section. Notable exhibits were the property of Messrs. Byrne, Baynes, Wakem, Crowe, Corfe and Taylor.

Chairman, Mr. J. M. Moss, is a most capable controller, and treas., Mr. F. Browse, is courteous and a worker, always on the go. Mr. A. E. Lloyd is of the right stamp, knows fully the secretarial duties, has every item at his finger tips, an enthusiast who is a great asset to the society. Stewards who worked hard and well were Messrs. W. Jones, Fitzsimmons, Cooper, Baines, and Barr. Mrs. Teare rendered capital assistance. Special winners were: Messrs. Young, Greatrix, and Corbett (clrs.), Teare, Barr, and Stott (Norwich), Baker, Wilson, and Morton (Brit.), Jones, Browse, and Young (Greens), Wakem, Taylor, and Corfe (Novices). Winning draw Nos. 291, 314, 772, 950, 318, 568. Amongst the many visitors were: Messrs. Burns, Bunner, and Benson. The "better halfs" of fanciers who patronised the venture were: Mesdames Morton, Browse, Cooper, F. Jones, Corfe, Baker, Weaver, and A. E. Lloyd. Most of these ladies are at present giving valuable assistance to their husbands by attending to the birds in their lengthy absence on munition work. Judging was completed in good time, and as the room was thronged with visitors, everything appeared to point to a successful issue. Tickets had been sold well. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Walkley, Sheffield) judged.

OLD SHILDON.

Old Shildon Workmen's Club, sixth annual cage bird show, Club Hall, Nov. 10 and 11. The hall is a most suitable place for a show, being well lighted, free from draughts, and heated with hot-water pipes. The classification was liberal, but only poor encouragement was given for a hard-working secretary and committee in receiving only 188 entries in 34 classes. In spite of the poor support, every attention was given to the exhibits. Mr. Ainsworth was a hard-working and very obliging sec., and was supported by Messrs. Orton, Galloway, Hugill, Alderson, Rowlandson, Webb, Allan, members of the committee. Messrs. W. Rutherford, Crook, and R. S. Bewick, Newcastle, judged.

BRISTOL.

Show held Dec. 2. Entries were not up to expectation, and this may have been due to the fact that a mistake was made in stating in advertisement that the entry fee was 2s. 6d. instead of 3s. 6d. From the point of quality the show was a big success and some lovely exhibits were staged. Nor. were poor in number but competition was keen, and Messrs. Tristem, Sampson, and Giblett put down birds which deserved more extended and stronger competition. Mr. Tristem's bird which won the Brooks challenge cup, was indeed a topper, and was staged to the minute. Yorks. always are good at Bristol, and this occasion proved no exception to the rule; several of the exhibits seemed to be feeling the effects of the keen wind which prevailed outside. Messrs. Radley, Dykes, and Snead sent down some splendid birds from the North, but the Western fanciers held their own well, and made them gallop all the way. The much coveted Bristol challenge bowl was won by a charming yellow shown by Mr. Greenslade in a close race with Mr. Dykes' exhibit. Britishers were wonderful, and we heard several old show hands say they had never seen such beautiful exhibits. The winning Bunting was a stormer, and led a good variety lot. In this class Mr. House left out a Hawfinch on the ground that it had had its bib trimmed.

Bristol management is always good, and this is in great measure due to the continuity of service for many years on the part of the executive. Mr. G. T. H. Maggs has ripe experience as secretary, and nothing is wanting in his department. The stewards were Mr. J. A. Greenslade (supt.), Mrs. Tristem, and Messrs. H. R. Giblett, H. S. Water, G. Hiscox, F. Sampson, I. A. Davis, and F. J. Yorke. Mr. C. A. House judged

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.A.

Seventh annual show, Nov. 18, Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross. The day was extremely cold, and the task of the judges was thereby rendered difficult, but the work was got over early. Judges were Messrs. McLay, Kirkintilloch, Nor.; Hamilton, Hamilton, Yorks, and Bord.; Taylor, Shettleston, Mules, Brit. and For. The ever-obliging sec. (Mr. Proudfoot) is second to none at running a show, and is as popular to-day as when the Society was founded. The Committee are of the tried and trusty material, Messrs. Mitchell, Lunn, Young, Reid, Gillespie, Robertson, Sellar, with Messrs. Hendry and Henderson as auditors.

HOW BRITISH BIRDS CHANGE THEIR PLUMAGE.

We are indebted to Mr. H. F. Witherby, the Editor of "British Birds," for permission to extract from an exhaustive article entitled: "THE MOULTS OF THE BRITISH PASSERES, WITH NOTES ON THE SEQUENCE OF THEIR PLUMAGE," which is appearing in the magazine, the portions which refer to such birds as are generally kept in cages or aviaries. Readers are referred to the magazine mentioned for the complete account.

MOULTS.

TREE-PIPIT AND MEADOW-PIPIT (page 321, June 10) correction.—Examination of further material shows that in the moult from the Juvenile to First winter the median and inner greater wing-coverts and three innermost secondaries are, at all events sometimes, moulted, and this may be the rule, although in the large series I previously examined none were moulting these parts. The central pair of tail-feathers are also occasionally moulted.

FAMILY CERTHIIDÆ.

The members of this family, belonging to two distinct genera, differ in their moults, in that the adult Tree-Creeper has but one moult in autumn, while the Wall-Creeper moults the body-feathers also in spring.

BRITISH TREE-CREEPER (Certhia f. brittanica).

ADULTS.—Complete moult from August to October. No moult in spring, and abrasion has no noticeable effect. There is no sexual difference. JUVENILE.—Like the adults, but the upper-parts with larger pale centres to the feathers, giving it a more spotted appearance. The under-parts are duller and not so silvery as the adult. FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile body-feathers, wing-coverts and innermost secondaries are moulted from August to October, but not the primary-coverts, tail-feathers, nor the rest of the wing-feathers. After this moult the bird is like the adult.

FAMILY SITTIDÆ.

BRITISH NUTHATCH (Sitta e. britannica).

ADULTS.—Complete moult in August. No moult in spring. Abrasion causes the buff of the under-parts to become a little paler. The female has the chestnut of the flanks rather paler than the male, otherwise the sexes are alike. JUVENILE.—Closely resembles the adult, but the upper-parts are duller and tinged with brownish, the stripe through the lores and eye is brown-black rather than black, and the flanks and under tail-coverts are paler and duller, not bright chestnut as in the adult. FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile body-feathers and lesser and median wing-coverts are moulted in July or August, but not the greater wing-coverts, primary-coverts, nor the tail or wing-feathers. After this moult the birds become like the adults.

FAMILY PARIDÆ.

The adults of this family all have a complete autumn moult, and no moult in spring. The effect of abrasion is not very marked, but the differences between fresh and worn plumage, though small, are distinct.

The difference in the sexes of the adults are well marked in Regulus (the Crested Wrens) and Panurus (the Bearded Tit). In Ægithalos (Long-tailed Tits) the sexes are alike, and in Parus I can find no sexual difference in the plumage of P. palustris (Marsh Tit), only very slight differences in P. ater (Coal Tit), P. cæruleus (Blue Tit), and P. cristatus (Crested Tit), and rather more marked ones in P. major (Great Tit).

The juveniles are very distinct from the adults in Regulus, Ægithalos and Panurus, but not so much so in Parus, though in all the species (except perhaps in Parus atricapillus) they have easily seen differences.

The moult from the juvenile to the first winter plumage in Parus and Regulus is usually confined to the body-feathers and wing-coverts, but extends to the innermost secondaries in some species of Parus and in P. major and P. cæruleus the central tail-feathers are also involved. In Ægithalos and Panurus the moult is complete.

The first winter plumage is usually like the adults, but in Parus major and P. cæruleus small differences are noticeable.

As I have already dealt in detail with the plumages of most of the British species of Parus and of Ægithalos, I need not detail them again.

BRITISH AND CONTINENTAL GOLDCRESTS (Regulus r. anglorum and R. r. regulus).

ADULTS.—Complete moult in August or September. No moult in spring.* There is very little change by abrasion. The sexes are alike except that in the female the centre of the crown is all lemon-yellow instead of the hind-part being burnished orange as in the male. JUVENILE.—The chief difference in the juvenile is that it has no yellow or gold and scarcely any black on the crown, which is greyish-brown tinged green and mottled with black, especially on the sides, where there are black lines in the adult. The rest of the upper-parts are browner than in the adult. The sexes are alike. FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile body-feathers, median and lesser wing-coverts are moulted in July to September, but not the rest of the wing-coverts nor the tail or wing-feathers. After this moult the birds become like the adults.

FIRE-CREST (Regulus i. ignicapillus).

The moults and differences in the adults are the same as in the Goldcrest. The juvenile is very similar to that of the Goldcrest, but has the lores and upper-part of the ear-coverts blackish, the mantle, scapulars and rump rather more green and the innermost secondaries without whitish tips.

BEARDED TITMOUSE (Panurus b. biarmicus).

ADULTS.—Complete moult in autumn. No moult in spring and practically no change by abrasion. The adult female lacks the black moustachial stripes of the male, though the feathers in this region are somewhat elongated, the crown of the female is yellowish-brown, often streaked with brownish-black instead of being grey as in the male, the mantle of the female is paler and less tawny, and usually has some dark streaks, the under tail-coverts are buff instead of black, besides other smaller differences.

JUVENILE.—The mantle and back are black, and the rest of the upper-parts, as well as the under-parts, are paler and buffer than in the adult female, the central tail-feathers are pale buff, and the rest largely black instead of tawny, the lesser coverts are pale buff instead of grey, and the wing-feathers have not nearly such bright edgings as in the adult. The first (bastard) primary is much broader and longer than in the adult. The sexes appear to be alike.

FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile plumage is completely moulted, including the wings and tail, in autumn, and after this the birds resemble the adults.

*In the Scottish Naturalist, 1914, p. 247, the Misses L. J. Rintoul and E. V. Baxter state that they have examined three spring specimens "with new feathers coming on throat and crop." I have also seen a few examples in March and April with a feather or two growing here and there, but this is not unusual with many species which have no regular moult.

Breeding and Rearing Hybrids.

By F. GREEN (Hemel Hempstead).

A Canary Hen is generally used for the purposes of hatching the eggs from Hybrid breeding pairs, and in this article the treatment of the Canary while she is hatching the eggs and the proper method of rearing the young Hybrids are both explained.

TO continue my experience in Hybrid breeding as given in my letter on page 559 of the September 23rd issue of CAGE BIRDS, I would point out that every Hybrid breeder should have some common pairs of Canaries for foster parents. They are best kept in the open shed with the Hybrid pairs, for they are then exposed more to weather conditions, and do not come into breeding condition so soon as Canaries that are kept in warmer rooms. They seldom come into condition before May, and should not be forced in any way, for this will be just the proper time for the Finches.

Make sure which are good feeders before trusting them with the rearing of the Hybrids, and if possible keep the cock with the hen, as young Hybrids are hungry mortals, and never seem satisfied. For this reason two feeders are better than one.

How to Manage the Eggs.

Having got the Canaries nesting and ready to take the eggs from the Hybrid pairs, it will sometimes be necessary to cast aside a whole clutch of Canaries' eggs to take four or five from the Hybrid pairs. Hen Bullies will lay seven or eight, and sometimes more in one clutch of eggs, and these should all have incubation for at least seven days to prove if they are fertile.

But where possible it is a good plan to keep one or two Canary eggs, that are more likely to be fertile, in the nest with three or four Hybrid eggs, as most likely there would only be one fertile egg among those from the Hybrid pairs, and by hatching a Canary or two the young Hybrid would have a better chance of being reared than if it were alone in the nest.

After the hen Canary has been sitting for about seven days the eggs can be tested. If fertile, return them to the nest. If unfertile, destroy them, and take the nest pan away from the Canary for about a week. By that time she will be ready to go to nest again, and ready to take more Hybrid eggs.

Should the eggs prove fertile, on the ninth day hang on a bath, and if the hen will take the bath give one every day until the young are hatched.

Should the hen not bathe, on the tenth and eleventh days put a little piece of green food in the wires of the cage to entice the hen off the nest. Then go very gently to the cage, take out the nest pan, and drop a few drops of warm water on to the lining of the nest. Some prefer dipping the eggs in warm water, but I prefer the other method, as the eggs keep damp for some little time; as Hybrid eggs are very hard shelled, and the young Hybrids weaker than other young, that is a great help to assist the hatching.

As soon as the nest pan is back in the cage again, take away the green food, and the Canary will soon settle down on the eggs again. At about the twelfth day the pair of Canaries should have a little egg food—yolk of hard-boiled egg and Osborne biscuit. The eggs often go on to the fourteenth day before hatching, but sometimes the young will be hatched on the night of the twelfth, and it is better to be prepared.

When the Young Ones Arrive.

Do not give the birds too much hard seed to feed with for the first three days. After that time I give a good mixture of most seeds that are on the market for Finches, including crushed sunflower if the Canaries will feed with it. For greenfood I prefer seeding dandelions, groundsel, and shepherd's purse, but I have not much faith in chickweed, so I only use that very sparingly.

When the young can feed themselves, continue the egg food; also crush the hemp and sunflower until they are ten weeks old. They are then able to crack the hemp themselves; but the sunflower is better crushed until they are over the first moult. Give them the mixed seed, and put the birds into a large cage or flight which will give them plenty of room to exercise.

Do not colour feed for the first year. I have found the following a very good mixture for colour-feeding: — One breakfast cup of bread crumbs or crushed biscuit, one hard boiled egg, two teaspoonfuls of cold pepper, and one teaspoonful of sugar. When the birds are nearly through the moult add one teaspoonful of linseed meal, which helps to put a gloss on the plumage, and do not forget to give a good supply of sunflower at all times; the birds will then be in good condition.

The chief things in the proper keeping of all cage birds are regular feeding, cleanliness, and a bath regularly. Study the habits of the birds in their wild state, so they can be treated as nearly as possible to it in cage life; the birds will then repay you for all trouble taken with them. Others may have different methods than those stated above; this is only my own experience with the birds, and if it has been of any help to fellow fanciers I shall be pleased. I myself like reading in the columns of CAGE BIRDS the experience of others with their birds, and this is my reason for giving my own.

Facing Your Second Season.

By the Rev. C. J. NORRIS, Llanishen.

Some sound advice to the beginner in Canary Breeding, showing how chance success with one pair of birds does not necessarily mean similar success with a large stud unless proper means are taken.

"ONESIPHORUS" is a Yorkshire cock, as buff as buff can be, and with a song as mellifluous as his name. He kindles the eye of a friend of mine, and his loneliness moved the heart of his bachelor schoolmistress owner. Could I get him a mate? I enlisted the sympathies of my ministerial colleague, the Rev. C. B. Jolliffe, through whose preaching I became a fancier, and got a hen lithe and long and yellow.

My friend broke all the canons of Canary breeding and succeeded! Ye shades of the menus in the Canary-breeders manuals! A glance inside of the cage during the feeding of the young would have made Messrs. St. John and House scratch their heads, and feel as though their insides were being stirred with a soup spoon. But there remain unto this day eleven vigorous young Yorkshires, the progeny of Onesiphorus. Next season my friend is going to sweep the show bench. Perhaps!

The truth is that the second season in Canary breeding is like the second round of golf. In the first round, knowing nothing of the game, you hit the ball with your cricketer's stroke, and your soul is lifted to the seventh heaven as the little white sphere whistles through the air. You go home convinced that you are a born golfer. You buy a whole armoury of clubs, and read Braid on "Advanced Golf."

You go to your second round, take the described swing, and —— nearly fling yourself into space, while the dimples on your motionless ball seem to broaden into grins at the figure you are presenting to the angels. I want to give my friend, and others facing their second season, "Punch's" advice—"Don't"! In fact a number of them.

Easy Does It.

Don't start out with the idea that ten birds will take up no more of your time than two. So far as the daily attention before the breeding season is concerned, the difference will be almost negligible. But if you are going to keep the cages as clean as they ought to be, time must be found. If your time is limited, instead of buying ten birds, spend the same money on five; two cocks and three hens, or, better still, three real "toppers," and the colour of their coats will not surpass the brightness of your face next show season. He that has too many irons in the fire generally burns his fingers, and he that has more birds than he can properly care for loses his song.

Neither must any man think that because he did well with one cock and two hens he is bound to do proportionately well with four cocks and eight hens. The truth is that you perilously enlarge the scope for individual partiality by the ratio of your increase.

Every Adam would marry the Eve he protests against in the crowd if she were the only one. It is the variety of choice and opportunity that baffles natural instinct. Sentimental Tommy told Grizzel that it is easy enough to make up your mind when you only have one, but he had so many.

Now that is not exactly the trouble with your Norwich Tommy. It is rather getting his mind to harmonise with yours. Last year I had paired up in my mind—such a delightfully easy process—a fine variegated buff cock to two quite queenly clear yellow hens. As a wise match-maker I stealthily observed all the rules of the game. He saw no other hen, and only one of those at a time. They called and courtesied to him most charmingly in turn. But when in course of time he was put in with them he met their advances by the most abominable behaviour, and despite the fact that he was singing fit to burst they each presented me in turn with unfertile eggs.

Disgusted, I at last took him away in the middle of May, and threw him in with a little housemaid of a crossbred green hen. He married the slut on sight, and I have three cocks of the brood singing to-day. I got one Norwich out of him for the whole season! He was never happy away from that shameless piece of green fluff, and from my best yellow Norwich hen I got ne'er a chick.

Of course the champions may be able to obviate such intrigues, but I am writing for the man facing his second season, and to him I say don't keep more than twenty-five per cent. more hens than cocks.

The Importance of Elbow Room.

And, further, do not neglect to provide cage-room for the young fliers. No man would start house-keeping in two rooms if he thought his wife would present him with triplets every spring. Not merely because the music would be too confined, but because he would foresee a vast mortality, and for himself an early moult.

Be wise, and have as many double-breeders, clean, and garnished, and empty, as those in occupation. Yes, even though you begin with half the number of birds intended. Better spend half your money on cages for live young than all of it upon birds that will hatch and rear for the scavenger.

Two qualities that make for success in breeding are repose of mind and quietness of manner. The man who, through lack of foresight, is preparing for seasons of tearing his hair is not going to give to the bird-room the quietness which commands success. Build your full cages in the air, dream your dreams my fellow fancier, but be sure you build your empty cages for the shelves as well. You so stand to make the dreams of to-day the facts of to-morrow.

Finally, don't neglect to read what the successful men have to say, and begin early to make an index of things in your CAGE BIRDS that you will want in a time of crisis.

Alleged Rough Treatment at Bacup.

The Allegation Refuted.

SIR,—As secretary of the Bacup Roller Canary Society, may I be allowed to say in reply to Mr. R. Vernon, that no cage was broken at our recent contest, and if he received his cages in the condition stated we are not to blame. It would have been better if Mr. Vernon had made enquiries before rushing into print.

Heavily Variegated Borders.

A Guaranteed Class at Edinburgh.

SIR.—Admirers of the heavily variegated Border Fancy, will be pleased to see that the Border Fancy Club Committee have agreed to let this class remain as last year at this forthcoming show in Edinburgh at the New Year. I am guaranteeing this class, and trust that exhibitors will send as large an entry as possible, so as to encourage other societies to give a class for this handsome and very useful bird, which has up to the present been sadly neglected, both in the shows and in the breeder's room. When properly mated they are the birds to balance up a marked strain, and more good marks can be bred for them than most fanciers are aware of. If once we can get show committees to put on classes this variety will become a popular favourite, and their value will be understood.

Border Fancy Show Cages.

A Plea for Uniformity.

SIR,—In visiting a prominent show, held under the patronage of the Border Fancy C.C., I heard some comments on the styles of cages, and on investigation I found there was certainly good grounds for complaint as the following will show. Cages were anything from 10½ to 14 inches long, and from 4½ to 6 inches broad, some of them big enough for a Scotch fancy. The heights depended on the circle that was adopted for the top. Some had fancy bent rails; and a few straight, and they were either laced with wire or soldered; a few have adopted punched bar. Some had doors of the latest invention, and the holes at drinkers were round, square, oval, oblong. The seed boxes were of the finest art designs; but they were all glossed over with a safety coat of black. As all the other specialist clubs have a standard cage, why not the Border Fancy C.C.? I hope to hear the views of some more lovers of the "wee gem."

DISTINCT MARKS.

The Judge Changes the Question.

SIR,—Messrs. Stubbs Bros. have described the Port Talbot incident very fairly indeed, both as regards my action, and the state of the bird's feathers. I cannot, however, agree with their statement that all who saw the bird agreed that it was in its right class. The bird was shown as a marked bird, I considered it was not such, and so marked it "wrong class." Therefore the question asked should be: What is a marked bird?

The bird in question has no solid marking. It is grizzled, and lightly grizzled, the dark colour is on the top of the feathers, and does not extend into the shafts. There is no solid marking anywhere on its body, eyes, wings, or tail. How such a bird can be marked I fail to see.

As to Messrs. Stubbs' challenge I cannot accept it. To do so would be to acknowledge that I may have been wrong, and have not the needful ability for the task I performed at Port Talbot. It is close on forty years since I first exhibited a Norwich, so I ought to know what constitutes both a marked and a ticked bird.

More than that, it would be undignified on my part to consent to my judgment being submitted to the decision of some other judge not so experienced as myself. There is no judge to-day who has had so many years experience as judge and journalist as myself. Therefore who is the man who shall decide whether my judgment is right or wrong?

Coming to the personal aspect of the case I may say that it grieved me quite as much as it grieved the owners to see such a handsome bird in the wrong class. If by my action I have done Messrs. Stubbs an injustice I deeply regret it, but I feel confident my action was right, and as it was my duty to act as I did I cannot accept their challenge.

Catalogues at Cardiff.

Why the Supply Failed.

SIR,—Please allow me through your valuable paper to apologise to the exhibitors who were disappointed in not receiving marked catalogues on the Thursday morning. Through our printer breaking down we did not receive the marked catalogues until the show closed on the Thursday night, just as we were starting to pack up the birds. We only had a limited number of unmarked catalogues on the second day of the show, and as we had a record attendance on both days, and visitors were clamouring for catalogues, it means that we lost about £7 through not being able to supply them. I have received a few post cards from exhibitors complaining that though they had received their birds home in grand condition they had not received the catalogue. I deeply regret the disappointment, and trust the exhibitors will accept the explanation. Every case of birds was in the hands of the railway company in good time, as I took care to send off all long distance birds by a special delivery.

Proposed Society for Barking.

Why Not Help the Old One?

SIR,—Having noticed in CAGE BIRDS that Mr. F. C. Howard and Mr. Collard want a society started in Barking, I think that a good many of your readers in Barking are not aware that there is a society within a mile or two from Barking, that has been established for the past six years. I would suggest that this would hardly be the time to start a fresh society seeing how the old-standing ones are being depleted through a number of members joining the forces. Those who wish to start a society should rather join the nearest one, and then when we get into more settled times float a society nearer home.

I am quite willing to receive new members and give them all the information they require as regards joining, and they will be among fanciers who would only be too glad to give them a hint or two. We have five cups and a rose bowl for competition, and Sir John Bethell, our president, has just given another silver cup for the British section. Our headquarters are at the East Ham Town Hall, within easy distance from Barking, and we have already members from that locality.

Specials at Larkhall 1915 Show

Possibly a Clerical Error.

SIR.—Whatever may have been the object of Mr. Thomson, late secretary of Larkhall how, in writing the letter which appeared in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 25, instead of writing directly to me in answer to my letters at the proper time I do not know. He has, however, given publicity to a subject that is none the worse for an airing, that specials at shows are a source of worry and trouble to secretaries. No one knows better than I do, but in this case Mr. Thomson is asking for the trouble. He informs me (for the first time) that all the Yorkshire specials have been paid out, and admits that there may have been a mistake which could have been avoided, if special winners had asked for their specials. I agree with him, that this is not the time to trouble about last year's specials, and I had no intention of saying any more about it, had he not taken this step; but when he paid the prize money I thought it was the right time, and in acknowledging receipt of same I mentioned that I had won special No. 43. I got no answer, so again in February I reminded him by letter, and got no reply.

The facts of the case are as follows: I showed a fairly strong team of Yorkshires at Larkhall, and gained a fair share of the prize cards, including an official special card, No. 43 (the cage label was also marked special). If Mr. Thomson looks over his books he will see whether anyone else won that special. I am still in possession of the special card (which can be produced). I have no desire to have the special paid to me; all I ask is that the mistake be made as public as this letter of his has been, and if Mr. Thomson lets me know through your valuable paper that he has handed the special over to the new secretary, I will forward a like amount to be added to their funds this year.

I thank Mr. Thomson for so kindly stating that I am an exhibitor of some standing, and while asking him where my action was like that of a beginner I would suggest that his mode of settling matters up is a very good way of making "a beginner" into "a finisher," which might have been the case had he been dealing with a recruit.

J. F. PARK.

The Training of the Roller Canary.

A Believer in Humane Methods.

SIR,—I read with great pleasure and interest the excellent article by Mr. Gutierrez in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 25th. To my mind his system of caging, isolating, and darkening his birds in training is the most healthy and humane that has appeared in your pages. The training of the Roller Canary in the usual and orthodox way, by shutting up in a tiny cage, and enclosing in a close dark box for the greater part of the day for weeks and months on end, is, really, to speak plainly, nothing short of cruelty; it is absolutely contrary to the nature and liking of the bird, and in no way calculated to benefit its health.

This training business I have always felt to be the one drawback to the otherwise most interesting hobby of breeding and rearing the Roller Canary, and my dislike to the system had led me, like Mr. Gutierrez, to think out and adopt a plan that at least gives the birds more scope for exercise, and an abundance of fresh air at all times.

I, too, adopt the curtain principle for darkening, but only in the early stage of the training. I run all the young together in large flights from the time of leaving the parents, and as soon as the young cocks begin to shape their song at all I commence to darken them by hanging a curtain before the cages; first a light one, and as time goes on I darken still more, until the twittering becomes a bit subdued, and at the same time begins to round up. From this early stage I arrange it so that they hear only a good tutor sing, and they are kept in these flights together until they have well got over the moult.

At this stage I find it is necessary to cage them off singly, and it is here I cannot quite see with Mr. Gutierrez's system, as I cannot see how he can give each individual bird its proper treatment. I find some require much more darkening down than others; in fact, each one seems to require special and individual treatment, and I am reluctantly compelled to put them into shutter cages.

I do not use song boxes, or the usual small song cages, but good roomy ones with shutter fronts, more than double the size of the ones in general use, and so constructed that they are easy to clean out, well ventilated, and except for the necessary darkening they make comfortable homes for the birds. The shutters are always kept open as much as possible short of allowing too much loud song, and offenders can always be stopped immediately when you are present. I find a sprig of plantain seed (rats tail) will busy them a long time, and keep them off song. The shutters are open all night, and the dark window blind being down they can be left till quite late in the morning, and hardly any singing will take place.

I await the next article from some humanely disposed fancier, giving us still further hints for improving this darkest side of the Roller fancy.

HENRY NEVE.

The Goldfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid at Clapham Show.

SIR,—About June 20, I wrote you re the breeding and rearing of a Hybrid between a cock Goldfinch and hen Chaffinch. This bird I moulted successfully, but unfortunately for me it turned out a hen, and of course it has no blaze like you would expect to see in a male Hybrid of this cross. I showed this bird at the recent Clapham show in the A.O.V. Hybrid class between two British birds, and when I entered it I pointed out to the secretary (Mr. Hose) that I did not expect the bird would do much good in a class with cocks, only I wanted people to see the bird, and prove that I had bred the cross I claimed through CAGE BIRDS to have bred.

I asked Mr. Hose to let Mr. Allen Silver or Mr. Norman know the bird was there if they were at the show on either day, because Mr. Silver had written me to know the bird's colour and markings in baby plumage. There were only three birds in the class, and on getting a catalogue I was surprised to see my bird had not got even a card in a class of three. Being the most rare Hybrid in the Show, if only a hen, surely she deserved a card in such a class. The first bird only in the class got a card, the other two were left out. In the report of the show in CAGE BIRDS nothing was said about the Goldfinch-Chaffinch hen Hybrid, and as nothing appeared during another week or two, I thought I would write to Mr. Hose, the secretary, and his letter I enclose, also the one I got from Mr. Robson, the judge.

What I want to do now is to prove that this bird is a genuine Goldfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid hen, and shall be delighted to send her up to you for your experts or anyone else to see. I am a member of the National British Bird and Mule Club, and perhaps they might allow me to send the bird up for inspection at one of their meetings, the same as in Mr. Anderson's case. I can bet my life on this bird being what I claim it to be and nothing else. How can a hen Chaffinch lay an egg, and sit and hatch a young hen Chaffinch if she had never even seen a cock Chaffinch for the three years I have had her?

My aviary is 13 feet long, 6 feet 6 inches high in front, and 6 feet high at back, and 6 feet wide; all the roof is covered in, and all round the flight part of the aviary I have got a false aviary to keep cats right away from even seeing the birds, and up and all over the false aviary and roof I have trained blackberries to keep the birds from seeing cats or anything else. When you go down my garden to the aviary all you can see till you get right down by it appears like one very large bush. In this aviary last summer, besides the hen Chaffinch, I had two hen Bullies, one cock Linnet, one cock Greenie, and the Goldfinch cock. The Chaffinch had six nests of eggs in all, but this was the only egg fertile in the lot.

THOMAS W. WREN.

[The letter from Mr. Hose points out that the judge had power to "withhold any prize where he is of opinion that the exhibit does not merit reward," and the letter from Mr. Robson is as follows:—

"After carefully examining this bird I was unable to make it anything but a poor specimen of a hen Chaffinch, not a Hybrid. I failed to trace the slightest sign of a Goldfinch cross in it. I am afraid you will never get any recognised Hybrid judge to accept the bird as a Hybrid. Myself, I have not the slightest doubt that it is not a Hybrid, which is the reason I did not award it a prize at the said show."]

The Fancy and War Bread.

Another View of the Matter.

SIR,—The views expressed by your esteemed correspondent, the Rev. C. B. Jolliffe, in last issue, were rather a surprise to me. I had certainly thought of the effect our war bread may possibly have in the rearing of young Canaries, but the whole drift of such considerations was to the end that the young birds, and fanciers also, incidentally, would benefit thereby.

I was possibly overlooking the fact of the "white bread" theory of digestibility, etc., hence my momentary surprise that anyone could fear the result of using war bread in place of white, or biscuit for young bird rearing. Personally, I am convinced that fanciers have not the slightest cause for fear, and that the only effect of the change will be a beneficial one.

I have for years pointed to the value of this bread—or, as I have previously termed it, wholemeal—for use in place of white bread, as will be seen in the pages of "Our Canaries," and other places of much older date. As regards the way the birds take the change I shall be much surprised if it is not accepted and carried on.

A friend writing me recently, not a bird fancier, or even a bird keeper, but just a lay observant-person who habitually feeds the wild birds—remarked inter alia: "It is curious to note how the wild birds invariably and eagerly pick out all the wholemeal bread before eating the white." The wild birds evidently know a good thing, and so, I think, will our Canaries.

Bran Makes Egg Shells.

SIR,—Whilst appreciating the good spirit in which the Rev. C. B. Jolliffe has written on the above subject, as his warning is no doubt well meant, yet if the rev. gentleman will forgive me for being a bit blunt, I must say that I think him a bit over cautious and pessimistic. In my humble opinion the community need have no fear in accepting the new flour. I for one rather welcome the change, as I think our food in general has been faked up too much.

As regards the birds shelling all their seeds does not the threshing machine shell the wheat and leave the kernel, exactly the same as the birds do their seed? Surely he has overlooked the fact. Why do poultry men include so much bran in the feeding ration? I am told that it supplies the lime with which the birds shell their eggs, and when used regularly soft shelled eggs are conspicuous by their absence, and egg binding is reduced considerably.

This being so, the new flour should be a blessing rather than a curse to the Canary fancier. I send these few remarks for what they are worth, and hope that they will be received in a right spirit, as I do not pose as an authority on the subject, but hope that some better educated reader of CAGE BIRDS will either confirm my thoughts, or prove that I am wrong.

Between Two Stools.

The Necessity for Plain English in Classifications.

SIR,—I was much pleased with the interesting account of the Alario-Greenfinch hybrid, in last issue, but I am wondering now whether your editorial note was an oversight. Granting that it is implied that a class for A.O. hybrid admits only hybrids between British birds, does it not follow that a class for Foreign Hybrids also admits only hybrids between two foreign birds, in which case this hybrid would not be eligible as you suggest for such a class? Being a hybrid between a Foreign and British specimen the fortunate owner appears to me to be between two stools, and eligible for neither class. The only chance would seem to be in a class for A.O.V., where such is found nowadays, or A.V. not classified.

CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

[In writing the footnote referred to by our esteemed correspondent, we had in mind such a class as was provided at the last important show in London, that at the Holborn Hall in February last. In the schedule for this show was a class headed "Foreign Bird Hybrids (any bird having one parent a foreign bird eligible.)" Among the entries in this class were a Green Singing Finch-Linnet Hybrid, which was awarded 2nd prize, and a Green Singing Finch-Canary Hybrid, and the Alario-Greenfinch Hybrid would have clearly been eligible for competition. Of course if a class were headed simply "Foreign Hybrids" the quibble might arise, as the judge might consider it to mean that both parents had to be foreign.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

Fresh Fields for Fanciers.

Budgerigars as Talkers.

SIR,—I was very interested in the letter by Mr. A. R. Coe in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 25th, relating to singing and talking Budgerigars. I have kept Budgerigars, both green and yellow, for the last two and a half years, and have made a great study of them, especially in training them to talk; my experience is that of the two varieties the green is the best, the yellows seem to be a little more timid. I have hand-reared three within the last eighteen months, two green and one yellow, and at the present time I have two cock birds, a green, and a yellow.

The green Budgerigar was mentioned in CAGE BIRDS of May 20th last, when about eight months old. He is a very fine talker now, quite as good as any Parrot. He will say the following sentences: "Pretty boy, John," "How do you do?" "Open the door for John," "Piece of bread and butter," "Good-night, mother," "John is lovely," "Dear little John," "Hurry up," "Good-night John," "Hello! Charlie," "Hello! boy," "Oh, he is a pretty bird," "Sweet pretty little Dick," and many other sentences. The reason of the last-named sentence is that he is in a cage next to a Canary in the living room, and has heard us say that sentence to the Canary. He will start off into a warble exactly like the Canary song; will also whistle you just as a person does to attract your attention; in fact, when I have been in another room I have often thought it was someone whistling me. He comes out of the cage, and flies on to my shoulder, will come and eat a piece of bread and butter from my hand when at breakfast, and is perfectly tame.

With regard to the yellow Budgerigar, I find he picks up many sentences from the green one, so if you can manage to train one to talk he will act as schoolmaster for the others; at least, that is my experience, but they must be hand-reared and taken from the nest when about a fortnight old to teach to talk, and kept in the room where you live, so that they get accustomed to you. Handle them as much as possible, to get them perfectly tame.

I have been a regular reader of your valuable paper for 2½ years, and have derived much valuable information concerning the above birds from its pages. I have written the above few lines in the hope that it may enlighten some of your readers about the Budgerigar as a talking bird.

I have read in Mr. C. P. Arthur's book on Budgerigars that Mr. Wiener says Budgerigars have no talent for learning to talk, but this is not correct, as my experience proves in possessing two talkers at the present time, and also one which I reared for a lady in Norwich, which is also a fine talker.

If any of your readers doubt the ability of Budgerigars to talk, I should be most happy to show them my birds at any time.

How to Catch Bullfinches.

By Stoker F. W. STONE, R.N.

A Reader, who is now after bigger game, tells how he caught and kept Bullfinches in peaceful days.

AS a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS since its first issue, I should like to say a little about my favourite British Finch, the Bullfinch. Almost every reader of CAGE BIRDS knows the colour of this handsome species, so there is no need to describe it, but there are hundreds of fanciers who have never seen it in its wild state.

It is seldom anyone could make a mistake in knowing the Bullie even when on flight. Flying fairly low, it utters its call note all the time Also the patch of white on its rump betrays it, but one could be led astray this way if not certain as to its flight, as the Bramblefinch also has a white rump.

The Bullfinch is a shy bird in its freedom, and yet it is a fairly easy bird to catch, providing no one has been trying to catch them, and made them scared for the time. A trap-cage, side net, lime, or self-acting spring net will serve, but I prefer the side net or the trap cage. The side net I use is about 9 ft. long, 4ft. wide.

The Place, Time, and Method.

During the months of October to February Bullfinches feed on blackberries and other berries, dock seed, ash-keys, and other wild seeds which grow along the hedgerow, and a low hedge near a copse is a likely place to catch them. I have caught hundreds of Bullfinches by the method I will describe.

Firstly, procure two good cock call birds and one hen; secondly, a side net 9ft. by 4ft., and a catching outfit. In war time one needs to economise, so a carrying box and store cage can be made out of a shallow box about 18in. by 9in. by 6in. Knock off one side and top, stretch canvas over the top, and tack down; now wire the front, or, better still, fit a punch bar front with door.

The morning is the time for catching Bullies, so we start off as soon as light, making our way for a low lying hedgerow near a copse. If any are heard, select a spot, and set the nets quickly. Place some docks in the net in three patches, and place them so that the tops are about 8 inches off the ground, and they look natural. Put one cock call bird in the centre of net under the patch of bait, and then place a cock about 5ft. from the net, and the hen on the other side of the net at the same distance, i.e., the call birds should be in a line with each other. Attach the pull line, and wait results.

If the call birds are good, you can depend on netting the whole flight of wild ones, perhaps 5, 10, or more. I have netted two dozen from one feeding place in three pulls, most of which were cocks. The main point is, don't pull if you get all in but one; wait till all are in; very often something has disturbed a nice net-full while waiting for a couple more perched on the hedge near by. But the call birds started piping away, and then in the net the lot would go, and soon they were mine, so you see all that is required is patience.

The trap cage is a very good method of catching Bullfinches, providing it is a large roomy one. Bait it with docks, and a few small bunches of privet; use a good cock call bird, and success is certain.

How to Keep Freshly-caught Birds.

Fresh-caught Bullies should be kept very quiet in the store cage. My method of getting on seed is as follows:—First, place plenty of dock seed in the cage, and privet berries if any are about. Have one dish of soaked hemp, another dry hemp, and one soaked Canary, Niger, and Maw in equal parts. Diminish the soaked seed after the third day, and increase the supply of hard seed; also reduce the proportion of hemp by one half, and increase the Canary seed. I have seldom had a bird die by this management, and I have proved it on hundreds of Bullies.

The next thing is to know a good bird if you have one. Select a bold stoutly-built bird with a well-cut bib, the back of a clean slate colour, quite free from smoky appearance, bars well defined, and wing carriage good. If a bird has these qualities it will make a show specimen after moulting out.

The best cage for Bullie is a box pattern, 18in by 8in, by 10in, but I consider Bullfinches are better moulted outdoors in an aviary where you can give plenty of wild food; there is nothing to come up to it for moulting out a good rich colour. Blackberries and privet berries are nature's colour food, so as many as can be got may be given the birds.

Hens for Hybrid breeding should be young, large, and of good colour and if bought now they will be quite steady by spring. I wish success to every Hybrid breeder, and "Long live CAGE BIRDS."

Club Reports.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held Dec. 1, North of England Cafe, Station Street; Mr. J. Farrar presided. Business relating to members' show was gone into. Decided that entries close Dec. 20, and that we pay five shillings per class prize-money; stewards to be chosen by show manager (Mr. Farrar). Decided that the thanks of the meeting be sent to Mr. Hall, of Leeds, for his kindly donation to the show funds. —P. Riseborough, Asst.-Sec.

PONTYPOOL C.B.S.

Meeting, Dec. 2, at headquarters, Mr. J. Watkins presiding. Messrs. R. Smith and W. Amphlett were appointed to arrange for staging for open show, and G. Waters and R. Smith as judges' stewards. The following specials were placed: 5s. in class 8 and for most entries, and 2s. 6d. each in classes 1, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 21, 22, 23, 27, 29, 30, 33. Sec. was instructed to have 500 tickets printed. Decided that members of H.M. Forces be admitted free. Next meeting, Dec. 30. W. D. Lewis, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting, Shield's Cafe, Bigg Market, Nov. 22, Mr. Wm. Mather chair, and a very good attendance. Schedule for annual show was adopted as read. After business there was a judging competition. Result:—Champ.: 1, 2, Crawhall; 3, Mather. Unflig.: 1, 3, 4, vhc, Comber; 2, Crawhall; hc, Mather. Nov. Yell.: 1, 2, Studholme; 3, G. Shields. Buff: 1, Shields; 2, 3, Studholme and Son. Unflig.: 1, 3, Studholme and Son; 3, Shields; 4, Marmion. Decided to hold next meeting, Dec. 13. Table show. 3 classes champions, 3 novice.—R. Havis, Sec.

NEWCASTLE (East End) C.B.S.

Meeting, Nov. 29, Blue Bell Hotel, Shield Road, Mr. G. MacParthing chair, and a good attendance. Sec. submitted a statement giving particulars as to recent show. £24 1s. 7d. was paid to members who exhibited, and the full expenses were £32 18s. 1d. The meeting considered the statement satisfactory, and gave a vote of thanks to the officials, stewards, and other members who gave a helping hand at the show. Two special prizes left over, which had been received after other specials were put into the schedule. It was agreed that the silver medal be given to the member who had the least points at the show, the other, a trinket set, to be drawn for at next meeting, Jan. 31. There will be no meeting in December.—Ed. Coltman, Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Postponed meeting, Nov. 25, 42, Cowcross Street, E.C. Mr. F. Harrison presided over a good attendance. Mr. F. C. Knight was elected a member. There was a discussion over the diplomas and it was proposed that there should be at least 12 entries in each section, champion, amateur, and novice, and British birds, and six in Mules and Hybrids. Members were glad to have the pleasure of seeing our esteemed and hard-working member, F. Harrison, elected as chairman, and to distribute the prizes and specials for the late autumn show. Owing to having been called to the Colours some time back, he was only paying the society a flying visit. A hearty vote of thanks to Pte. F. Harrison, wishing him the best of luck during the time he is serving the Colours, brought an enjoyable evening to a close.—W. Gilbert.

MANCHESTER (Amalgamated) CLUB SHOW.

Radius Extended and Judge Elected.

Meeting of delegates Dec. 3. Proposed to extend radius to 20 miles, and to hold the show in Manchester this time, on a convenient date early in the New Year so as not to clash with others. Caxton Hall was mentioned. Mr. A. G. Davies, Manchester, was selected to judge after a very keen vote with others. Societies represented were Stockport, Radcliffe, Rochdale Good Intent, Oldham, and Openshaw Gorton. Next meeting Dec. 17 at 3, Homing Society Club, 32, Victoria Street, Manchester. Business: Classification report over room, guarantee, etc. Others wishing to join in must send representatives to this meeting or will be too late.—A. W. Newton, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW AND WEST COUNTIES

Meeting Dec. 2, Mr. Wm. Dinwoodie presided over a good attendance. New members admitted: Messrs. D. Blair (Govan), T. McMillan (Dennistoun), J. Patrick, J. Letham (Partick), J. Algie, R. Spence (Whitewich). Six members took part in the washing competition for prizes presented by Messrs. Anderson, Findlay, Pettigrew, and Adam. Mr. D. Dinwoodie judged, 1, J. Findlay; 2, R. Steel; 3, A. Whitelaw; 4, W. Hamilton; also ran, W. Robb and W. Brown. Schedules for annual show Jan. 27 were distributed, also show posters and admission tickets for sale. At next meeting Mr. J. H. Adam will read a paper on Canary Management. Specials for annual show will be booked at next meeting, so a bumper attendance is desired. A good number of specials have already come to hand, notably from Messrs. Wright (Newcastle), Crauna (Auchterarder), Munro (Glasgow), and many others. Remember, 77 classes require "some" specials. Next meeting Jan. 6, 122, Ingram Street, 7.—J. H. Adam, Hon. Sec.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, headquarters, Seven Stars, St. John Street, Wolverhampton, Nov. 30, Mr. Willows chair, before a good attendance. It is very gratifying considering the busy times, that throughout the year the average attendance has been about 25. The first item on the agenda was the presentation of M.R.C.C. challenge cup, won by Mr. Harper for the second time in succession by scoring 1st prize each year in champion young bird classes. Balance-sheet of show, Nov. 9 and 10, being read, showed a profit of £11 7s. 10d., and was greeted with great satisfaction. Being the end of the financial year, balance-sheet of the year was read, showing a neb profit of £19; total cash in treasurer's hands, £28 12s. 1½d. A printed balance-sheet will be sent in due course to all members. December meeting abandoned owing to being so close to Christmas holidays. I have had many applications for new members for 1917, and I shall be pleased to communicate with Roller fanciers wishing to join. The fees are 2s. 6d. per annum, 1s. entry fee, 1s. payable in advance. The society has no radius.—J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec., 9, Gorsebrook Road, Wolverhampton.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

At the last meeting a Norwich judging competition took place. There was a good muster of members and a fine array of birds. In the absence of Mr. A. Howard, Mr. F. J. Martin acted as final judge and critic. The winners were Messrs. Robertson, Wingate, and King. Next meeting a judging competition in Yorkshires takes place.—F. J. Martin, Sec.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

The Bell Glucke Tour.

Meeting, Dec. 2, Griffin Hotel, Mr. F. Heaton chair, before a good attendance. Sec. read a paper from one of our most eminent judges on "Bell Glucke as it should be sung," after which the meeting was open for discussion of same. Various opinions were expressed, but all agreed that it is high time something was done to try and get all judges into the same way of thinking, as the way we are going now leads to nowhere, because we don't find two judges alike in their ideas of the different tours. However, we have great hopes that under Federation rules and control the different tours will be understood on the same basis, and it will be impossible to give points for any new tours without the full consent of the Fancy as a whole. A vote of thanks was given to our friend for his able letter, and we think that if this could be thrashed out in a friendly way in CAGE BIRDS (with the Editor's permission), it would be of great interest to the Fancy.—H. Best, Sec.

THE FEDERATION OF ROLLER CANARY CLUBS.

ITS OBJECTS AND ITS RULES.

By H. BEST (Leeds).

In writing these few lines I want to clear the air in respect to what was done at the meeting of Roller Clubs held at Leeds on Nov. 4. I may say I have received letters lately in reference to the part played by members of the Provincial Roller C.C., and should like at once to set their minds at rest by saying that nothing could have been farrer than the way they met us. With reference to what there has been so much talk about, the calling of the first meeting at Manchester, they were the first to agree that they had made a mistake, and they were ready at once to throw their rings into the pool in February if the British Roller C.C. would agree. There appears to have been a feeling in the Fancy that the offer was not genuine, but I think by this time all will agree that business only was meant. As secretary of the Leeds club I was instructed to write all the Roller clubs to see if a meeting could not be called to get delegates of all the clubs together to discuss ways and means whereby we could lay down hard and fast rules to be adhered to by all clubs; one thing in particular being to see if we could bring about means whereby there would be only one acknowledged ring in the Fancy. Another very important point was that every club should have a say in the management of the Fancy. By this I mean song standard, which some thought was going to be altered straight away. Far from this being the case, it was proposed that no song standard shall be altered without the full approval of all the clubs, and then only by giving six months' notice of same, as it was thought to be unfair to breeders to make drastic alterations at once.

Another important point was that all show dates can be arranged between the different clubs, and after a date has been fixed no club will be allowed to alter their own without the sanction of the Federation as a whole. This will prevent clashing of dates. I sent out invitations to all Roller clubs in the Kingdom, with the exception of the Scottish National, but it was agreed that Mr. Montague and myself should watch their interests, and I have since received a letter to say they are with us all the way.

I have been asked a great many times what rules the Leeds club intended to bring forward, but the only answer I could give in fairness to the other clubs was that it was not for the Leeds club to dictate rules, but merely to submit them, to be agreed on by all the delegates. This they did, and out of them the following rules were accepted.

The Federation shall be named the National Federation of British Roller Canary Clubs, and shall be composed of any number of clubs in the British Isles.

The headquarters shall be at or such place as shall be decided on from time to time at the annual delegate meeting.

The business of the Federation shall be transacted by a Control Board, such board to consist of a President or Presidents, Secretary, and Treasurer; the Committee to be formed of the Secretaries of the different Roller clubs, thereby helping to keep in touch with all the members of the clubs. The officers to retire annually, but to be eligible for office on re-election.

It shall be the duty of the Control Board, through the Secretary, to issue all rings and deal with special prizes. It shall also make, rescind, or amend any rule, subject to the clubs' approval, and shall decide time and place for the next annual meeting.

It shall be the duty of the Control Board to regulate the standard of song, and in no case shall any club alter the standard without the full authority of the Control Board, which shall be given at the annual meeting. Any suggested alteration of song standard to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Board six months prior to the annual meeting, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Board to send out copies of any proposed alterations to all the clubs of the Federation, to be discussed, so that each club can instruct its delegate to vote on the question as to whether an alteration shall be made or not.

These are broadly the rules submitted by the Leeds Club and accepted by the other clubs of the Federation, which include the following as represented at the Conference:—Bolton, Messrs. Kilsham and Massey; Provincial, Wareing and Smith; Wigan, Greenall and Unsworth; Leeds, Best and Montague; Audley, Tomlinson, 2 votes; Walkden, Hibbert, 2 votes, and the Scottish Club, represented by the Leeds delegates. As Secretary of the new Fed. I shall be pleased to give any information possible in respect to same.—H. Best, Secretary, 5, Alma Place, Beckett Street, Leeds.

Members' Shows.

NOTE.—Secretaries will greatly facilitate the work of ourselves and our printers if they will kindly endeavour to send their reports as nearly as possible as they see these accounts printed, and if they will also write the names of exhibitors as distinctly as possible.

CLAY CROSS C.B.S.

Members' show, Nov. 18, Angel Hotel, owing to the inclement weather we had a poor entry; only 35 birds were staged, but some nice birds were shown, some of them having been out in the open. Mr. Turner, a new member, showed a grand unflighted buff cock, which won special best bird in show, and will be heard of again. W. Evans won specials for best yell. old birds, getting on a bit in years, still a nice Norwich; best Novice Yell, A. Evans, a new member; J. Lanckham, sp. in Yorks. section; Novice Yorks, spl, Taylor. POPLAR C.BS.

Annual show, Nov. 18, All Hallows Hall, Dunkfield Street. 140 birds were staged, and some very keen competition took place amongst both the champion and Novice Norwich, the exhibits in these classes being by far the best ever on view at Poplar. Yorkshires, though not so numerous, were of good type and quality, while British and Mules were well up to the mark. The President and Vice-President of the society paid a visit to the show, their presence being much appreciated by all present. Much praise is due to Poplar's hard-working secretary, who, with an enthusiastic committee, did everything possible to make the show a great success. A good list of specials (29 in number) was provided. Mr. J. Robson judged.

BOSCOMBE F.A.

Fifth Annual Show, Curzon Hall, Bournemouth, Nov. 18, with a splendid entry of over 180, the number was a record, and quality was the best ever seen in Boscombe. Norwich were of the highest order, but Yorks. were somewhat disappointing. Britishers were very nice, and are coming on by degrees. Mules and Hybrids were good, Mr. R. W. G. Parsons' Goldie-Bullie being a picture. Messrs. E. E. Hutchins, H. Burgum, C. Marsh (Sergt.), A. E. East, W. R. Basten, P. Sullivan, R. W. G. Parsons, G. Hinves, A. Marsh, were an admirable working committee. The show management, under the direction of Mr. E. T. Hames, Sec., was all that could be desired. Mr. W. G. Fellows judged and gave satisfaction.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Annual show Dec. 2, in the St. Phillip's Mission Room. All birds were 1916 bred, and were a really choice collection. Yorkshire as usual at this fixture were the feature, and gems were put down by Messrs. T. Ridal (chairman of the society), G. Drabble, and Pickering and Fretwell. Norwich we liked, although not over numerous. Outstanding were the mkd. yell. cock and var. yell. hen (G. H. Gill). Mr. H. C. Maynard also benched good ones. Amongst the novices Messrs. H. T. Williams, A. Goodison, and A. Bagshaw staged some beauties. Special best Yorks., special hottest fed, Ridal, a very fine cl. yell.; best Nor., Gill, a very choice, well fed, mkd. yell. cock; Mr. H. C. Maynard also won special with a nice buff Nor. hen. Cup winners, Yorks., T. Ridal; Nov. Yorks., H. T. Williams; Nov. Nor., G. H. Gill. Staging was neatly executed. Stewards, Messrs. Drabble and Gill, worked enthusiastically. Mr. E. Gisson acted as sec. (in the unavoidable absence of Mr. C. Tomlinson) in fine style. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged.

HASTINGS AND ST. LEONARDS.

Eighteenth annual show, Nov. 22, at 25, Wellington Square (by kind permission of the President, Mr. F. Slack); some 90 exhibits were staged. This is very satisfactory in view that more than half the breeders in this district have given up birds during the war. The show was opened by Miss Kirk Bullock, who has worked hard for the Society in past years, and placed it upon a sound foundation. Although compelled to give up the secretarial work, she has kindly retained the post of hon. treasurer. Votes of thanks were given to Mr. and Mrs. Slack, who have given every assistance in providing accommodation for meetings and shows, thereby saving the Society much expense. The judges were Messrs. Ellis and Stevens, to whom the members are very grateful; it is fortunate that the Society has two such capable and experienced members to undertake this important task. Their awards were well received. Cups and trophy winners: Champ. Yorks. cup, Veness; Nor., Pennell's; Kirk Bullock trophy, Nov. Yorks. cup and Nov. Nor. cup, Mrs. Slack (a record); For. Bird cup, Mrs. Kirk Bullock; Hybrid cup and trophy, Howick, with his famous Canary-Bullie. Mr. Howick having won this cup and trophy three times in succession, it becomes his property. The Society will shortly have to draw from its funds to replace some cups, having lost four "pieces of silver" in two years.

Champ. Yorks. Ck.: 1, 2, Veness; 3, Walker; vhc, hc, c, Wraight. Hens: 1, 2, Veness; 3, vhc, Wraight. Unflig. Yorks.: 1 hc, Walker; 2, vhc, Veness; 3, c, Wraight. Nor. GUERNSEY.

Show, Nov. 28 and 29, New Market Halls. The Fancy has not been supported as it should have been in the past, but lovers of cage birds are now rallying together, and there is every reason to believe that the time is not distant when the Fancy will be a strong section of the club. The birds were staged in a cosy corner of the hall. The Bailiff of the Island, Mr. E. E. Ozanne, presented the special prizes on the second evening of the show, and made a few congratulatory remarks to exhibitors. Messrs. Green and Varnham judged, and gave satisfaction.

Nor. (8): 1, Renouf, yell. ck., beautiful type, nice head, splendid feather and well cut away, grand col. and cond.; 2, Le Page, good yell. ck., good col., but bit narrow in head, and loses in type; 3, Beasley, buff hen, good Bullfinch type, nice head and col. Yorks Ck. (7): 1, 2, West; 1st, fine type and pos., well up on leg, nice shoulder, nicely braced wings, good tail, a smart one; 2nd, good one, nice head and shoulders, wings and tail, fails in pos. and style to winner; 3, Collenette, nice head and shoulders, well fixed back, good wings and tail. Any Variety Hen (7): 1, 2, 3, West, beautiful type, best of back, fine length and pos, well up on leg, nicely tapered and drawn, put down in fine style; 2nd, good head and shoulders, nice wings and tail; 3rd, nice type and pos., well up on leg, runs 2nd very close. Mules (3): 1, West, Goldf. Mule, good col., easy win; 2, 3, Renouf, Linnet Mule, nicely pencilled, and variegd. Goldf. Mule, might have been placed 2nd. Goldf. (6): 1, 2, West, big one, good skull, blaze, moons and buttons, under tanning could be better; 2nd, nice blaze, good moons and buttons, best of breast tanning; 3, Wright, nice head, moons and buttons, not so tight in feather. A.O.V. (10): 1, Le Goubey, fine Song Thrush, without a fault, well staged; 2, Le Feuvre, Parrakeet, in the pink, hard luck for 1st place; 3, Beasley, Bullfinch, splendid cond. and plumage, though hard to select from those other specimens in the class, bit lucky to get third.—F. W. Bichard.

NOTTINGHAM (Permanent) O.S.

Annual show club-room, Grapes Inn, Nov. 25. Entries came up poorly; a little more advertising would be cash well spent. The birds were all splendidly staged, and all could be seen at a glance, Messrs. W. Vardy, Reynolds, Hayter and Benn, Barker, etc., having splendid teams on view. The committee are a hard-working band. President, Mr. G. Reynolds; vice-president, Mr. R. Holmes; treas., Mr. J. Wood; committee, Messrs. W. Housley, Langham, J. Bowers, E. Fox, J. Beers, J. Goode, and T. Hayter. Mr. W. Harris judged, and gave general satisfaction.

HAYLE.

The Hayle F.A. held its fifth annual exhibition in the Parochial Hall on Feast Monday, Nov. 27. The hall is a grand one, being well lighted and close to the station. The show proved a great success both in quality and numbers, and there was a good attendance. The unflighted Norwich class was very strong, and competition very keen, the winner being a buff of grand type and quality. In Yorks. some grand birds were staged, the winner in the unflighted class is a typical buff cock, standing like a guardsman. The British section was unusually strong, the birds being very forward and competition very keen, especially in the two Yellowhammer classes provided this year. The Yellowhammer is coming to the front in Cornwall as elsewhere, and societies will do well to cater for this popular species. The birds were splendidly staged, and could be well seen. Mr. Ware carried out the secretarial duties in his usual painstaking way, and he was well assisted by a good working committee of fanciers. Mr. W. G. Tickell (Bodmin) judged, and his awards were well received.

WEST OF SCOTLAND C.B.A.

The above Society held its annual show Nov. 25, in the National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow, where many a stiff battle has taken place in bygone days. This Association is in a very healthy condition, and is conducted by many of the leading fanciers in the West. Hon. Pres., Ex-Provost Paton; Vices, Messrs. W. Gunion and G. Smart; Hon. Sec., the well known and much respected W. Hutchison, who also carries out the duties of the District Open Show with considerable success. The judges were Messrs. J. Young, P. Houston, D. Hamilton, and H. Jamieson. Quality was here as well as numbers, and the Society has not had a more successful turn out for a long time. Some "red hot 'uns" must have given the judges trouble to decide on. Still the work was carried out in good time, and very satisfactorily, as little adverse comment was heard. Not long after the gates were opened visitors began to gather, and towards evening the hall was crowded to such an extent that it was difficult to get near the favourites at all. Special winners: Crest Cup, Tweedie; Plainhead Cup, Hutchison, won three times, now his own property; Border Cup, B.F.C.C. medal, best young bird, A. Craig; Yorks, best young bird, J. F. Park; best Amat., H. Jordan; Mule Cup and Norwich Green Trophy, J. Renwick; British Cup, Crawford.

RUNCORN.

Annual Members' Show, Nov. 18, Primitive School, Greenway Road, with a fine entry of nearly 140. This in war time must be counted as splendid for a society with depleted ranks, through members having to join up. The Hon. Sec., Mr. Faulkner is quite new to the job, but he carried out all the arrangements with a master hand. Mr. Luxton gave valuable assistance. A very good list of special prizes was secured, and there was keen competition for them. Yorks. were especially good, and very high-class birds did the winning. Nor. were of very good merit, and made a fine display. Crests and Crested birds were of high merit, and a lovely dark crest of immense size won special for best bird in the show. Mr. C. Houlton judged.

CANARY QUERIES

A SEASON'S FAILURE.

Troubled.—I am not quite clear whether you mean that the two birds you mated were brother and sister. If this is so, they were not at all suitable mates, although this in itself would not account for the clear eggs in all the nests. This might have been caused by a great variety of causes—the weather, the condition of one or both birds, the manner of matings, etc. It would certainly be worth while trying both birds again next year, but I would strongly advise you to get a strong lusty, 1916-bred cock, in good song, to mate with the hen, and a vigorous young hen, 1916-bred, for preference, as a mate for the cock. The fresh birds may come from the same strain, but should not be very closely related. Aim at getting the birds in a healthy, vigorous condition, and do not mate up before the end of March at earliest, or the beginning of April if the weather is unfavourable at the earlier date, and I see no reason why they should not breed successfully. They might even do so if mated to each other the same as before, though the change of mates as suggested would increase the chances, and if the birds are really brother and sister they certainly should not be mated together again.

FOOT TROUBLE.

A. L. C.—Treat as follows, which is the best you can do in the circumstances. Catch the bird and wash the foot quite clean in lukewarm water to remove all dirt and any pus that may be about the sore. Dry carefully, and then hold the foot in a little peroxide of hydrogen, which you will have ready in a saucer, until the liquid ceases foaming. Then wipe dry again, and paint the foot with a mixture of equal parts collodion and salicylic acid using a small camel-hair brush to paint with. Hold the bird a few moments whilst it dries and then paint over a second time. At the end of a week wash the foot with a solution of common soda to remove the paint, and if the foot seems fairly well anoint it once daily for a few days with boracic ointment to complete the cure. But if it still seems to be suppurating repeat the same treatment as before and continue to do so once a week as long as necessary.

"SOME" QUERY.

Puzzled.—I am afraid your query is quite too broad and general for full justice to be done to it. (1) Personally, I opine that if one takes up Canary breeding with the special object of crushing Germany's trade in Canaries, the best breed to start with for that particular object would be the breed which the Germans themselves specialised in—that is, the trained Roller for singing purposes. Of course, I am well aware that others are more in favour of breeding fancy breeds, and in particular the Norwich and Yorkshire. But whatever breed is taken up it goes without saying that the more home trade that is supplied by home produce, and the more export trade that is captured, the less there will be for the Germans to fall back upon in times of peace, whatever breeds may be supplied to fill the present need. But one may take it for granted that there will always be a good demand for songsters pure and simple, and if this is not supplied by one country it will be supplied by another. In this, as any other business matter, a constant demand must, and will, create a supply. The best breed is so much a matter of personal taste that each one is wisest to choose on these lines. (2) It is impossible to select any one breed and say that it pays the best to breed it. Different specimens in the same breed vary enormously in profitcacy, and a vast amount also depends upon the breeder himself. Every breed we have could certainly show either extremely profitable returns or a balance sheet with the figures all on the wrong side, according to birds and owner. As a songster the pure Roller is, judging by its great increase in popularity, certainly in as much demand as any, but it is difficult to say which breed is really in greatest demand. Of fancy breeds Norwich, Yorkshire, and Border Fancy, in the order named, I should say are in greatest demand. (3) Here again the influence of the breeder, personally, prevents me saying what price should be given for stock birds to enable the young from them to be sold wholesale at a certain price. But you should be able to realise your price with stock judiciously bought at about 30/- to 40/- each for cocks, and about 5/- each for hens in the case of Rollers, and something like 30/- to 40/- per pair for fancy breeds. This is allowing you some margin for lack of skill in mating and training. (4) Rollers are not colour-fed, and in breeding little attention, as a rule, is given to colour or markings. But one should as far as possible adhere to the fundamental principle of mating yellow to buff, even if no other attention is paid to colour or markings.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); Ronse's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

MATING CINNAMONS.

W. Everett.—(1) Yes, in breeding Cinnamons you should have both sexes of a cinnamon colour, and bred from cinnamon colour, but it is not absolutely essential that both birds should always be self-coloured so long as what colour they have is cinnamon and the birds are bred from Cinnamons. It is, for instance, quite possible to utilise with advantage in the breeding of pure Cinnamons what are termed "broken or foul Cinnamons," which are specimens in which the cinnamon colour is broken up more or less by light colour, either yellow or buff, and they are often used to correct or tone down some fault or secure some special object. All these technical points and objects of special matings you would find fully explained in the part XI. of "Our Canaries," which deals with the Cinnamon. I would not, however, advise you to begin dabbling in these bye-ways, so to speak of Cinnamon breeding until you have had some experience in breeding them in the orthodox way—self to self, and yellow to buff. (2) The progeny you would get from a yellow self Cinnamon cock and a buff self green hen would depend entirely upon whether there was any Cinnamon blood in the green hen. If there was not then you would get self and variegated Cinnamons and green and green marked, and all the birds showing cinnamon colour would be hens.

SIT PUFFED OUT.

Falkirk.—You ought to have said how the birds are fed, as possibly, being in a cold room, the diet may need varying to suit these conditions. First of all see that the room is free from direct draughts, damp and sudden changes of temperature. Give a staple diet of three parts, by measure, of canary to one part summer rape. In addition to this give about half a teaspoonful of egg food, or any substitute you may use, twice a week, and on two other days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats, and on each of the remaining days give a morsel of banana, boiled or raw carrot, or sweet apple, giving preference to them in the order named. As regards the treatment of the two birds, see they are kept in a cosy part of the room, as they may, perhaps, be susceptible to cold. Every second day give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre. Continue this for a fortnight if necessary.

AN IDIOSYNCRASY.

W. T. H., Dowlais.—As you say the bird has quite recovered from the chill you say it had, and is now in such good song, I do not think there can be much more the matter. (1) Sitting flat on its stomach may be symptomatic of nothing worse than a desire to take life easily. See that the perches are of a proper size and shape—just such thickness that the bird cannot quite encircle them with its claws when it grips them, and a round perch with the top surface trimmed off to an oval shape, and also see that they fit securely and do not wobble about when the bird stands on them. You might also see if the claws are overgrown so as to make it uncomfortable for the bird to stand or hop about the perches. Having seen to these points, give in the water for three consecutive days ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. (2) Sleeping against the front of the cage next the wires is probably nothing more than an idiosyncrasy, or possibly from the position of its cage it feels the heat rays from a fire or gas jet in that position, or has some such inducement to roost in that position. There is no harm in it doing so, but if you wish to prevent it throw a light cover over the cage for a few hours after roost time.

THE PINK EYE.

A. Scott.—(1) The appearance of two pink-eyed young in each brood of young from both your hens is very strong circumstantial evidence that the clear buff cock you purchased had cinnamon blood in his veins even if he did not show it in his plumage. If you had looked at his eyes carefully with the light reflected at a certain angle, you would doubtless find that he too was pink-eyed, which would be conclusive evidence of the cinnamon blood, and if your own birds are quite free from this blood the pink-eyed young will be hens. (2) Cinnamon blood is now so widely dispersed in the Yorkshires that pink-eyed birds among them cannot be described as of more value than the dark-eyed, except in so far as they may show better type and quality generally. (3) Yes, decidedly; if you are aiming at breeding light or variegated Mules, these birds would be better for the purpose than the dark-eyed specimens.

CAUSE OF DEATH.

E. J. P.—Certainly, I do not think it is in the least degree possible for anyone, by simply examining the dead body of a bird externally and scalping it, to know whether septic fever was the cause of death, and should be inclined to give the post-mortem report far greater weight. It would be quite possible for a perfectly healthy bird that was susceptible to this disease to become infected and die in the space of a week, so that if the birds were exposed to infection after purchase, such as being put into a cage in which any other bird had been kept whilst suffering from the disease, even though some time had elapsed, there would be quite sufficient time for it to become infected and die in turn from the disease. The fact that none of your stock have shown any signs of illness leaves no doubt in my mind that you have no cause to worry on their behalf. It would take up too much space to go into any useful details about the disease in this column; therefore I would advise you to get the brochure on "Septic Fever," by Dr. R. H. Clarke, which our manager would send you for 7d., post free.

YORKSHIRE NOT SINGING.

W. B. B.—I take it you are satisfied that the bird is a cock, though you say nothing about that point. The apparent good health and condition, coupled with the silence, might be rather ominous unless you were quite sure to the contrary. If it is a cock the following treatment should help to bring it out. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape only. In addition give separately every third day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternating days give first a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, and next a morsel of either banana, boiled or raw carrot, or sweet apple. In the drinking water add ten drops of lemon juice and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week. The Budgerigar is a very unsuitable companion for it to have in the same cage. It may succeed for a time, but even if they agree and do not fight you may one day find the Canary with a broken leg, or something of that kind, due to a little joke of the Budgerigar.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

FRESHLY CAUGHT BULLFINCHES.

Novice A. B.—As a rule, freshly caught Bullfinches are not difficult to get on to seed, and the fact of your being able to keep two of yours proves that you are able to do it. In your next venture follow the same method, giving both seed and water inside the cage, which keep in a nice quiet corner of the birdroom, where there is sufficient light for them to see to feed, and put in with them one of your steady birds that is already on seed. Some Finches when first caught are extremely nervous and refuse to feed, but will generally do so if they see a companion feeding. Any that show signs of not doing well after being caged a reasonable time should be given their liberty before they become too weak. When they once make a start, give soaked rape and teazle daily for a time, or the sudden change to hard, dry seed may prove too much for their digestive organs. An occasional aperient is useful after they have been caged a week or two, as they are inclined to eat rather more than is good for them of the good things provided.

FINCHES TOO STRONG.

Reader.—I am under the impression that your treatment is at fault. In the first place a warm kitchen is not the best place to keep birds in, they would do better in an outside building if free from damp and draughts, but I do not think a shelter by day and a warm kitchen at night would be any improvement. If you must keep them in the kitchen, hang the cages as low as possible, especially at night, when the gas is alight. I also fear your feeding is not quite correct. Goldfinches and Linnets require different treatment. Your best plan would be to send to this office for the two Nutshell booklets on these birds, No. 1 and No. 2, post free 2½d. each; you will then see how each bird should be fed and managed.

TRYING FOR GOLDFINCH-BULLFINCH HYBRIDS.

E. Townsend.—If I were in your place I should give up the flight to the most likely pair, taking particular notice of the health and behaviour of the hen Bullie. The exercise that a pair would take in the flight would help considerably to keep them fit, and unless they are so, it is almost useless to expect success. Possibly your Finches are kept a shade too warm and fed a little too well. Reduce the supply of hemp, give more sunflower and teazle, and be liberal with greenfood or fruit. As a rule it is better to keep the birds apart during the winter, excepting for an occasional fly together to get properly introduced. Some Hybrid breeders use two compartment cages during the winter, having a wire partition, so that each bird can see its intended partner, and still be fed as it should be. When they are put together in the spring, the better feeding does not as a rule have any injurious effect, as breeding requires good living.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2, "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4, "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Care Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

WHEN NOT IN SONG.

Rippman Winkle.—The Song Thrush ceases to sing when he goes into moult, which is generally in August, and he is heard again as soon as he recovers, about the end of October. One can only give this as a general rule, for individuals differ, some sing very little while breeding, the cares of the family taking up most of their time. You have omitted to send us your name and address, which according to our rules should have been enclosed with your query. Perhaps you will forward these on a postcard.

A BALD BLACKBIRD.

T. Forshaw.—As your bird has been bald so long I wonder you have not written before. The earlier these matters are attended to the easier they are to cure. The fact of one of your birds doing well on the same food shows that he is the more robust of the two. The treatment I would advise for this particular bird is to first give him an aperient of Glauber Salts, as much as will cover a shilling, dissolved in three tablespoonsful of water, to which add six drops of Syrup of Rhubarb. Let him have this to drink for one day only, and repeat three days later, giving half the quantity of salts. Add an extra quantity of carrot to his food, and give a good slice of apple daily; squeeze a few drops of fresh lemon juice in his drinking water. If you can handle the bird gently rub the bare place with a mixture of paraffin and vaseline, only just smear—and do it about three times a week.

SAMPLES OF SEED.

Annan.—I have carefully examined the two samples of seed sent. The teazle is fine, bold seed, and to all appearance good, but when examined through a powerful lens it shows here and there traces of having been attacked by insects; these seeds would of course be useless. Those not attacked are full and plump, and there is no reason against your using it. This is a very difficult seed to get absolutely without blemish on account of the difficulty in harvesting it. The sample of rape is a good one, bold and sweet. I notice it has a few grains of inga in with it, which I presume were there by mistake.

CHAFFINCH OFF SONG, ETC.

E. B. B.—I must congratulate you upon keeping your bird to such a good age as 14 years; it is considerably beyond the average. I am sorry you did not give me your mode of feeding, it would have helped us in advising you, and of course it would be especially interesting to know considering that the bird has lived so long on it. Not having this, all I can suggest is a little soaked seeds, soft food and insects, mealworms you could possibly obtain, if no others. Give him two or three daily, not more. Of course it is rather soon after the moult yet to expect much song. (2) The treatment of Gnat Tits was answered quite recently, and was the subject of a short article. They should have a fairly large cage, as they are active birds, and a good brand of insectile mixture as staple food. They will also eat sunflower, hemp, poppy or maw seed. Nuts of all kinds, a little fruit, and occasionally hang on the bars of the cage a piece of suet or other hard fat. (3) Keep the freshly-caught Robin quiet, and give best quality insectile mixture and a liberal supply of mealworms or other insects; put these on the soft food, so that, in getting them he will possibly partake of the mixture. You must watch him closely and if he does not feed, continue the supply of mealworms or give him his liberty. (4) Young cock Chaffinches show the ruddy breast colour at the first moult; this increases in brilliancy, and is at its best in the spring and early summer.

FEEDING A GREENFINCH.

Greenfinch.—You should get our Nutshell Booklet on the Greenfinch, post free 2½d. While waiting for it feed as follows: Stock mixture, canary two parts, rape and teazle, 1 part of each, a little hemp and linseed occasionally, and half a dozen sunflower seeds daily. Greenfood free from frost should be offered whenever procurable. Do not put it with the Canaries until it has settled down

BREEDING SOFTBILL HYBRIDS.

R. Ramsey.—You are proposing, I fear, a very difficult task. It would no doubt be very interesting to get these crosses, but it could only be managed by one who could give every attention to the birds and supply them with unlimited natural food, and in addition to this one would require to have their share of good luck. In the first place Softbills are kept in confinement under conditions that are rather more unnatural than the seed-eating Finches, consequently they seldom get so "rank," and therefore not so keen to pair, even with their own species. Then if you manage to get them to nest and lay, they would have to incubate and rear their own young, for which they would require unlimited supplies of live food, of which live ants' eggs would be the major portion, especially in the early stages. If you could supply all these, and have a good-sized aviary to spare, with the necessary seclusion, there is no harm in trying, and your experiences would certainly be interesting. (2) Hen Robins have been known to hatch and rear young Nightingales in the open. (3) As regards your cross with the larger birds, you would possibly have a greater chance of success under suitable conditions, as these would probably use a certain amount of the ordinary soft food in rearing the young.

LINNET REFUSING SEED.

E. L. S.—You appear to be treating your bird all right, and no doubt if you persevere you will in time get him on to seed. I would suggest sprinkling a little dry seed on the top of the soaked, and also giving a little crushed hemp and gradually increase the dry seeds as you see he takes them. I have no doubt he is a young bird that has been used to the sprouting seeds of the fields. Give six drops of syrup of buckthorn in the drinking water, let him have two or three good drinks, and then remove it and repeat two days later.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

ABOUT MELBA FINCHES.

Melba.—(1) The hen bird has very little red on the face, and her under parts are only tinged with the bright colours of the male. (2) I consider the best course is to bring the Melba Finch indoors from Nov. 1 to April 30; a roomy cage will suffice for them, and any ordinary sitting room amply warm enough. They have been wintered out of doors, but it is rather taking a risk, the danger arising from wet, sunless periods rather than from clear frosty weather. If the aviary has a good, dry, light shelter, and your locality is not a northern one, then there should be a good prospect of them safely passing the winter therein. There have been attempts on the part of many pairs of Melbas to rear young in this country, mostly falling just short of complete success. I only know of one brood being fully reared in this country. (3) Mealworms are not really necessary when not breeding, as in a garden aviary they ought to catch many odd flies, etc., for themselves, but, failing this, an occasional mealworm or spider, etc., will be beneficial to them. Millet, canary seed, and spray millet should suffice for them, but I always keep a small tin of wild seeds in my aviary, or include some in the mixture for such as care to to help themselves at will. (4) I have found them inoffensive, but I know of one pair, at any rate, which would not allow a pair of Parrot Finches any peace, and they had to be removed from the aviary.

NOT INCREASING ITS VOCABULARY.

H. McKnight.—As it has made a start and speaks two words, there is every probability that it will increase. There is great variability in individual birds; some, like humans, are never loquacious, and others just the reverse. It has been my experience that the best talkers mostly pick up their own words, phrases, and calls from what they hear around them, therefore one of the best places to keep them in is the general living room. However, especially with a backward bird, it is well to use all methods, and the constant repetition one should not be neglected, and this is best put into operation when the bird is in quiet and restful mood. It is also good practice to talk quietly to it while you are attending to it, both when cleaning and feeding. Even if your bird does not develop into a great talker, it should pick up many additional words, etc., to what it utters now; there is no royal road, the main factors to success are kindness, patience, and perseverance. Wherever the bird is kept it must get light and air without draught.

WHAT SPECIES?

H. W. B.—I have looked through the B.M. catalogue, as well as comparing your additional information, and have reached the conclusion that you must have two cock Guiana Lovebirds ("Psittacula guianensis"). I have no doubt your birds are of that species; if not I cannot at present place them. Guiana Lorebirds are seedeaters, and the diet you are supplying will suffice for their simple needs. They should, however, get continuous supplies of cuttlebone, grit and water. They will appreciate seeding and flowering grass when in season, and doubtless would take a little sweet apple at the present time, and the latter would be a good substitute for greenfood.

INDIAN PARROTS AS TALKERS.

Jaxon.—(1, 2). Yes, both the Rock and Ringneck Parrakeets talk; all have the gift, but some do not use it, however. With either species, if you get hold of young birds, keep them in some light and airy, but not draughty, position in the general living room, where there will be plenty for them to see and hear. In time they should talk, at any rate to some extent. In their quiet, restful moments you could also teach them by the constant repetition method. (3) They need a seed mixture, ripe fruit, with continuous supplies of grit, cuttlebone, and water. A chunk of wood should be continuously in the cage for them to exercise their mandibles upon. They can have such extras as dry ernats, biscuit, nuts in variety, shelled and unshelled, and a little plain cake. A good seed mixture may be made up as follows: Two parts each (by measure) oats, canary and white millet seeds, one part each hemp, sunflower, safflower and paddy rice; well mix, store in some dust-tight receptacle, and keep in a dry place. They are both hardy species when they have once got over the effects of importation, but they must not be subjected to draught.

SHOWING BUDGERIGARS.

Esperance.—I am pleased to hear of your success in your first attempt at exhibiting your birds, and hope your success will continue. In most old birds the feet are covered with projecting horny scales and the backs are also mostly rough and coarse. A good Green Budgerigar should be of good size, fine, tight, silky plumage, clean markings, and carry itself well, also be slender and shapely. A bird that is "past its primo" is usually lacking in some of these conditions. I am inclined to advise you to begin next season with only one pair in the aviary, as there is so much combativeness among your birds. Retain the pair that have been most attentive to the husks, then, after they have started nesting and have their first brood out of the nest, introduce another pair if you are so inclined. You could have a pair of good ones ready caged for the purpose, acquiring them in the spring as opportunity affords. If you put a reasonable price on either your Yellows or Greens, having them marked up tame in show catalogue, they would probably sell for 30s. to 50s. in the show, especially if they carry off the honours. A really good winning pair of Greens have sold again and again at shows in fairly recent times for 30s. to 40s. or more, but such prices are not always obtainable, apart from shows. Though many will pay good prices for finger-tame birds. Yes, I should sell the Green hen as soon as she is fit enough.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

THRUSH-BLACKBIRD HYBRIDS.

T. H., and others.—We have finished with the argument, and, while thanking you for your appreciative letters, we think that no good purpose will be served by continuing the discussion. The judge you mention was quite within his rights in judging the bird of 1915 as it appeared before him, and if he could not see any trace of the Blackbird cross he was fully justified in "passing" the exhibit. On the other hand, those judges who accepted the bird as being a hybrid were equally justified in their decision. Our own experts, who had the bird under close observation during two days, agreed that the Blackbird parentage was apparent, but this again was only a matter of opinion, and can only be taken for what it is worth. It is not by any means the first case of a difference of opinion between judges, and we expect it will not be the last. One side is wrong, of course, for both cannot be right.

NAMES OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

R. Ferguson.—"Tiger Finch" is simply one of the names of the Avadavat. It is possible that the advertiser in question has some other kind of bird which he calls a Tiger Finch, as Avadavats are mentioned separately in his advertisement, but if this is so he is in error, for Tiger Finch and Avadavat are one and the same bird.

A COMPLAINT.

A. Grant, Aberdeen.—If your friend will give us full particulars, accompanied with his name and address, and a fee in accordance with our rules, we shall be pleased to investigate the matter, but we really fail to see what good we should do in publishing a letter saying that a prominent bird dealer, unnamed, dealt unfairly with a friend of yours, also unnamed, especially when you send your address simply as "Aberdeen."

BOOKS ARE STAR SHELLS

Our Handbooks Help Novice and Expert Alike.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS. By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.—An exceptionally helpful, intensely practical and instructive handbook for beginners and tyros at Canary Breeding. It contains 116 pages 7in. by 5in., and is profusely illustrated and contains innumerable hints helpful to all young bird-keepers. In this book the reader is instructed how to pair up the stock birds, how to cage and feed them, how to test the eggs, what to do when the young birds are hatched and so on until the birds are old enough to be put on the show bench. It is interesting from cover to cover, and is by far the best 6d. handbook on the subject ever published. Price 6d., post free 7d. Cloth bound, 1/2.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS AND CAGES: THEIR CONSTRUCTION AND FURNISHING.—A practical, up-to-date guide on this most interesting subject; written and illustrated by "Cage Birds" artist-in-chief, Mr. H. NORMAN. It is fully illustrated with ten full-page photographic plates and numerous helpful sketches. Bound in cloth Gilt, price 2/-, post free 2/3; paper board covers 1/6, post free 1/8.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL. By H. NORMAN.—Published in two parts—"Hardbills" and "Softbills." This latest and most up-to-date manual on British birds has been written and illustrated in colours, and black and white, by "Cage Birds" artist-in-chief, Mr. H. NORMAN. The author, who has made a life-study of the subject, gives in these volumes information and hints of the utmost value to all keepers of British birds. Part I., "Hardbills," deals with the Finches, their keeping, feeding, showing, etc.; and Part II., "Softbills," Blackbirds, Thrushes, Larks, Buntings, etc. Price 1/- per part, post free 1/1.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS. By J. W. RAMSDEN. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour. Price 3d., post free 3½d.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS. By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.—A most useful manual for all keepers of Foreign birds. It will be found indispensable information of an entirely practical nature—by a life-long specialist—on the keeping and feeding of the more common and popular varieties of foreigners. It contains illustrations in colour, and black and white, of some of the well-known species, and should be purchased without delay by all fanciers who go in for this most interesting branch of bird-keeping. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½d.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL. By C. A. HOUSE.—5th Edition. A thoroughly practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc. of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing Canary). An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge. Price 1/-, post free 1/2. Cloth bound, 2/2.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED. By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7in. by 5in., is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid breeding. Being written by successful breeders, it is quite invaluable to everyone who would also be successful in his hobby. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES. HOW TO BREED, MANAGE, AND EXHIBIT. By H. W. BATTYE, past President of the Yorkshire Union. It deals fully with the Yorkshire Canary and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder. It gives the fullest instruction upon pairing, breeding, moulting, exhibiting, and how to treat birds in health and disease. Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson. Price 2/-, post free 2/2.

Advertisement Charges.

One Halfpenny for each word up to 48, 1d. per word afterwards. Name and address to be reckoned. Minimum, 12 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and are charged at two words a penny up to 48 words; after that 1d. per word. No single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 9d. 1/-, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 151, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

(2d. from agents; see list on another page.)

I HAVE several tame Starlings, show specimens, that I have kept with my African grey Parrot, which is without doubt one of the best talkers and mimics in England; these Starlings have commenced chattering, and are really more amusing than a Parrot; prices, 2/6, 5/- and 7/6 each; approval willingly: Proprietress, Lamb Hotel, Dunstable. (711)

"SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

IMPORTANT.

To Breeders Wishing to Dispose of their Stock of CANARIES for SPOT CASH

we are prepared to pay the very highest cash prices for large or small quantities of Canaries, including Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, Rollers, etc.; also Mules. Do not dispose of your surplus stock until you have received our offers. All our birds are for retail trade—not for export—therefore we can pay the very highest prices in the trade. All Canaries we purchase are retained in this country. Do not be misled with idle boast and exaggerated statements. Send your offers to a reliable firm, where you will receive a genuine offer and your cash.

MAKE A NOTE OF THIS?

Wanted large and small quantities of common or Crossbred Canaries, cocks or hens, also Mules, cocks and hens, for

PATRIOTIC PURPOSES.

This is quite out of my line, but for the good object underlying it I would not have undertaken such work, for I can ill spare the time. I cannot give precise details here; but, as a matter of good faith, I have supplied the Editor with all the particulars; I believe, however, the Editor will confirm these statements.—W. RUDD, Specialist, Norwich.

ATTERCLIFFE.

Eleventh annual show, Nov. 18, Bodmin Street Schoolroom. The entry was a record, upwards of 200 birds being staged. This is very gratifying, as many of the members are called up, and those who are left are working all hours on munitions, and have very little spare time to devote to the hobby. The Norwich cup was won by Mr. Hartley, British cup, Havenhand; Nov. Nor., Asden; Nov. Yorks., Hutchby. I am pleased to say that Mr. Hutchby has just been awarded the Military medal. During his absence at the front his father is keeping the Flag flying for him at home, by keeping and showing his birds. Quality all round was very fine indeed, and the judges had their work cut out in making the awards. Mr. G. Browning, Rotherham, judged Canaries; Mr. P. Walsh, Sheffield, British; their awards meeting with satisfaction.

STOCKPORT AND HAZEL GROVE.

Annual show, Nov. 18, Trinity House, Stockport. The members have to thank the committee of the Institute for placing the large billiard room at their disposal, the room being lofty, well lighted, and free from draughts; 74 birds faced the judge, many of which had done well at open shows, Norwich were strongest, as usual in this district, though Yorkshires, Borders, and Greens were good. Mr. W. E. Sykes won top special for the season with 56 points, Mr. J. H. Garbutt ran close with 51 points, and takes 2nd special in Champion section. Mr. J. Wright won Novice special with 33 points. CLYDEBANK.

Clydebank C.B.C. held its sixth annual show in the Lesser Town Hall, Nov. 25. President McGown is still at the head of affairs, and as popular as ever with the members. Vice Morton and Sheridan, along with Treasurer Chalmers, are all men worthy of the positions they hold. Mr. W. Kane, the able sec., is never in a flurry, and has the happy knack of disposing of each task as it presents itself. The Committee are all keen and anxious to see their show coming out on the right of the dyke, and spare neither time nor effort to attain that end; Messrs. McLean, Mallon, Laing, Tawse, McCardle, Robb and Cunnie. Entries came up well, the quanty of the exhibits was hot and level, and the gate excellent, so a successful show resulted. Two of the cups were won by Alexandria fanciers, so that local fanciers will have to look to their laurels in order to keep these trophies in the district. Mr. A. H. McLean won the old bird cup with his buff Norwich hen; Mr. W. B. Gillies, young bird cup, with his Border Fancy, and cup for British, Mules and Hybrids was won by Mr. J. Morton. The judges were Messrs. R. H. Livingstone, Rutherglen, Nor., Yorks and A.O.V.; and P. Gentleman, Avonbridge, the remainder. Work was got through in good time, and their awards met with general approval.

Twitterings.

The article in last week's issue entitled "Breeding and Rearing Hybrids" was by Mr. F. Groom, Hemel Hempstead, not F. Green as stated.

Mr. J. Paterson, sec. Irvine C.B.S., writes that at the show to be held Dec. 16 2s. 6d. special will be given for most points in the Yorks. section.

Owing to Mr. F. Coulson's illness, writes Mr. J. McLaughlin, he is unable to judge the Whitehaven Yorkshire Fanciers' Show, so we have appointed Mr. Harriman, Penrith, to judge.

Mr. W. J. Dean, Matlock, writes that he has sold his unflighted yellow Norwich cock which won first at Ardwick (amateur) in a class of 28, and hopes that his new owner will be successful.

We are sorry to hear that our friend Mr. J. Bastock has been confined to his house for 16 days, and that in consequence he was unable to send his birds to Birmingham or to fulfil his duties as show sec.

We have received from Mr. Enoch Tams, Church Street, Longton, his new price list. The list seems to comprise everything that could possibly be wanted in the bird room—seeds, medicines, cages, cage fronts, egg drawers, drinkers, seed-hoppers, and all kinds of appliances, and the prices are very reasonable. Mr. Tams will be pleased to send a copy of the list post free on application.

"British Birds" for December, Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, 1s. monthly, contains some very interesting statistics showing the results of the British Bird's Marking Scheme, giving the number of birds rung during eight years and particulars of recovery. The article is "Notes on the Breeding Habits of Temminck's Stint," by Miss Maud D. Haviland, and there are the usual interesting "Notes" and Reviews.

"Bird Notes" for December, the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, opens with an article by Mr. W. Shore Bailey on the nesting of the Black-tailed Hawfinch and the Red-collared Whydah, illustrated by beautiful photographs of the nests and eggs. It is a pity that success in rearing was not to be recorded in either case. Other articles are "Stray Notes," by Lieut. B. Hamilton Scott, "A Unique Hybrid," the production of a Parson Finch—Long-tailed Grassfinch Hybrid and a Ruficauda Finch, by Flight Lieut. De Quincey, "Bakloh Aviary Notes," by Mrs. Perrean and Major Perrean, and "My Aviary and Birds" by C. F. Crow.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULE.

Prizes, 10s., 6s., 4s., 2s., if 15 entries; sliding scale if less. Fee, 1s. 6d. Entries close Dec. 19 post mark, to A. Sutcliffe, 46, Hammond St., Hopwood Lane, Halifax.

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS AND A BRIGHT NEW YEAR

To All Readers of "Cage Birds,"

And a Safe and Speedy Return to "Blighty" for those in the Trenches.

From the Proprietor, the Editor, and the Staff of "Cage Birds."

154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Thank you very much for illustrating my Buff Yorkshire on the front of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. R. E. Powell. It is due to the splendid information contained in it from week to week that I have been able to breed the bird, and I hope CAGE BIRDS will continue to prosper and be the help to others it has been to me.

We have this week to call attention to an advertisement. Under the heading "Wanted," Mr. Rudd, of Norwich, is asking for any number of cheap Canaries. There are special circumstances underlying the advt., and these circumstances, in our opinion, justify us in departing on this occasion from our custom of not referring to an individual advertisement. We hope that readers who have Canaries which come under the description given in the advt. will help Mr. Rudd in his patriotic endeavour.

Entries for Halifax.

Mr. A. Sutcliffe, sec. Halifax C.B.S. (see show advertisement and review of schedule), writes that he will classify any entries sent on for the show of Dec. 23.

A Greenfinch Does the "Hat Trick."

Mr. S. Slocombe, Swansea, writes that the Greenfinch which won 1st for Mr. T. Holborrow at Cardiff show has now won 1st at the same show for three years in succession.

Show Dates for 1917.

The date of the 1917 show of the Manchester and N. Counties O.S. has been fixed for Oct. 28, 29, and the 4th annual open show of the Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A. has been fixed for Nov. 9th and 10th, 1917, writes Mr. A. E. Thorpe, hon. sec. Mr. J. Robson, London, has been appointed one of the judges, and the other judges will be appointed forthwith. The officers and members would like to tender best thanks to all exhibitors of the show of Nov. 11th, and are glad to report a nice sum to hand over to the Blinded Soldiers' Fund.

OBITUARY.

MR. J. F. SMITH, SCARBOROUGH.

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. D. Hunter, of the death of the late J. F. Smith, chemist, Scarborough, who passed away on Nov. 29th, aged 68 years. Mr. Smith had been a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead for 35 years, and had been a very keen fancier and judge and reporter of many shows. He leaves a widow and three daughters to mourn his loss.

Returning Birds from Birmingham.

Having nearly 200 packages to get off, writes Mr. J. Bastock, our men worked like niggers, and got all but 15 packages into the hands of the railway company before nine o'clock. The last 15 the officials refused to take, as it was a few minutes past nine, and the birds had to be taken back and kept until Friday morning. This caused a lot of trouble and worry to the owners of the birds, but I am sure they will sympathise with us in our misfortune.

Catching Birds on Sunday.

Two charges were made on Oct. 3 at Greenock Sheriff Court against lads for contravening the Wild Birds Protection Act, when Neil Campbell Montgomery, house painter, and Robert Osborne, labourer, pleaded guilty of snaring wild birds on Sunday, 10th September, near Auchneagh Farm.

The Fiscal said that a constable noticed the lads near the farm at 1.20 p.m. On going up, he found that along the hedge they had placed twelve yards of twine, which was covered with birdlime, while cages were standing near to receive the birds. Sheriff Welsh imposed a fine of £1 on each accused, with the alternative of ten days' imprisonment. James M'Eleny John Milloy and William Canney pleaded guilty of a similar offence, and were each fined a like amount.

ROLL OF HONOUR.

Lce.-Corpl. L. L. Huggins.

We are sorry to have to announce that Mr. H. L. Huggins, the hon. sec. of the London and Provincial O.S., has received the sad news of the death in action of his brother, Lance-Corporal Leslie Lovering Huggins, of the 1st Battalion Honourable Artillery Company. Lance-Corporal Huggins was educated at Owen's School, Islington, and in civilian employment was in the Accounts Department of the Port of London Authority. He enlisted in Nov., 1914, and went to France on July 1, 1915. A comrade has written to his parents stating that he fell on Nov. 13, and was laid to rest on the 17th. Lance-Corporal Huggins was only 20 years of age. He was a loving son and brother, and we are sure that our readers will join with us in our sympathy with his bereaved relatives.

Our Painting Competition.

A Prize for Artistic Bird-Keepers.

(See frontispiece this week.)

Following our usual custom at Christmastide, our Frontispiece this week is designed to be coloured. We offer a cash prize of one guinea for the best attempt at colouring the same which reaches us from one of our readers on or before Friday, January 5th.

The medium to be employed (oil, water-colour, or crayon) is left to the discretion of the competitor. The finished attempt may be mounted or unmounted. If unmounted, it should be packed flat, or rolled in a tube, not folded, and must have the sender's name and address written on the back.

The whole of the front page, heading and all, must be coloured, not merely the outline picture of birds, etc., alone. Unless this condition is complied with, that is, unless the whole page is dealt with, the effort will have no chance of winning the prize.

In this competition entries are received only on the understanding that the Editor's decision shall be accepted as final.

An Omission.

We very greatly regret that through an error on the part of our printers the "Canaries Wanted" advertisement of Messrs. J. Howard and Son, Norwich and London, was omitted last week. It will be found this week in the usual column.

Correction in Show Reports.

At Cardiff Show, in unflighted buff cocks, 2nd no name should read 2nd Greenslade, and No. 17, 3 in unflighted yellow hens should read 3rd Greenslade. At Bristol show, in Norwich buff hens, 1 no name should read 1 Tristem, and the awards 1, 4, and he in the A.O.V. class were won by T. R. Ind. At Cardiff, Mr. R. D. Parlett won 1st in the Goldfinch-Canary Mule class, and special for best Goldfinch-Canary Mule.

Musical Evening for Ardwick Fanciers.

A smoking concert in connection with the Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A. will be held at St. Thomas's School, Ardwick, on Dec. 19th, at 8 p.m., when our President, the Rev. C. E. Gaul, will be glad to welcome all fanciers, writes Mr. A. E. Thorpe, hon. sec. A cordial invitation is extended not only to members, but friends. A good programme will be provided by Mr. S. T. Oldham, who will have the assistance of an old friend, Mr. J. R. Schofield, who has rendered us such valuable services and help to make our annual social a great success.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, two words a penny.

PONTEFRACT.

Linnet contest, Woodman Inn, Horsefair Club, Saturday, Dec. 9; 17 birds entered for three prizes: 1, T. Jones; 2, 3, Williams. Open sing, Dec. 10; 26 birds entered: 1, J. Beard; 2, S. Pugh; 3, Foster.—S. Pugh, sec.

Charity Show at Glasgow

The show of the City of Glasgow O.A. on Jan. 3-4, which will be the 61st open show of the society, will be held in aid of limbless sailors and soldiers.

A Fancier Honoured.

Mr. J. W. Hutchby, a member of the Attercliffe C.B.S., has been awarded the Military Medal for bravery. During his absence at the front Mr. Hutchby, sen., is looking after his birds, and had the pleasure of winning the Novice Yorkshire Cup at the recent show of the Attercliffe C.B.S.

Success Under Difficulties.

The clashing with Cardiff, and the most unfortunate blunder of stating that the entry was 2s. 6d., had no doubt a bad effect on the entry, writes Mr. J. A. Greenslade, Bristol F.A., but in spite of all our show was, I am pleased to say, a financial success, and will result in a handsome cheque to the Harrison Fund. I must congratulate you and your staff on such a good and very early report, for which we express our best thanks.

TITS AND COCOA NUTS.

We have hung up the first cocoanut on the pergola ropes, writes "H.M.S." in the "Manchester Guardian," and the greedy little Tits could scarcely wait for the steps to be removed before they came to sample the food, although there is abundance of other to be had in all the gardens round. They are a spoilt race hereabouts, and know the look of a cocoanut very well, and evidently prefer it to most things. The Great Tits are in very handsome plumage, the black on the head and breast being very glossy and the yellow sides almost as bright as a Canary. The Blue Tits are not yet so bright as they will be, the blue and the yellow merging into something almost approaching green. But their manners are delightful, and their huge enjoyment is comic. They seem invariably to yield their place on the approach of a Great Tit, but they don't go far, flittering about in their uncertain flight and incessantly perching near, to be ready the minute the bigger bird goes.

The Great Tits peck away with great force and ardour, throwing bits of nut right and left, and making a litter on the path below, crumbs for the less acrobatic Robin and Sparrow. Sometimes five or six birds hover about, and it seems to be an accepted game that as soon as a second alights on the nut the first goes. Sometimes two or three alight in such rapid succession that no one gets a bite. Sometimes a patient friend sits on the rope and watches the other gorging, while he encourages him with his cheerful "Tee-pink!" We have purposely hung the nut so that it swings a good deal and gives the little beggars plenty of opportunity of showing what they can do in the way of hanging on by their eyelids. A Tit seems to find it easier to eat standing on his head than any other way.

THE OLD AND THE NEW BELL GLUCKE.

By J. TOMLINSON (Newcastle, Staffs).

With Some Remarks Upon the Federation of Roller Canary Clubs.

I HAVE been asked to write a few notes on this tour, as it may help to dispel some doubts regarding its future, and it would display a poor spirit on my part were I to refuse and reply, "Why should I, after the repeated warnings I have given verbally, in the columns of CAGE BIRDS, and also in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL?" It is true that one has to take into consideration that the fancy may grow a little jaded of reading continually the thoughts of one mind, relieved only by an occasionally fresh word. The student desires nothing better than to read the workings of the minds of others, and it is a poor mind that fails to learn, or at least be interested in the writings of others on a subject that is so very interesting to one's self. Roller fanciers, let us have more of your experiences.

Roller fanciers know that the old type of Bell Glucke was never a favourite of mine, neither did it find a place in my home, yet they also know that I was quite unbiased on the subject, and when I met a good rendering on the judging table I valued it to its full credit. It is no use crying over spilt milk, yet after the repeated warnings of the danger of this tour, because it was so liable to go faulty on some of its deliveries, it is very regrettable to find that it is circulated the country over, to cause more heart burning and mistrust than anything I remember since Roller clubs were inaugurated.

North and South Divided.

The matter at present is a wee bit serious, as we are on the verge of a threatened split between the Northern and the Southern sections of the Roller fancy. Situated as I am, so to speak, between these two sections, many of the little differences between them pass round me. So I appeal to all, let us not forget that it is human to err, for none of us are infallible, and in the great crisis through which we are all passing, and which is laying its hand very heavily upon each of us, the differences in our hobby really sink into insignificance.

The Bell Glucke was, so to speak, the last straw that broke the camel's back. I appealed to Manchester, in the view of the good rendering of the tour, to find it a place on the judging sheet. My appeal did not find favour; they thought otherwise, and eventually they brought into use a rule that was standing in their rule book, issued a ring of their own, and judged by their own standard.

Events have proved that since the new way of singing the B.G. [illegible] tour cannot be ignored. Yet who could foresee that quite a new way of singing B.G. would arise? Let me say this to the Northern men, there are more of you that have the new B.G. than you are aware of, but more on this anon.

An Unfortunate Misunderstanding.

Now let us view the facts as we find them at present. The fancy was circularised to "affiliate"; this intimation was too vague for the many, as it left something unexplained, something to be desired; the ultimate object was so shrouded in doubt that even in my own mind some misgivings arose. Letters on the subject in these columns had rather the reverse instead of a reconciling effect. We offended our fancier friends without the slightest intention of wishing to do so, and I desire to take this opportunity of expressing regret.

So the misunderstanding went on, until the fancy was again circularised with the ultimate object defined, a Federation of Roller Societies. Why did the fates debar this being launched at the outset? How oft before a misunderstanding has set ill-words and doubts aganging.

This circular, amongst other proposed rules, contained one to the following effect: "That each club, whether large or small, should have equal voting powers." Should it not appeal to every interested person that these Northern men were anxious for the right thing, and a proper understanding in the fancy, whereby every member of a Federated Club would discuss the merits or otherwise of anything connected with his hobby, in his own club room? His desires will then go forward through the delegates of his own society to the annual meetings, where they would again be discussed before the representatives of the entire fanciers of the Federation, and voted on.

There is nothing that stands out so prominently in my own mind regarding the justice of the Northerners as that they are willing to place themselves upon the same equality as even the smallest club which happens to be federated. They sacrifice their numbers, which in Lancashire alone double those of any other county.

Further, a meeting was held, the Federation became an accomplished fact, in which every club north of here is associated, so far as I know at the moment, except Bacup. Their secretary and representative were both debarred from attending the meeting, one being ill in bed, and the other had received a short notice call-up from the Army.

I would like to refer to one rule passed at that meeting, which seems to have preceded the Secretary's report, for it was quoted to me at Wolverhampton. I, and two other delegates, voted against that rule. Personally, I am in favour of such at some future time, but not at present, it is in my opinion too drastic.

I entreat of you, Northern men, as one who has only the best interests of the fancy at heart, to let that rule lie in abeyance for awhile. You have shown that you can be generous, and make sacrifices, let your generosity and lenity go further. Put the house in order, in good working order, stretching out the hand of friendship meanwhile. You already hold the majority of clubs in the federation, and can afford to wait a reasonable length of time for others to join up. So far as I can see at the moment, it is the Southerns who will be at a disadvantage if they ultimately refuse the outstretched hand.

What the rule is I cannot in the view of propriety quote at present, and I would not have referred to it had it not already been circulated. I am casting no reflection upon the responsible person, that is his business.

A Peace Proposal.

Now a word to the British Roller Club members in general. I also am a member of that club. We fostered all the other clubs as they came into existence, until they have grown to be larger than the parent. It reminds me of our own daughters, we shelter them until they draw near the age of maturity, when we find they want a voice in the management of our household. Is there any loss of dignity on our part in allowing such a thing? I think not, and my thoughts are the same with the parent coming forward and joining the Federation, and allowing the other clubs a voice in the management of the affairs of the fancy household. We have nothing to lose, everything to gain. I know that some of you and the members who have not already joined are waiting to see what the Federation is going to do with the Bell Glucke, and I can appreciate your uneasiness on the matter, because I have reason to know, when I judged at the last Wolverhampton show, that in the champion old bird class representing the Midlands, North and South also, I found B.G. singers there that were a credit to their owners. In fact, of the 140 birds I judged at this fixture the ones to be penalised for the faulty tour could be counted on one hand.

I said before that the Northern men are more deeply involved than some are aware of, and for that reason I predict the Bell Glucke will stand. Just a word to the clubs in general, something will have to be done with regard to the dividing of the large numbers of entries occurring in one class; it is not sufficient that you give extra prize money, fanciers are waking up to the fact, the dominant fact, and are asking how the judge can give justice to such a large number of birds. I repeat in the majority of cases he cannot give all the time his own conscience tells him is necessary.

Breeding British Finches in Cage and Aviary.

By FINCH FANCIER.

A Scottish bird fancier intends to enter the "Fresh Field for Fanciers" which has been recently indicated in our columns.

THE domestication of many of the beautiful varieties of British Finches had always appealed to me, as I think that great pleasure, not to mention profit, could be derived from such experiments, but breeders should not let the desire for profit become their sole aim, or half the interest in bird-keeping is lost.

This year I have obtained pairs of Goldfinches, Greenfinches, and Siskins, the last species are very difficult to obtain, but in Scotland, here one can easily catch one's own. With these birds I intend to try my luck, and I think I shall be successful, as the birds are in good health and condition.

For the benefit of those who desire to do likewise, I will endeavour to give the methods I shall adopt. It is an open question whether Finches will breed better in a large cage or an aviary, but I shall not go into that subject, as I intend to give each a trial, and find out for myself which is the best.

One has only to glance at the advertisement pages of CAGE BIRDS to realise the price a good Finch will make, and it is with some hope of profit that this branch of our hobby can be taken up.

Size, the lack of which is often noticed in exhibition Finches, could be improved by the introduction of Siberian blood into the strain, and I would advise one to have the cock bird the foreigner; apart from the reason that few hens are imported, he will give the size to the young.

Begin with the Best.

It is absolutely useless to obtain poor birds to breed with, as they cost as much to keep, and require as much attention as good stock. The selection of Finches for breeding should receive great care, and it is best to select personally from a catcher, although I have received many a good bird from dealers advertising in CAGE BIRDS, but care should be taken to explain for what purpose one requires the birds, and a dealer with a reputation should be chosen.

By judicious pairing, an all round improvement should be noticed in the young birds, of course, a good number of wasters would crop up, until the strain could be established, no matter how careful one was in selecting the parents. In the case of the Siskin, some difficulty would be experienced, as individual birds vary so much in colour and markings, and it would be a case of "wait and see" whether the young would be any use for exhibition, but with the other species no difficulty should be found.

Goldfinches, I am sure are the greatest favourites, and well they merit this favour, as there are few more charming birds, and it is a pity they are not better distributed throughout these islands. They should breed freely in either cage or aviary, as the hen sits well, and the old birds are very attentive to their young, but in a cage the cock wants watching.

To get any Finch into condition one requires to give them plenty of dandelion and other wild seed, also a little live food, such as ants' eggs, which can easily be obtained in the spring, or, if one lives in town, meal-worms cut in two can be used.

It is often difficult to obtain nests suitable from the hen's point of view, but in an aviary in which bushes and ivy are growing, they will construct their own, if suitable material is supplied them, and what could be more interesting to a bird lover than to watch the construction of the nest.

In an outdoor aviary ten feet by four feet by seven feet, I am going to turn in the following birds:—Cock Goldfinch, cage moulted, and very tame, strong, and healthy, with only one fault, i.e., a very thin black cap, with him I shall put two hens excelling in that respect, also a pair of Greenfinches. I shall also try a pair of Scotch Siskins in a large cage or pen, similar to the one described in the excellent "Nutshell" on the Bullfinch.

I believe in no hard and fast rule on feeding British Finches, but I follow more or less closely, the menus given in the "Nutshells," which I have found very good.

With regard to the breeding of Linnets for song, I should find it hard to keep them from hearing the song of wild Linnets, which frequent the garden attracted by their less fortunate (?) relatives in the aviary.

I do not think it would be wise to attempt to change the type or marking of our Finches, as Nature, to my mind, cannot be improved on. Quite a good idea would be to pair the cock Finches with hen Canaries, as British hens are late in coming into condition, and the young mules would help to pay the seed bill, as they are always in demand.

In conclusion, if better specimens of British Finches could be bred in captivity, birds that showed a decided superiority over their wild brethren, it would show those who are down on the keeping of wild birds that the fancy is not so black as some would like to paint it, and that every keeper of Britishers is not necessarily a low and degraded ruffian.

CANARY KEEPING FOR BEGINNERS.

By J. NORTH.

Helpful Hints on Management, Pairing, Breeding and Rearing, which should make the Hobby of Canary Keeping easy of pursuit by the amateur, and containing information of interest to older hands.

LET it be ever borne in mind that the egg-food cannot be too fresh, and as warm weather comes on it must be made twice or three times in the twenty-four hours.

The scalded seed, to which we have previously referred, is sometimes incorporated with the soft-food by various fanciers, but we do not advise it, preferring to have it served up in separate dishes. It can then be noted which dish is most enjoyed by the parent bird, in fact, we consider it at all times much the better way for the different kinds of seeds to be given in separate vessels and not mixed together.

We know that some breeders boil their seeds, but we much prefer merely scalding with boiling water, as by this latter mode the kernels of the seed are expanded and softened, and in some cases the germinating point is livened up, whereas if boiling has taken place, the vitality of the entire seed has been destroyed. The live and softened seed contains digestive and assimilative properties that the boiled and dead seed does not.

Still, those who keep only a few birds will continue to find their requirements well supplied by the packets of seed that are to be found in the shops, and which are put up by respectable firms and composed of good seed, well cleaned.

In addition to all this kitchen-work, there are the wild seeds and salads to be found, gathered, or stored. Few there be, among the great number of Canary breeders, we hope, who are so penned up by bricks and mortar, or whose limitations are such that they cannot get out into the country for a few hours or for a whole day now and again. The means of suburban locomotion are now so ample, and the tariffs so moderate, that one may get carried many miles away from the smoke for a few pence.

The growing watercress may easily be found by those who seek it, the groundsel is close at hand, and the chickweed is waiting to be plucked. "Shepherd's purse," well filled with seedy pockets, can be got throughout the summer, but we have never found Canaries care for it nearly as much as Finches; Linnets, and Mules. In the months of May and June the long-stemmed plantain may be gathered with plump and nodding heads crammed with fleshy seeds nearly an inch deep, and later on, the rats-tail plantain may be garnered, and that which is not given fresh can be stored in a paper bag for future use.

The fresh seed pods of charlock, or wild mustard, are much relished both by old birds and those young ones that are in the flight cage, but of them more anon. Last, but not least, comes the old fashioned, thoroughly English plant, the dandelion. Never mind its botanical name, nor the front or back names of the other salads we have spoken about.

The object of language is to convey to others the impressions of one's mind, and we all know what we are talking about when we speak of the dandelion. We have no brief to urge its claim as a delightful perfume, nor to uphold or refute its real or imaginary medicinal properties, all we contend for is that its great popularity is to a great extent the result of its known usefulness. It resembles in a sense, the humble pig—again we are not extolling anything as a choice perfume—because there is not a single portion of it that is not usable.

Early in the year, as soon as there is an appreciable warmth from the sun, the young leaves push up from the succulent root, and form the first available green-meat for the pairing birds and throughout most of the year are eagerly consumed by all the occupants of the bird-room.

The flowering heads, as soon as they have bloomed and closed, may be gathered, and will, if laid in a cardboard box in a cool and damp place, develop to each ripening seed one of those wonderfully fragile umbrella-like growths which botanists call "pappus," and by which the little children tell the time of day, they not being precise to a few hours.

Even when the sunshiny days are all past, and the leaves are all gone, the roots may be dug up and placed in a large flower pot or saucer. If these are lightly covered with sandy loam and kept moist, a supply of crisp young leaves may be obtained during November and December, when it is difficult to find them elsewhere. This young growth is much relished by birds coming home to cool off, after having some high old times at the shows.

A Veteran Goldfinch.

Nineteen Years on Hemp Seed.

SIR,—A Goldfinch now nineteen years old lives on nothing but hemp seed; he will not touch any other seed. This year he has moulted out a greyish colour. I should like to know if this is a record.

The Disqualified Hawfinch at Bristol.

A Disclaimer from the Owner.

SIR,—I am sorry to see that Mr. House left out my Hawfinch at Bristol show on the ground that it had had its bib trimmed. I can assure Mr. House that my bird has not been tampered with in any way. I have had the bird eight months, and it is the same bird that Mr. House placed first at Northampton a few weeks ago.

A Border Canary's 51st Win.

How Was it Done?

SIR,—I read with much interest in this week's issue of CAGE BIRDS of a Border Fancy winning its 51st success at Cardiff Show. If the owner of the bird felt disposed he could afford much interest to admirers of the "wee gems" by publishing a short note of its career. Personally I would much appreciate the following points:—

Its age and parentage; the distant shows to which it has been sent, also if the bird has been hand washed, and how often each season. There is a good deal of debate as to the value of hand washing a Border Fancy and its effects on the feather and colour of the bird in this part of Scotland. Thanking you in anticipation.

The Training of Roller Canaries.

To Regulate the Light.

SIR,—It is to be hoped that, with your kind permission, this subject will be further contributed to by members of the Roller Fancy. The darkening down question is, as Mr. Neve rightly intimates, a stumbling block to many; are there any first prize winners who do not practise it, or only to a slight extent? I believe so; let us have their views and experience.

Mr. Neve asks how I deal with the individual bird, seeing that he is racked in a community. The rack having a darker end, being in a corner, and two curtains in front, and there being venetian blinds to the room, I am able fairly well to regulate the light. Also the lower shelves are made rather darker, having brown paper overlapping somewhat. In the first few weeks a lot of shifting and sorting goes on, this requiring a good deal of time and patience, and the real offenders come away altogether out of the room; sometimes they improve and are reinstated. I read of a great first-class breeder having three different racks in three separate rooms; the first was in a sanctum which no one outside the household was permitted to enter; the birds in this room were his reserve Schoolmasters, the second and third were what we should call first and second. He bred a large number, and did nothing else; his life was entirely devoted to it, and he made a great name.

HY. W. GUTIERREZ.

Is Darkness Really Necessary?

SIR,—I was very pleased to read Mr. Neve's letter in your excellent paper re the training and darkening process which is very much in evidence with some Roller fanciers. My acquaintance with this, the most beautiful of all song birds, i.e., the Roller, dates back fully thirty years, and I have bred and trained many excellent birds during that period, but I have felt sorry many times when I have seen fanciers actually putting their birds into complete darkness. To my mind it is most cruel and unnecessary. I know that some will say that the birds are brought to the darkness gradually, but suppose someone tried to subject any fancier to this kind of treatment, even if it were done gradually. How would they like it?

I know full well that some method of darkening is necessary, but I think that all lovers of nature should try to adopt that system which will give the birds a chance to live their little lives under reasonable conditions. I like the curtain system of darkening, not that heavy material that darkens too much; cotton material is the best, something that gives a blue or green shade to the birds. A friend of mine who visited the rooms of the late Herr Trute, the famous Hartz breeder, told me that Trute was very careful in darkening his birds; when the birds were old enough to place in their small cages they were shaded off very gently with coloured glass, blue, green, orange or scarlet, and he so arranged the glass that the birds had a variety of shaded light. This was put in front of the birds; the top part of the cage was quite open to the light. After passing through this process they were placed in song boxes with arched tops, and with a curtain to shade the light. Trute preferred curtains because the birds got more air. It is a good plan to place those birds that sing too loud in the darker parts of the room.

It would be a great help, Mr. Editor, if Mr. Lester, of London, would kindly give his experience in training Rollers in open cages and full light. Some breeders keep their birds in open cages with wire fronts, and regulate the light in the room by a suitable blind. I trust that others, with the kind permission of the Editor, will try to help bring about a system of darkening our beautiful Rollers with the least punishment possible.

Hybrid "Wrong Classed" at Clapham Show.

Corroboration of Its Parentage.

SIR,—I was pleased to read in the current issue of CAGE BIRDS a letter from Mr. Claude St. John urging the necessity for plain English in schedule classification, more particularly as I am interested in the Alario-Greenfinch Hybrid referred to.

I am an intimate friend of Mr. Reynolds, the owner of this bird, and previous to joining the Forces lived only about 40 yards away from him, so that I had ample opportunities of watching the birds, and I might say I rarely missed a day all through the breeding season.

Mr. Robson was quite justified in wrong classing the bird, as he had made up his mind it was nothing else but a Greenfinch Mule (which it certainly resembles), but in doing so has cast a certain stigma on the exhibitor, which I know he feels very much, and Mr. Reynolds is a man whose integrity and honesty is beyond question.

I watched the progress of this pair of birds through two breeding seasons, and can say with absolute certainty that from the time that they commenced building until after the hatching of the Hybrid no cock Canary had been in the aviary, and as the hen Greenfinch laid and hatched the egg it is obvious that the cross cannot be Canary-Greenfinch. I am satisfied that the bird is a genuine Alario-Greenfinch, and only wish for Mr. Reynolds' sake that it could be established by appeal to a committee of experts, such as Mr. T. W. Wren suggests in his letter re his own Hybrid. I remember the bird being entered—in fact, I believe I filled the form up—and it was correctly done, as, if I remember rightly, the wording of the classification was "Any other variety Hybrid."

There are not many Hybrids on the bench between a foreign specimen and a British, so that the implication which you refer to is easy, but, assuming that the parentage of the bird was written on the entry tab on the cage wires, and the judge was satisfied that the description was correct, I submit that in spite of the implication the bird could not be marked "W.C." Let us have more detail and, as you say, plainer English in schedules, and there will be fewer mistakes and consequent disappointment to exhibitors.

Pte. W. GIBBON.

[The heading in the Clapham catalogue reads "All Bullfinch Hybrids, and Greenfinch and Chaffinch Hybrids." It would seem to have been the intention of the compilers of the schedule that only birds bred between a Greenfinch and a Chaffinch or those with a Bullfinch as one parent were to compete in this class, and if this were so then the second "and" should have been replaced by a hyphen, which would have made the meaning perfectly clear. The heading as it stood might, however, easily be understood to cover Bullfinch Hybrids, Greenfinch Hybrids, and Chaffinch Hybrids, and it would seem to have been bad luck for the owner of the bird not to have been given the benefit of the doubt. Such disputes might easily be avoided by a little more care in wording the class headings.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

A Stricken Roller Canary Fancier.

An Appeal for a Most Deserving Case.

SIR,—I beg that you will allow me heartily to appeal to Roller Fanciers generally for a most deserving object. No doubt followers of Roller shows will well remember Mr. T. Simpson, 39, Johnston Street, Wakefield, as a very enthusiastic member of the Wakefield Club. He is stricken down by spinal disease, and we see a splendid chance to purchase a self-propelling car at half its cost price, which was £23 5s. In making this appeal to Roller fanciers and friends I feel sure they will be willing to support such a worthy case. Thanking all in anticipation.

Canaries and War Bread.

Will it Harm Young Birds?

SIR,—I count myself honoured that no less a contributor than Mr. Claude St. John should deem my humble letter worthy of reply. What I owe to him in rearing young is incalculable, and I still sit at his feet a learner in the endless pleasure of Canary breeding.

If, as he suggests, all is well in giving wholemeal food to young Canaries none will be more thankful than myself. However, let us be quite clear as to the difference between feeding old birds, wild birds (and to answer the letter of your courteous correspondent R. P. Bixter), and poultry, and the feeding of young Canaries just hatched. If there is nothing in my theory that bran is an irritant in the process of digestion, will either Mr. Claude St. John or Mr. Bixter kindly tell me why two sorts of biscuits, white and wholemeal, are issued to the troops on active service? From conversation with the medical faculty I understand that, altogether apart from the food value of the biscuits, the wholemeal biscuits are given to our troops in the fighting line in order to create activity of the bowels when vegetables and other such active agents are impossible of access. I have the two forms of granulated biscuit, and from personal experience I know the theory a fact. What is most efficacious and desirable in the case of human beings and non-seed shelling birds such as poultry may prove, on the other hand, most disastrous to so tiny a creature as a Canary reared under domestic conditions. One has observed that during the first two days of the little birdies' lives little or no seed is used by the hen in feeding her young. After this period the egg food, whilst not actually decreasing in quantity, because the birds are growing larger, is practically at a standstill, and canary, rape, and especially hemp are consumed in goodly quantities. My fear is that during the first ten days, i.e., until the young can evacuate over the nest, bowel trouble will most likely appear, and such things as sweating, etc., will be very prevalent.

I always feel that comparisons with wild birds, not in captivity, are not quite as helpful as one would like, because of the infinite variety of foods, and the wonderful instinct of nature in selecting counteractives, which are ever at their command, all of which are denied the caged bird.

I would like to thank both your correspondents for their kind replies, and when the 1917 breeding season is over I shall esteem it of great value if they will kindly let us know their experience with war bread.

(Rev.) C. B. JOLLIFFE.

The Difference Between "National" and "Whole-meal."

SIR,—I have read with interest the articles by Rev. C. B. Jolliffe, Claude St. John, and R. P. Bixter, re "The Fancy and War Bread" in the past two issues of CAGE BIRDS, and should like to point out a few facts: 1. The new bread to be made from the Government regulation flour is termed by the trade "National." It is dissimilar to the "Standard" in evidence a few years ago in that the "National" will not contain any offal. 2. "Wholemeal" bread will still continue to be made as formerly, and differs from "National" in the fact that in the milling of the new flour neither germ nor bran is included, which constitute the "offal." 3. A greater percentage of flour will be obtained from the wheat to make this new flour than in making the ordinary white. May I not conclude, therefore, that the new bread, "National," will be neither less detrimental nor more beneficial to the health of young birds than the present white bread?

What is a Ticked Bird?

The Exhibitors Reply to the Judge.

SIR,—Kindly allow us to reply to Mr. House's answer to our letter in last week's CAGE BIRDS, and with this letter the incident, as far as we are concerned, is finished. Mr. House says he cannot admit that all who saw the bird at Port Talbot agreed that it was a marked bird. He is right. We should have said all with the exception of himself. The bird in question has since been shown in the marked class at Birmingham, and stood 1st, and there was not one of all the fanciers that saw it there who did not agree that it is a marked bird. According to Mr. House, a bird that is lightly grizzled all over and the markings do not extend into the shafts is a ticked bird. So much for 40 years' experience.

Coming to our challenge, Mr. House says he cannot accept it on the ground that to do so would be to acknowledge that he may have been wrong. Well, to refuse it is to acknowledge that he is wrong. Mr. House says it would be undignified on his part to consent to his judgment being submitted to the decision of some other judge with less experience than himself. Mr. House must have a very high opinion of himself. Let us say that many of our judges of to-day have as much experience as himself and are quite as capable of judging a class of birds.

We have no doubt that Mr. House honestly thought he was doing the right thing in "wrong classing" the bird, and there is also no doubt that he made a mistake. Our advice is, don't throw a bird out unless you are quite certain you are doing the proper thing; otherwise give the bird the benefit of the doubt.

In conclusion, let us say that it gives us no pleasure whatever to have to write in a complaining way to our only fancy paper, and we hope we shall not be called upon to do so again.

More Trouble About Hybrids.

The Wager that Was Not Laid.

SIR,—I was at Clapham Show, and as I had read of this bird having been bred, I thought it might be there, so I looked for it, and found it cardless, not wrong classed. I did not speak to anyone until I took it to the light and examined it, when I was quite convinced that, although a poor specimen, it was from the cross claimed. Some time after, while in company with some very well-known Mule and British experts, I said there was a rare Hybrid, a Goldfinch-Chaffinch, in the show. Two of these gentlemen took it to the light, and expressed their opinion that I was right. Of course after this the bird was an attraction, and later on one of those gentlemen with whom I had been talking came to me and said there was a gentleman willing to make a wager of five pounds to one that it was not of the cross I had named. I knew no more about the bird than they did, but was willing to back my opinion by posting cash, but the challenger declined to post his. I have never had any communication either before or since Clapham Show with the breeder of the bird, but am positive in my own mind that it is a genuine Hybrid of the Goldfinch and Chaffinch cross.

J. BASTOCK.

Lutino Parrakeets.

An Old Record Recalled.

SIR,—Referring to your notice in "Twitterings" of "Lutino" Indian Parrakeets, it occurs to me that readers may be interested to hear of a case of lutinism in another species, the Black-masked Fijian Parrakeet. Many years ago, in 1888, to be exact, I came home from New Zealand with a friend who had with him two Masked Fijian Parrakeets which he had purchased in Auckland, N.Z., where at that time this species was frequently imported. One of my friend's birds was a normal specimen, the other was a lutino. This bird was a clear canary yellow all over with the exception of the mask, and here the black of the normal specimen was replaced by a kind of dark orange colour; in fact, the bird was coloured not unlike a clear yellow Goldfinch-Canary Mule, taking the mask to represent the "blaze." The eyes were pink, with red pupils, and the legs flesh coloured.

Unfortunately this curious bird was a confirmed feather eater; it was so when it came into my friend's possession. After reaching England my friend took it to the Parrot house at the Zoological Gardens, with a view to their trying to cure it, and it was kept there some time, though not on public view owing to its denuded state. Still, I should think there might be some record of it. It did not improve under treatment, but got worse, so was returned to my friend, who finally gave it to me, and it died in my possession, after having been in England somewhere about two years. At the time of its death it was practically featherless except on the head, where it could not reach itself. By the way, I suppose the yellow Budgerigar is a case of hereditary lutinism? E. D. H. D.

[Yellow Budgerigars, as seen on our show benches, are not lutinos as the term is understood. They are bred by selection from the Greens. The breeding of a pair of lutino Budgerigars, i.e., pure yellow with pink eyes, is recorded in "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," by C. P. Arthur, but these birds were an accidental occurrence, and were different to the yellow Budgerigars with more or less green markings which are frequently exhibited.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

(Many interesting letters unavoidably held over.)

Round the Shows.

BARROW.

Held under the banner of the Red Cross, and well and efficiently managed by an up-to-date band of fanciers, the open show held by the Barrow C.B.A., Nov. 3 and 4, may be voted an unqualified success, both as regards entries and the quality of the exhibits. The Dalton Road schoolroom, in which the show was held, is well adapted for the purpose, being roomy and comfortable, and the birds being nicely staged, allowed the visitors every opportunity to see them without trouble.

Yorkshires, with 90 entries in open classes, and 50 in the novice section, were a nice collection, several well known birds being on view, the winning marked yell. taking the special for 2nd best bird in show. Norwich, both open and novice section, were, as regards numbers, poorly represented, though type and quality were well to the fore. The outstanding section of the show was the Border section, open and novice classes being well filled with a grand collection, both as regards number and quality; in short, one of the best it has been our privilege to see for some considerable time. Over 320 Borders on view speaks volumes for their popularity.

The one-time popular Scotch Fancies had 12 entries in the two classes, three exhibitors being represented. We were pleased to see the birds; they are a nice change from the ordinary run, something attractive and representative of class.

Thanks are due to the officials for their courteous attention to exhibits and exhibitors, nothing being left undone to assist anyone. The show closing in good time allowed birds that could reach home the same night to be despatched, and exhibitors present were allowed to take their birds with them in time to catch early trains. Show manager Mr. John Marello, and Hon. Sec. Mr. D. McFarlane, together with the committee, worked assiduously for the success of the show.

Owing to the large entry, Mr. Battye had all his work cut out to judge the Yorkshires and Borders, which made up one of the finest collections seen for years at Barrow. Mr. Houlton, therefore, took the Norwich, Cinnamons, Scotch Fancies, Selling, Mules and British classes.

Some very fine Norwich came along, and competition was close and keen. Novice Norwich were good. Some of the crack Cinnamon Norwich were on view.

Mules and Hybrids were very pretty, and the winners were all birds of the first class. British birds came up well, and winners had to be of the best to get there. Taken on the whole it was a record, and about the best show ever seen here. We hope the Red Cross funds will benefit substantially.

BIRMINGHAM.

On Dec. 6 and 7 the Birmingham C.B.S. held their annual exhibition in the large room of the Crown Hotel. Although a spacious hall it was none too large for the seven hundred and fifty birds sent in for competition, but by careful and judicious staging the birds were nicely arranged without undue crowding, so that it was possible to see every exhibit with ease. The weather was unfortunately unusually bad, a very heavy fog hanging over the city all day, so that it was decided to judge the birds by artificial light, this, of course, told against birds of colour, and would possibly account for some good ones being put back.

Norwich were a splendid lot, the collection containing many well-known birds, sent in by equally well-known exhibitors. A bird that attracted a good deal of attention was the grizzle backed buff of Messrs. Stubbs Bros. It was again entered in the marked or variegated class, and accepted as such by the Judge, Mr. J. H. Roe. The Cheltenham firm also won well in the two unflighted cock classes, the heavily variegated buff taking the eye of all lovers of a good bird; he has wonderful substance and feather, and should do well in the stock room. Messrs. Gough and Loach, Bennett, Eckersley, Godley, etc., all sent in some remarkably good specimens. The novice classes were quite "hot stuff," the six classes having an average of twenty-one birds.

Yorkshires were splendid as was only to be expected when such men as Messrs. Dykes, Hartley, Wells, and Clempson, Hirst, Dr. Craig, etc., were sending in some of their best. We noticed among the exhibitors a South country firm, Messrs. Frost and Rogers, all the way from Brighton, and so well did their birds compare with the Northern specimens, that with some half dozen entries, they managed every time to get either in the money or the cards, quite a creditable performance. Here again the novices made a big show, every class being well filled with excellent examples.

Hybrids and British were an interesting lot, well known winners competing once more. Mr. Chick's clear Greenfinch-Canary attracted a lot of attention. The same exhibitor had winners in several other classes. Mr. Parlett's Linnet and Mr. Gibbon's Bullfinch both repeated their Cardiff successes.

The management was excellent, particularly remembering the difficulty show managers and secretaries have in getting assistance at these times, but Messrs. A. C. Sbirley, J. Bastock, and J. H. de Maillet rose to the occasion, and everything went off splendidly, assistance was freely given by Messrs. Ward, Wells, Derry, Westwood, A. J. Smith, and W. Smith, also Messrs. Collier and Fessy, who erected the staging. Mr. J. H. Roe judged Norwich, Champ. Yorks., and Crests, and Mr. H. Norman the remainder. We are pleased to be able to report that the attendance was excellent.

CODNOR PARK AND EASTWOOD.

Seventh annual exhibition, Nov. 25. The Assembly Room, attached to the "Three Nuns," is of good size, nice light, and void of draughts, a capital venue. The entry came up exceedingly well, nearly 300 specimens, grandly staged, the like, all easy to scrutinize. Norwich were a very fine collection, and amongst the novices some outstanding birds were staged. Yorkshires lacked numbers, but quality was well to the fore. British were a treat, many well-known winners being on view. Hardly a moderate specimen amongst them.

Special best members' Canary, Mr. W. Bradley. Stewards, Messrs. B. Simpson, P. Potts, and J. Admitt, proved themselves a rare trio; all work with a will and deserve praise.

Mr. W. Harrison efficiently looked after the watering of the exhibits, even using luke-warm water as it was a very cold day, a creditable thought.

Messrs. A. Smith and G. Lees acted as secretaries, and though unfortunately Mr. Lees was unable to be present on show day, he had done his bit previously. Mr. L. Parson acted in his stead, and everything went smoothly.

At one end of the room the special prizes were displayed, and they were a grand lot of silver cups and cruets, and other valuable trophies. The show was well patronised. Mr. J. H. Roe judged.

READING.

Fifteenth annual open show of the Reading C.B.S, in the Palmer Hall, Nov. 22. To those members who are not serving with H.M. Forces, and had decided to keep things going, the result was more than satisfactory, entries in open classes exceeding those of last year by 26, and as the foreign classes were cancelled this meant an increase of 60 birds in the other classes. Members' classes were not very strong except in the amateur classes, but when something like twenty members are doing duty elsewhere, this was to be expected.

The open Norwich were a grand lot of birds, the merit throughout being of an even standard, and the judge had no easy task in picking the winners. Yorks, too, were a capital lot, many being cardloss that will be winners later on. When the Society decided to extend the Border classes they did the right thing, for the wee gems were in force; 55 in four classes is an entry which speaks for itself, and congratulations are extended to Mr. Bennet who sent a hot team all the way from Kelso, and was the principal prize-winner. Goldfinches were poor in entry and in quality, the winner standing out high above the others. An entry of twenty-two in an A.O. British Hardbill class is "hot stuff" indeed. Mr. H. J. Chick won 1st with his noted Hawfinch, and 3rd with a beautiful Yellow Bunting; Mr. W. Francis split them with a lovely Linnet, which fully deserved the second prize. Only two Softbills, but two of the best, a Waxwing and Wheatear. Hybrids were undoubtedly the finest ever seen at Reading. Mr. F. J. Lamb's Redpoll-Bullie being a grand specimen. Dark Mules made another hot class, a Redpoll-Canary and Siskin-Canary, two very fine birds, having to go home without cards. Only five Light Mules, but the cream of the Fancy, Mr. Chick's wonderful clear yellow Greenfinch-Canary being greatly admired. This bird has turned even Mr. Chick to exhibiting other than British. If he is as successful in his new venture as he has been for many years in British he will not be sorry that he has opened out in a new direction.

In members' classes Mr. F. Wilson was the most successful exhibitor, winning the most points cup, amateur cup, and tieing with O. C. Smith for cup with most wins with own bred birds, 3 wins each. Miss C. Garland also exhibited some fine Yorks, two of them being claimed by well known breeders. To Messrs. Foster, Upton, Larkcom and Frewin all praise is due for their excellent work in staging, fetching birds from station, unpacking, and repacking birds; they worked like niggers, while Mrs. O. C. Smith gave great help in attending to the wants of birds and taking her turn with Mr. Frewin at the door. Although all worked with a will, and each did his part, much of the success of the show is due to the untiring labours of Mr. Smith, the hon. sec. Mr. Robson judged.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Annual Show, Nov. 25, Oldham Hall; 323 entries; Mr. C. A. House, judged and gave satisfaction. The birds were well staged, for which we have to thank Mr. Bunner, also thanks are due to Mr. Parsons for his kindly help throughout the day. There were many visitors, and together with our members we had quite a busy time. We would have been better in a larger hall. The specials were presented at the close of the show by our worthy chairman. We thank the donors of the specials which were highly appreciated by those who had the pleasure to win them. We regret the disappointment of our member, Mr. Bray, of Earlstown, it was purely accidental, and we hope that such will not occur in the future. The show was a huge success, financial and otherwise. The gift class realised 12s. 6d., which has been forwarded to the benefit of our wounded soldiers in the Liverpool district.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Third annual show (which it was considered advisable this year to confine to members). Kingsland Hall, Nov. 29. Despite the number of members taken for H.M. Forces, the show proved a success in every way. Entries numbered nearly 200, a very few below last year's total. A band of hard workers had the hall fixed up and decorated overnight, and all birds to hand arranged and attended. On the show morning late arrivals were staged so expeditiously that the judge was early at work, and all labels were on cages an hour before opening time, almost a record for shows. The Young Bird Cup was won by Mr. E. Chandler's wing mkd. buff Nor., which also took special 2nd best bird in show. The fine Crest of Miss Onslow took the champion Canary cup and spl best bird. Novice Canary Cup, Hartnell. British or Hybrid cup, Parsons, with a fine Goldie-Bullie. Mr. Slade becomes the owner of the Foreign Cup, winning it for the third time, his Yellow-winged Sugar Bird doing the needful, the veteran Tanager, which had won cup for two years, having to take second place. British made a goodly array, especially the Goldfinches of which there was a fine class of 15. The show was well patronised, especially in the evening, when Mrs Della Gana (vice-pres. elect) kindly presented the cups, etc. J. Robson Judged.

FAIRHEAD C.B.S.

Annual show, confined to Fife, Nov. 25, New Co-operative Hall, Commercial St. This hall is well adapted for a show, being well lit, very comfortable, and free from draughts. Mr. Thomson makes an ideal sec., and had every assistance from a well seasoned show official in W. R. Gibson. They were well backed up by a hard working committee, who saw to every need of judges and birds. The judges had a hard day's work, as there was a great array of specials. There was an entry of close on 300 birds, and quality was of the best. Scotch Fancy and Norwich were both very good, as also were Borders; this variety is gathering in a great array of recruits to the fancy. Judges: Scotch Fancy, Mr. J. Steuhouse, Kelty; Bord. and Nor., Mr. J. McLay, Kirkintilloch; British and Foreign, Mr. J. Mackie, Frenchie.

WIGAN.

Radius open show (15 miles), "Legs of Man" Assembly Rooms, Dec. 2. In a small classification a very decent entry resulted; some excellent Norwich were on view, and a fine quality lot in Yorkshires. Mr. Pomphrett's buff cock, a very grand clear bird, took special best bird, it being a toss up between this and Mr. McAndrews' old champion buff Norwich cock. Mr. Heaketh had the three Border classes all to himself with two good ones in each class. British birds were fairly decent, and some very good Norwich Greens were shown. Specials were won by Messrs. Pomphrett, Topping, Nicholls, and Johnson (2). Messrs. McAndrew and Sheard carried out official duties, and they worked well together. Plenty of visitors were streaming in as soon as the show opened at 2 p.m. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and all seemed pleased. Cl., etc., Nor. Ck. Huggins; asst., C. A Harris. Balance-sheet passed and considered very satisfactory. Arranged to have a pair show Feb. 15, young stock show July 19. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the president for presiding.—H. L. Hugging, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Dec. 5, Mr. W. G. Fellows, chair; hon. sec. stated accounts of Annual Show was not yet complete, but would probably show a deficit of a few shillings, mainly due to entertainment tax, but for which the balance would have been the other way; considering the increase in cost of stationery, etc., this was not a bad result. Entries exceeded anticipations, especially when the number of members who have joined up is taken into account. Everything had passed off smoothly, and the committee had received many congratulations on the number and quality of exhibits, and the manner in which they were arranged. Vote of thanks to the stewards, Messrs. Melhuish, Washer, and Chandler were passed. The consideration of some suggestions for next season closed the meeting.—G. J. Slade, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Dec 7, Mr. Jones, presiding. Officials for 1917: Mr. Hemming, pres., Messrs. Jones and Bingham, vice.-pres.; committee, Messrs. Walsh, Champion, Furness, Drabble, Falkding, J. Woolhouse, Tow, Pickering, Waters, Goodison, Curley, Gell; treas., Mr. Oxley; sec., Mr. Hobson. Table show result, Nov. Nor.: 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc c Gill; hc, Sisson. One member only brought Yorks. and there was no competition—which was disappointing, as he stood well for the points special. Decided that in future birds brought should be judged and points count. Meeting, Jan. 4, is a table show of pairs or single birds, and every bird must be marked with the price. Several members were enquiring for birds, and this is to give them a chance. Usual prize money with 10s. added.—E. Sisson, Assist. Sec.

BLAENAVON C.B.S.

Meeting, Dec. 7, Crown Hotel, chair W. J. Lapworth. A good turn-up of members. We were pleased to see among us Mr. J. Daniel, he being home from the front. Members were paid prize money won at open show. Officers for 1917 were elected: Chair, C. S. Latham; vice-chairman, E. Gilbert; sec. and treas., Geo. Broome; auditors, W. J. Lapworth and J. Pitt. The report to be given at next meeting. Members show, matched pairs, Jan. 11th. Yellow Ck. and Buff Hen and Buff Ck. and Yellow Hen, in Norwich, Yorks. and Borders; 2/6 special, most points in each section. Mr. J. Daniel gives 5/- special for best pair. Also a judging competition; three prizes, 6 lb. of Canary seed each. Judge, Chas. Broome. Enter as many birds as possible, and bring a friend, as we want to make a few more members. Birds staged 6.30. Friends invited.—Geo. Broome, hon. sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting Dec. 5. Secretary stated that although he could not yet produce definite figures he was afraid that the association would have to face a loss of from £8 to £10 on the recent show. The meeting was of opinion that in view of all the circumstances, this was only what was anticipated and that the association is to be congratulated that, even when the war had brought the Fancy to its lowest ebb, this society still maintained an unbroken continuity of open shows. Secretary announced the winners of the various cups and medals as follows: Mayoress' Cup, Mr. Clarke; it now becomes his absolute property. Mr. Clarke has also won the Canary Cup. British Bird Cup, Mr. Francis; Mr. Cooper won gold medal for most points in all shows throughout year. Medals for most points, Messrs. Greenland, Francis, Clarke, Taylor, Westrip, Cooper, Vale, and Maxwell. Mr. Geo. Howick was nominated for membership.—A. R. Coe.

DURHAM CITY C.B.S.

Meeting, Nov. 25, Grapes Inn, Durham, with a good attendance. Sec. announced that Mr. G. H. Proctor, Durham, had consented to act as president, and Mr. Tom Trotter and T. H. Cam as vice-presidents. We had seven more new members and still have room for more. Schedule was drawn up for the first annual members' show, with eleven classes for Norwich (2 Nov.), 9 Crests (1 Nov.), 11 Yorks. (2 Nov.), 8 Bord. (2 Nov.), 1 A.O.V., 2 Mules, 12 Brit., 1 For., 3 Sell. Fee 1s. We are trying an innovation in entries. Anyone making more than one entry in class the extra entries to be 9d. each. Decided to get the Shakespeare Hall for show. Mr. J. Hands, Ryton, and J. Riseborough were elected to judge. Committee: J. Stanger, R. Boyd, T. Roddam, J. Farrey, J. Briggs, A. Bailes, F. Bushby, J. McNay, A. E. Priest, R. Ward, J. Gillespie. The society is open for membership to anyone.—Henry Briggs.

PLASMARL C.B.S

Social evening and supper, Headquarters, George and Dragon Hotel, Nov. 15. After a splendid repast, put down by Mr. and Mrs. Hart, Mr. Henry Jenkins was voted to the chair. The auditors' report was read and showed that although the society has only been in existence six months, and had already run an open show, there was still a balance of £8 in hand, a very satisfactory state of affairs. The chairman had a very pleasing duty to perform in presenting the sec., Mr. H Fry, and assist sec., Mr. D. Rees, with a cheque apiece, as a small token of the society's gratitude for their excellent services, and to Mr. Alf. Hitchings, the genial show manager, a gold seal, subscribed for by his fellow members as a slight token of his services and advice during the season. After the recipients had suitably responded the election of officers for the ensuing year took place, and it was decided to elect the old officials en bloc. Pres., Coun. W. G. Lloyd; chair, T. James; vice, W. Loosemore; show manager, A. Hitchings; sec., H. Fry; assist. sec., D. Rees. The remainder of the evening was given over to music, songs being rendered by Messrs. T. James, W. H. Llewellyn, W. Loosemore, and W. Hart. The usual vote of thanks to the host and hostess, to which Friend Hart responded, wishing the society every success, and promising substantial support for next season, brought to a close one of the pleasantest evenings in the annals of the society.

CANARY QUERIES

AILING NORWICH.

St. Crispin.—You ought to have repeated full particulars of the bird's condition, and also of your treatment and how you keep it, as I do not remember the full details of every case I have. Anyway, try the following treatment for a month or so, and if there is not then a considerable improvement, and the bird is a valuable specimen, I would advise you to show it to a veterinary for advice, as a personal examination may be essential to understand the condition of the skin which you describe, assuming, of course, that it is not due to the irritating effects of red mites, in which case the effects will soon disappear under this treatment. First of all thoroughly examine the cage and the place where it hangs or stands for the presence of red mites, especially looking into the joints and corners to see if there is any white powdery matter adhering to the cage. If there is, this is the hall-mark of the red mite, and you will be sure to find a colony ensconced in some crevice close at hand. Even if no such marks are found, stand the cage on a sheet of paper and clean it thoroughly, raking all dust, etc., out of any open joints or cracks with a pin and see what is discovered. If any mites are found cake the necessary steps to exterminate them as frequently described in detail in this column. For the rest, treat as follows: Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give separately every third day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats. On the intervening days give first a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, and next give a morsel of banana, boiled carrot, or a spray of watercress, and on these days add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. After the first fortnight, if the irritation has ceased, stop the latter item, and give instead 20 drops of chemical food every third day in the water for two or three weeks. Allow the bird to bathe on each bright, mild day if it desires to do so, but do not attempt any forcible means of bathing him.

PANTS AT NIGHT.

R. W.—I expect that "the usual canary seed" which you say forms the bird's diet really consists of a conglomeration of many seeds mixed together. See that the bird is not exposed to any direct cold draughts, nor the fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling, where the air is always the most vitiated and impure, especially at night when lights are burning. Keep it in a nice, bright, healthy position consistent with the above suggestions, and let it be a fairly equable one. Give a mixture of three parts canary seed (the one kind only, which is of a light straw colour) to one part summer rape—the small reddish-brown seed. In addition, give separately twice a week half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, and on two other days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge or Madeira cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Three or four times a week give a morsel of sweet fruit—banana, boiled carrot, or sweet apple. In the drinking water, for three consecutive days, add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and after this give instead four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight.

STANDS ON ONE LEG.

S. W. B.—I'm afraid I cannot be of much use to you without more definite particulars, and especially what you mean by the back part of her body. Is it at the lower part of the back in the region of the oil gland, i.e., close to the base, or root, of the tail? I think you had better write again and describe the position fully, and also describe as near as you can the size and appearance of the inflamed part, and say if there is any swelling or apparent growth on or under the skin. Meantime, keep in a fairly warm place where the temperature is fairly equable, and treat as follows until you get a further reply. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days just a pinch of summer rape and a morsel of banana. In the water, every second day for a week, add six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea.

BIRDHOUSE AND SONGSTERS.

T. T. B.—(1) The ventilators in the top angles of the two ends are quite correct, but I cannot see that you have provided for any inlet for fresh pure air near the floor. If you have not done so, you should make a similar ventilating aperture about the middle of the front near or on the floor of the house, and fit it with a shield inside to direct the current of incoming air upwards, to prevent it going direct into the flights. This may not seem necessary just now, but its use will be felt in hot sultry weather when the house is shut up at night, and for the more temperate and cold months you can very easily fit it with a sliding shutter. I think you would also be wise to hinge the small window in the end opposite the door for similar reasons, as in sultry weather with this window and the door open the house might be kept nicely aired and cool without any danger of draughts doing any mischief. (2) Threequarter-inch mesh netting would do all right to cover the flights so long as there was no defect, and, in the case of Rollers, no very wild specimens, but in either of the latter events you would probably find an occasional escape, and if mice got into the house they would find no difficulty in going through ½-in. netting into these flights. The object being to see the birds better, why not have the usual straight wire fronts made on punched bars for the flights. You could get these made cheaply almost anywhere, and in any size to fit special cages. The effect would be well worth the little extra cost. (3) Seven or eight birds the size of a Norwich Canary would be sufficient to keep in each of the flights, but during the young bird season, with strict attention to cleanliness, you might temporarily keep ten or twelve in each. (4) Yes, as songsters, Roller cocks mated with Norwich hens of good type and colour, will produce a greatly improved type of bird to look at, and also a very good type of song, but you would find a much more rapid improvement in rich tone of natural colour by working the double cross, viz., one or two pairs composed of Roller cocks and ditto composed of rich colour, natural colour, of course, Norwich cocks and Roller hens, and training the young cocks exclusively under the pure Rollers. In the second season you would pair the young from the Roller cocks with those from the Norwich cocks, and again train the young solely under the pure Rollers. Bred under these conditions the song of the youngsters would most certainly be worth the trouble, and should command fair prices. (5) Keeping a few Britishers and trying also for Mules in the same place, which is quite small, would undoubtedly tend to reduce the standard of the Canaries' song, and it is doubtful if the pure Roller cocks would retain their song without a blemish from one season to the next under these conditions. If you intend going in for breeding songsters seriously in this place, you would do well to give up the idea of keeping British or trying for Mules, unless you could manage to build another house separately on similar lines to accommodate this branch of the hobby.

CAGES FOR BLACKBIRDS.

Maux.—The cases you intend making into Blackbird cages will do admirably. The width is the same as is generally used. Before you fit them up I would advise you to get our Nutshell booklet No. 4. In it you will find an illustration of two cages suitable for Blackbird or Thrush, and a good deal of reading matter of an interesting character about these birds. (2) Use ordinary oil paint, adding a little extra turpentine to it, so that it dries flat, without much body, then there will be none to chip off, and periodically you can give the cages a good scrubbing and another coat of thin paint. (3) If your bird is a cock he will sing at the turn of the year, when the days begin to lengthen. Thrushes and Larks are not good tutors for Blackbirds. The deliberate character of the Blackbird's true song is one of the chief charms of it; they are great mimics and if trained under the birds you suggest I fear it will no longer be the melodious Blackbird note, but a medley of bird song. (4) For your aviary I would suggest all Finches, they will do better by themselves, although it is possible to keep softbills in with them, but when this is done the Finches frequently feed largely on the soft food provided for the softbills. If it faces a position from which you get strong winds I would advise a screen of some kind. Can you plant two or three evergreens in front of it?

CAGE FOR LINNET.

J. P. Thompson.—A cage to keep a Linnet in should be a box cage with wire front measuring sixteen inches long, ten high, and eight or nine deep. You will find a sketch of one in the Nutshell No. 2 on the Linnet. I like the following seed mixture: 2 parts each of Canary, teazle, and rape, and one part of linseed. Give a little wild seed mixture and various weeds and green-food.

FEEDING A BLACKBIRD.

J. Brownsell.—Blackbirds can be fed upon various mixtures, but as a rule the better the food the healthier the bird and the more song you get out of him. Insectile food stands first, consisting of ants' eggs, dried flies, meat meal, etc., with an addition of biscuit powder. This you can purchase ready mixed; it is really intended for Warblers and Nightingales, and need not be used continually for a Blackbird. You can vary it by giving best quality chicken meal with a spoonful of meat meal or fine crissel soaked in with it, and a little boiled potato added. Get our Nutshell Nos. 4 or 26, either will tell you how to feed and treat both Blackbirds and Thrushes.

SAMPLE OF SEED.

Hastings.—The sample of seed sent contains many useful kinds. I would advise you to let the Finches, Mules and Canaries pick it over and make their own selection. Do not use it as a staple food; just give a spoonful per bird two or three times a week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

WILL BUDGERIGARS DIE IF SEPARATED?

Budge.—No, but they may mope a little at first, though this will be quite a temporary feature. Do not put them in small cages, as Budgerigars are cheerful, active birds, and no birds suffer more quickly in health from the lack of wing exercise than they do. Also, while not putting them where they will be scared by rushing movements, or where they will be in the way of currents of cold air or draught; yet they must not be kept in a dark corner, but must have light and air. If you can so arrange it, occasionally a fly around the room will greatly benefit them, and tend to keep them fit; they will return to their cage when wanting food. Of course, there should be a fireguard, and windows and doors must be kept closed while they enjoy a little liberty.

MORE ABOUT BUDGERIGARS.

Esperance.—In reply to your queries I should suggest using husks only as the best course. If the newly-acquired young birds have come straight from an outdoor aviary, then put them in the aviary at once; they are not yet in breeding condition, so no trouble should accrue, but give them one day in the aviary before putting in tho others. If the latter are in occupancy, then the young birds also must go in, though they may get chased about a bit the first day. I should then take out the young hen as soon as you are certain of sex; she will develop better away from the other birds. I gave my reasons for advising only one pair; your birds are not amiable with each other, and I said under the circumstances try the one pair alone which has shown most inclination for nesting, but as you are changing the hens, it is obvious that your course is to have all three pairs in the aviary next season. In any aviary not overcrowded it is usual to put the sand in about half an inch thick, rake or lightly scrape all refuse off weekly, and renew the whole every two or three months. Of course, sand absorbs the moist portion of the excreta, and when it is sifted and used again, some portion of the first lot of sand may be in use for a twelve-month; I consider the former the better practice. The sample of sand was an average one, and quite suitable.

GENERAL.

CATCHING GOLDFINCHES.

H. Portlock.—The Goldfinch is protected throughout the year in your county, Monmouth, and it would therefore be illegal to take it at any time.

IDENTITY OF BIRD.

H. Cox.—The bird is a young hen Stonechat. The Stonechat is entirely an insectivorous bird, and one of the most difficult of all to "meat off" when first caught. Its keeping in captivity should be attempted only by those with considerable experience in bird-keeping. There is no wonder that the poor bird died when you did not even know what it was, and could, therefore, not possibly know the food it required. You would do well in future not to take any bird the keeping of which you do not understand. Please see Rule 7 as to replies by post.

THRUSH-BLACKBIRD HYBRIDS.

Breeder of Hybrids.—Please see reply of last week under this heading. We quite agree with your sentiment, but it would be of no earthly use making the suggestion you propose.

AN ANONYMOUS COMMUNICATION.

Barnet Postmark.—What are you afraid of? If you have anything to say, please say it and put your name to your statement, and we promise you it shall be dealt with. In making a guess at the meaning of what you have sent, we are prepared to tell you that you are suggesting something which under present restrictions is impossible, whatever might have been the case in the past. Anyone who can evade the present law is clever indeed, and would almost deserve any profit he could make by his cleverness.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's

Malbranks.—Death resulted from liver disease. This organ was very much enlarged, had undergone fatty degeneration, and had lost all functional activity due, in my opinion, to dietetic causes.

Mrs. I. Bailey.—Enteritis, inflammation of the bowels resulting from liver disease. The liver was in an advanced stage of fatty degeneration.

Mrs. Lear.—Death, in all probability, was due in each case to eating the enclosed plant, which is poisonous to birds, under certain conditions.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona-fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

FredAllen wishes you all A Merry Xmas.

Gentlemen, I thank you most heartily for your patronage. I shall, as always, do my best to please my customers and give the best possible value. I have thousands of testimonials from all over the World. The Editor has also received two large batches of testimonials from me. Unfortunately, owing to the present crisis, the railway company has been compelled to refuse all live stock until after the holidays. I have therefore a great many orders delayed, but these will be despatched at the earliest possible moment. I have hundreds of Linnets, Redpolls, Goldfinches, Chaffinches, Larks, Twites, Canaries, Linnet and Goldfinch Mules, etc., so intending purchasers should write me an order from last week's advt. All orders will be despatched before the New Year.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

LEYTON C.B.S.

Meeting headquarters, Dec. 4, Mr. Wallace, chair. A bird washing demonstration was given by Messrs. Purday, East and Farmer. While the birds were drying, the prizes and cups won at the annual show were distributed by president Mr. S. C. Rhodes, and afterwards a very interesting discussion was held on the various methods of washing a bird for exhibition. The inter club show, which was last Jan., held at the headquarters of the East Ham C. B. S., will this coming Jan. take place at Leyton, and members of the societies concerned will receive due notification.—A. W. Farmer, Assistant Hon. Sec.

GRIMSBY O.S.

Grewar, Sec., pro tem.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES

Meeting, Dec. 4, Deansgate Hotel, Mr. Raynes, presided. Mr. T. Johnson was elected judge for members' show, Jan. 20, at Bennett St. Schools. Syllabus for next year was completed, comprising lectures on different varieties by well known fanciers, also table shows for all varieties, and washing competitions. Next meeting night is fixed for balance-sheet for 1916, nomination of officers for 1917 and January show business. If any member who cannot attend would like any rule altered please let me have notice of motion before the 18th, so that same can be placed before members present. —J. Green, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting, Dec. 13, Shield's Cafe, Mr. W. Wigglesworth chair, and a fair turn-up. Decided that Yorkshire fanciers in the four Northern counties wishing to show at our annual show, Jan. 1, can do so by sending their entrance money (3s 6d.) along with their entry forms. I shall be pleased to forward schedules to anyone who may wish. We have 21 classes for Yorkshires only, and many very good specials, besides cups. Mr. Jas. Bailey, Bradford, judge. Mr. Tindall was appointed show manager, and the following as stewards: Messrs. W Wigglesworth, W. Studholme, J. A. Key, and Wm. Mathes. —R. Havis, Hon. Sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

General meeting, Dec. 5, St. Thomas' Schools, Ardwick. Mr. T. Lane presided over a good muster to hear Mr. J. Beswick lecture on British birds and Mule breeding. He dealt with the most prominent of our British birds, giving the method of feeding throughout the winter to bring them in condition for the breeding season. He also explained the kind of hens required for Mule breeding. A very interesting discussion followed, many members taking part. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Beswick for the very instructive lecture. Proposed to hold an annual members' show in January, the committee to be instructed to meet at an early opportunity to make full arrangements and bring the business to the next general meeting for approval. We hope that as many members will attend the next meeting to hear the very important conditions of this new fixture.—J. Spencer.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Monthly meeting, headquarters, Dec. 14, Mr. Ewan chair. The accounts of the annual show were presented and agreed to. This year the accounts show a balance on the right side. The Treasurer reported that all demands on the Association were now paid, and that there will be a good margin to commence the ensuing year. Thanks are due to the Treasurer for the energy he has displayed to bring the Association up to its present splendid position. The committee thank all those who so liberally assisted our specials fund, the specials for this year being the best the Association has had for many years. During the meeting two cups were promised for next year, and there is every likelihood that we shall have cups for each of the sections. Our worthy President attended the meeting, and the members present discussed the past year's experience, which brought forth many reminiscences. Several notices of motion were laid upon the table for discussion at next meeting.—Thos. R. Jones, Sec.

EAST ANGLIAN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting, Dec. 14, Festival House, Norwich. The number present was not large owing to the night being the darkest we have experienced in this city this winter. Mr. R. Vines, who attended the recent Ipswich show as a delegate from the Club, reported that members had good reason to be satisfied with the result of this the first patronage of the club. The show was exceedingly well attended, and the open classes were the centre of attraction. There appeared to be great promise of success another year if these classes are carried out in accordance with the rules, etc., of this specialist club. Mr. Vines was thanked for his very interesting report. A discussion followed. Reference was made to the prospect of an open show in Norwich, but the chairman of the society concerned, who was present, was unable to give any definite information.—R. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Meeting headquarters, Dec. 4, Mr. W. J. Heath presiding over a fair attendance. Letters were read from Messrs. Marriott, Wade and Ramsey. Mr. J. Montague, Redhill, was elected a member and Messrs. D. W. Oliver (South Croydon) and J. G. Paterson (Wolingham) proposed for membership. The schedule of annual show compiled by the committee was submitted and gave general satisfaction, 30 classes being arranged. In addition to specials already promised, Mr. Birch gave special in British class, and Mr. Heath special best Yorks. Mr. J. Robson was elected as judge and date fixed for Jan. 23 at Queen's Hall. At the table show, which followed, Mr. Dewhurst judged Yorks., Mr. E. J. Lamb Hybrids, and Mr. Farley Borders, and their placings gave general satisfaction.

Yorks. Yell.: 1, vhc, Harris; 2, Smith; 3, Griffiths; hc, c, Farley. Buff: 1, sp, 3, Smith; 2, Harris; vhc, Heath; hc, Farley; c, Griffiths. Bord.: 1, 2, Collins. Hybrids: 1, sp, 2, 3, vhc, Snow; hc, Collins; c, Farley. In the judging competition the points gained were: Farley 23, Miss Worrall 22, Snow 21, Birch 21, Nash 17, Harris 15, Miss Farley 12, Smith 9, Heath 5. Vote of thanks to judges brought an interesting meeting to a close.—G. Griffiths, hon. sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Meeting Dec. 16, Prince of Wales Hotel, Mr. J. Parfitt presiding. Officers elected for 1917:—Pres., R. H. Campion; Chair., W. Cooper; Vice-Chair, A. Parfitt; Treas., J. Pritchard; Assts Secs., Mr. Webber; Sec., H. H. Mortimer. Committee:—Messrs. Newell, Hyde, Brisco, Scott, Powell and J. Parfitt. Auditors:—Mr. J. W. Bibbings and E. Monte. Decided to discuss business re Pair Show at next meeting. I am very pleased to report that we have handed over to the Abertillery Penny Fund (for the wounded and prisoners of war), the handsome sum of £25, profits made at our last open show. Now members, please rally up to our next meeting, Dec. 30. Fanciers wishing to become members should attend the next meeting or apply to the Hon. Sec., H. H. Mortimer, 90, Somerset Street, Abertillery.

WELSH N. COUNTIES F. & F.A.

Committee meeting, Washington Hotel, Craig-y-don, Llandudno, Dec 13. Present, Mrs. Brigg, Messrs. Jas. Arundale, Geo. Hughes, Jno. Hughes, T. Barlow, H. M. Brigg, A. Carter, W. Hartle, A. Hinton, R. Mostyn, E. D. Rowland, B. Sowter, and the Sec. Statement of accounts to date for the current year was perused, and showed that the Association had a credit balance in hand of between £4 and £5. Unanimously agreed that the secretary's salary be paid in full. In thanking the Committee for their resolution to this effect, the Secretary said that under present conditions he would not take the full amount, but would make a rebate of £2 to the funds. Decided that the challenge cups won at the 1915 show be called in and held by the Sec. Decided to hold the annual general meeting last Wed. in Jan. as usual, and notify members of same through the local and Fancy Press. After the business of the meeting, an informal discussion ensued as to the possibility of carrying on during 1917 by holding an annual show. The feeling of those present appeared to be in favour of running a show should circumstances permit. The Secretary said that since the last meeting the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Brigg had taken place, and on behalf of those present offered them their congratulations on the happy event, and wished them every happiness and prosperity. Mr. Brigg suitably responded, and thanked the Committee for their good wishes.—G. E. Cragg., Sec.

HAMILTON.

Open show of the Hamilton C.B.S. in the Town Hall, Dec. 9, under the distinguished patronage of Provost Moffat, the Duchess of Hamilton, Mrs. Colville, Lord Newlands, Sheriff Sheuman, Sir Thomas Munro, and others. This is the second charity show run by the management to relieve distress caused by the war, and judging by what was achieved last year, and the response to the present appeal for help, both in entries (which were about 750) and by visitors to the show, which was crowded to the extent of making things rather uncomfortable, last year's results promised to be eclipsed easily and a handsome sum handed over for the prisoners of war and other local relief funds.

The management was in very capable hands, and every care was given to the safety and comfort of the exhibits. Mr. John Braidwood, President; Mr. W. S. Wilson, sec. and treas.; Mr. A. Clark, auditor; Committee, Messrs. McLinden, Martin, Higgins, Haddon, Thomson, Houston, Reid, McEwan, Glass and Naismith. Judges were: Scots Fancy Mr. A. Allardice, Overtown; Norwich, W. Grewar, Lochgelly; British, etc., W. P. Campbell, Larkhall, and A. Crawford, Cambuslang; Borders, T. Ritchie, Lesmahagow, and W. S. Clark, Irvine, who disposed of the various sections in good time and with general satisfaction.

SOUTH SHIELDS (Always Ready)

With an entry of 330 the first show of South Shields "Always Ready," St. Thomas' Institute, Nov. 18, may well be described as a great success, especially when the excellent quality of the exhibits is considered and the large amount of patronage given to the event by the public. The birds were staged in a large and cosy room, free from draughts. All the office-bearers are fanciers of the right stamp, and all show the greatest enthusiasm for the welfare or exhibitors, visitors, and judges. The stewards (Messrs. J. S. Dixon, R. Barnes, J. Gleghorn, G. Scott, A. Hirons, S. Bewick, R. Armstrong, W. Duke, E. Coppock) were always at their posts, and everything went on smoothly under their direction. The staging was erected by J. F. Curry, one of the best, always ready to do anything for the welfare of the society. The Sec., J. W. Watson (his first year in the position), is the right man in the right place and untiring in his efforts. The judges were Mr. J. Johnson (Wallsend), Mr. Woodhouse (South Shields), and their awards were highly satisfactory. Competition was exceptionally keen for the prizes, which included three handsome trophies and 53 specials. Silver challenge cup presented by Mr. C. A. Cochrane, M.P. for borough, for best bird, was won by R. Armstrong with a tip-top dark green Crest. Silver bowl by T. T. Anderson for best members' young bird, G. Greenwell, with a good yell. green Bord. cock; and the J. F. Curry bowl for a member who has never exhibited before 1916, W. Conner, with a yellow Nor. In presenting the trophies, Mr. C. Cochrane, M.P., the president of the society, congratulated the members on their magnificent initial effort, and also referred in terms of warm praise to the services of the secretary.

EAST HAM F.S.

Eighth annual show, Central Liberal Club, Dec. 2. Entries came up fairly well, and quality was such as the members may well feel proud of. Cup best bird bred by exhibitor, gold medal, and diploma were won by Mr. W. Brows, with a grand shaped, close and silky feathered buff Norwich. Mr. Thompson won Novice cup with a very nice Bramblefinch; silver spoon for best in section, cup, and medal, winner barred, was won by Mr. A. C. Bosher, with a very fine Rock Parrot; Mr. G. Gardner judged.

Yorks Yell. Ck.: 1, 2, Blows, typical and well shown; 3, res, Wadsworth, just a little open at chest and not so well tapered. Buff: 1, Blows, again very shapely and well shown. Nor. Yell. Ck.: 1, Blows. Buff: 1, cup and medal, and diploma, 3, already referred to; 2, res, Bosher, nice col. and qual. Tkd., Etc.: 1, 2, Bosher, useful variegs. birds. Mules: 1, 2, Turney, Goldf.-Can. Goldf.: 1, Thompson, best face, clean cut collar, nice bars and buttons; 2, 3, Bosher, good Finches, lacking brightness; res, vhc, Turner; hc, Wadsworth. A.O.S. Finch: 1, Novice cup, Thompson, Brambling already alluded to; 2, Bosher. Linnet: 1, Bosher, nicely mkd. and steady. EDMONTON F.A.

Held in the Town Hall, Dec. 7, and in spite of the absence of many members, a good entry and keen competition resulted. Quality was of a very high order in all the Canary classes, though strange to say, British birds were conspicuous by their absence. Mr. S. N. Berriman, the able hon. sec., took up the duties at the end of last year, in succession to Mr. W. H. Jackson, who afterwards fell in action "somewhere in France," and right well has he filled the position. At the judges' luncheon the death of Mr. Jackson was very feelingly alluded to, one and all realising what a staunch friend he had been to the society; and at the same time appreciation of the way in which Mr. Berriman stepped into the breach was expressed. Mr. J. W. Tilley (asst. sec.) and Mr. C. Sorrell (chairman), as well as the other committeemen, rendered every assistance on the day of the show. Mr. G. Gardner judged. Cup best unflig. and cup and spl. best in show were won by Mr. W. Titchner, the first cup going to a short-bodied grand-headed nearly green of lovely quality, and the latter to a bouncing ticked buff, of charming feather. Yorks. cup, Mr. Olley, a finely tapered close feathered buff; other specials went to Messrs. Trevallion (2), Olley and Watts.

Nor. Cock: 1, cup, Titchner, already described; 2, spl, Trevallion, lovely cl. buff, grand type, head and wing carriage; 3, Olley, very nice yell.; res, Thurley. Hen: 1, spl, 3, Trevallion, 1st topping buff, 3rd nice yell.; 2, res, Thurley, very shapely varieg., close and compact, a good hen for the breeding cage. Unflig.: 1, cup, Titchner; 2, Thurley, tkd, yell., very shapely and silky in feather; 3, c, Trevallion; res, vhc, hc, Olley. Yorks., Cl. or Tkd.: 1, 2, 3, res, Olley, good team, all well balanced; vhc, Holmes. Hen: 1, cpl., 3, res, Olley, all A1, as were the whole of the six unflighted birds in the next class, shown by Mr. Olley. Crests: 1, spl, 2, Watts, the leader a nicely centred and radiated Crest, with one or two light feathers therein.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

7th annual show, Nov. 25, Tynecastle Church Halls. An ideal hall for a show, with plenty of room and a fair abundance of light these darkened times. The birds were nicely staged round the sides. Entries were about 460 and contained the cream of the Fancy in all sections. The office-bearers had everything in order for the comfort of everyone, the secretary, Mr. Charlton, being a host in himself and a pastmaster as secretary. The judges were: Nor., Mr. Dewar; Bord., Mr. W. Thomson; British, etc., Mr. Sykes. Mr. Dewar also took the 11 Scotch Fancies that were there in the 8 classes provided. The sooner something is done for this section, the better. Cup winners: Nor., G. R. Smith, with a grand Crest. Bord. and B.F.C. medal, C. Stewart; Brit., Allan. It was very gratifying to see such an array of specials.

KINGSWOOD (Bristol) F.S.

Annual open show, Miners' Hall, Kingswood, Dec. 13. Had the committee advertised the venture and catered for the cage birds in the available separate room, they would have felt justified in expecting a big success in our section. As it was, the entry was purely local, and the birds were poorly staged at the end of the show. The classes, although small, comprised some of Bristol's best, the majority having been in the lists at important shows. Points challenge cup was won by Mr. Greenslade. Mr. W. Bull judged, and appeared to give general satisfaction.

Yks. Ck., Adult (8): 1, 2, Hiscox; 3, Osborne; vhc, c, Greenslade; hc, Tozer. Hen (7): 1, 2, 3, Greenslade; vhc, hc, Hiscox; c, Osborne. Cl. Yell., 1916 (5): 1, sp, vhc, hc, Greenslade; 2, S. CHOPPINGTON (Scotland Gate).

Fourth annual members' show, Dec. 16, in the Social Club, a very nice hall, well fitted up for the occasion. Mr. H. Seeely, Sec., had everything in apple-pie order, and was well assisted by W. Carmichael, A. Stephenson, and F. Smith. Two hundred birds were staged, and made a splendid show. Mr. F. W. Laidlaw, Newcastle-on-Tyne, judged, and his awards were well received. Unflig. Nor. Yell. BACUP ROLLER C.C.

A NEW RECORD.

128 Entries in One Class.

Fifth annual open contest Nov. 24 and 25, at Park Hotel, Bacup, when the record entry of 320 birds was made in four classes. The committee are to be complimented on putting together the best schedule ever compiled in the history of the club. The late secretary, Mr. H. Wantling, having joined His Majesty's forces on Nov. 2, the club was left in the unfortunate position of having no secretary, and at the meeting held Nov. 7 Mr. Geo. Johnson was prevailed upon to take the position, which everyone will agree he has fulfilled in a most creditable manner. The show was held under the patronage of both the British and the Provincial Roller Clubs. Judges: Champion Young and Any Age, Mr. G. Wareing; Novice Young, Mr. J. Netherwood; Novice Any Age, Mr. J. T. Johnson.

S.W. LONDON C.B.S.

Twentieth annual members' show, "The Plough," St. John's Hill, S.W., Dec. 2. Judge, Mr. J. Robson. It was not a large show, many members being on active service and war work, but some fine birds were staged. The Champion Section held the winner of specials for best yellow Yorkshire, best bird in show, and best Canary, all won by Mr. Braham. Best unflighted Yorks, 2nd best in show, and most points, Hawkins. Best Nor., Braham. Best Bord., Goymer. In the Novice Section the competition was good in Yorkshires. Specials best bird in Section, most points, best yellow cock, and best unflighted, all won by Mr. Nason. Special best bird on "Ramsden's," Nason, with a splendid yell. Yorks. Other prominent winners were Messrs. Jeffry, Goymer, and Whitaker. During the evening the show was visited by a good number of the general public and several well-known fanciers, among whom were to be noticed Messrs. Vale, King, Johnson, Harris, and others. There were many enquiries re membership, and I think the society has a bright future.—J. Lilley, Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Charity Show in aid of the North Staffordshire Infirmary, held in conjunction with the Winter Garden, King's Hall, Stoke, Nov. 30. As anticipated the entries exceeded last year, and quality was much in advance. Competition proved keen in all sections, condition only turning the scales in many cases. British and Norwich sections were par excellence, and each contained specimens of high merit, many having proved a big attraction at open shows. Special best Norwich was won by Mr. Glover's unflighted yell. cock, a bird possessing true Norwich features. In Yorkshires the award went to Mr. Hawley's buff cock, a sweet exhibit, of nice proportions. Mr. Hartley's Twite secured sp. British, a highly polished bird, laced to perfection. A gift class was provided which contained four entries; they were sold by auction and realised £2, which went to the benefit of the infirmary. Mr. J. H. Roe, Birmingham, judged. BURNLEY O.S.

First show of Norwich Canaries only, Burnley C.B. clubroom, Dec. 2. It was intended to be held in their own clubhouse at the Star Inn, but some hitch arose in the arrangements and their rival club helped them out. The opinion was expressed that the two clubs would do well to join hands and make one strong club, as of old. There is scarcely room for two in Burnley. Entries came up very well, and the quality all through was excellent, the secretary, J. Rushton, and his assistant, J. Moorhouse, having all the arrangements well in hand. Prize money was paid out to the successful exhibitors present, and the room was cleared of all birds by 7.30. Mr. R. Braybrook, Brierfield, judged, and gave entire satisfaction at his first attempt.

WARRINGTON C.B.S.

Annual members' show, Blue Bell Sale Rooms, Dec. 2, and was a distinct success. A generous schedule brought in a total entry of 107. Competition for the special in the Border section with six nominated birds was very keen. Mr. Eckersley eventually won it by one point. We noticed several local gentlemen very much interested in the exhibits, and to these we extend a cordial invitation to join the society at our next meeting, 25th Jan., at which will be held a pair show on Thursday. Mr. A. Wellings judged and gave every satisfaction. Specials: Yorks., best bird, C. Walkden, a typical yellow hen; most points, W. R. Knowles; 2nd most points, Farrell. Nor., best bird, Barker, a lovely unflig. buff; most points, Barker and Weston, tie, but the former had precedence, owing to winning money. Bord., best bird, G. W. Nelson, a little "toff" of a yellow cock; most points, G. M. Nelson; 2, J. Eckersley. British and Mules, best bird, Jones, smart Goldfinch; most points, Leicester; 2, Clare and Eckersley, tie, but the former had precedence.

Twitterings.

Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) has been elected as judge at Clayeross, Jan. 13; Sutton in Ashfield, Jan. 20; Sheffield O.S., Nov. 2, 1917.

We gather from a club notice received that the National British Bird and Mule Club has changed its headquarters to "The Red Lion," York Street, Piccadilly.

All prize money and specials in connection with our show were posted by 10 p.m. on Monday, and not a single complaint about the return of exhibits has been received, writes Mr. W. S. Wilson, Sec., Hamilton, O.S.

Show Dates for 1917.

Mr. J. Green, hon. sec. Manchester and N. Counties O.S., writes that the 1917 show will be held on Oct. 26, 27, not on Oct. 28, 29, as stated in our issue of last week.

Thefts of Drinkers at Shows.

We have another complaint of the stealing of drinking tins from show cages, this time at Porth and Rhondda Valley show, where Mr. Idwal Daniels lost two tins. Surely something could be done to detect these petty thefts, which cause so much annoyance.

£25 for the Wounded and Prisoners of War.

Mr. H. H. Mortimer, hon. sec. of the Abertillery C.B.S., writes that as the result of the recent show at Abertillery, the handsome sum of £25 has been handed over for the benefit of wounded soldiers and prisoners of war.

A Marvellous Entry.

At the annual open Roller Canary contest of the Bacup Roller C.C., Nov. 24, 25, the four classes staged contained no less than 320 birds, the novice young bird class alone receiving the extraordinary entry of 123. Truly it is not "Roses, roses all the way" to judge a class such as this.

The Worst of Bad Luck.

My birds were too late for judging at Gateshead Show, although they were sent off at 2.22 on the day before the show, writes Mr. A. Hirst, Accrington. Hard lines, as this was the last show for O.N.P.C. competitions, and I was leading for the rose bowl, so it was a great disappointment for me.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Border Fancy C.C.—St. Cuthbert's Hall, King's Stables Road, Edinburgh, Dec. 30-Jan. 1. Judges: T. M'Creadie, J. W. Duncan, A. Forrest. 24 classes: 19 Open. 2 Nov., 3 Sell. Prizes, 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, 2/-, 1/-. Fee 1/6. Ent. close Dec. 23, to W. B. Smart, 13, High Street, Loanhead.

City of Glasgow O.A.—Central Halls, Bath-st., Jan. 3-4. Judges: J. Dalgleish, J. Carlaw, J. Higgins, J. Watson, D. Caldwell, D. Black, R. Martin, A. G. Cameron, J. Noble, G. Hyslop, T. Arnott, A. W. Watson, L. Arrighi. 107 classes: Scotch Fancy 19 (2 Sell.), Belg. 2, Nor. 20 (2 Sell., 2 Nov.), Crests 10 (2 Sell), Bord. 15 (2 Sell.), Yorks. 9, A O V 1, Mules 9 (1 Sell.), Brit. 16 (1 Sell.). For. 6. Prizes, 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, 2/-. Fee, 1/6. Entries close Dec. 23. Scotch and Belgians to J. Young, 76, Burn Road, Rutherglen; all others to R. Heggie, Stepps, Glasgow.

An Address Wanted.

Kindly ask Mr. Robert Thomson, Queen Street, off Milton Street, Motherwell, writes Mr. Wm. McMillan, Dumfries, to send his right address to me, as I have had two letters returned to me marked "not known." His letter was in reply to my advertisement in CAGE BIRDS.

Entries Extended at Edinburgh.

Owing to delay in getting out prize lists, writes Mr. J. Lumsden, hon. sec., the committee of the Border Fancy Show, to be held in Edinburgh on Dec. 30 and Jan. 1, have agreed to alter the date of entries closing to Dec. 26 instead of Dec. 23 as advertised in the prize list.

Corrections in Show Reports.

In the report of Bristol show, 4th in Bramblefinches should read Bobbett, not West. Three first prizes appearing in the Wigan report as being won by Pomphrett should read Pomfret. At Birmingham, 4th in Nov. Yell. Yorks. Hens, and 4th in Unflig. Yell. Yorks. should read Pye, not Page. At Reading Wren won 2, 3, and spl. in the Goldfinch class, not Smith.

OBITUARY.

The many friends of Mr. F. W. Laidlow, the popular secretary of Newcastle C.B.S., will be grieved to hear of the affliction which has befallen him in the sudden death of his little son at the age of fifteen months. Mr. Laidlow tells us that the little boy had never had a day's illness since he was born, and was playing about within ten minutes of his death. We are sure that all who know Mr. Laidlow will join us in sympathy with Mrs. Laidlow and himself in their bereavement.

Fanciers will grieve to hear of the sad blow which has befallen Mr. Holborow, the well-known Waunarlwydd fancier, whose wife died very suddenly after only a few days' illness, writes Mr. A. C. Richards, chairman. She was a true fancier and a keen judge of British birds, and Mr. Holborow often left the final decision to her. I am sure all bird lovers will join with the Swansea and District Society in their condolence to him and his daughter in their sad trial.

"CAGE BIRDS" ROLL OF HONOUR.

SIR,—It is with the deepest regret that I write to say that we have just had word that one of our members, Pte. W. A. Skipsey, 10th Batt. K.O.Y.L.I., has been killed in action. A great lover of British, one of his great ambitions was to have a first-class team, and he was well on the way to having this when he had to join up.

W. HEARFIELD,
Sec. Darlington C.B.S.

Glasgow's Charity Show.

At the show of the City of Glasgow O.A., on Jan. 3, 4, in aid of limbless sailors and soldiers, two classes of Linnets, H.M., and F.M., will be given instead of one as in schedule. Mr. R. Heggie, Stepps, near Glasgow, writes that if exhibitors who have not received a schedule will forward entries to him, the hon. secretaries will classify.

City of Birmingham Show—Prize Money, Specials, and Claimed Birds

Will exhibitors please note, writes Mr. A. C. Shirley, general sec., that owing to Mr. J. H. de Maillett's sudden bereavement in the death of his mother, the cash for the above will be a few days late. Exhibitors will also be sorry to have learned from last week's CAGE BIRDS that Mr. J. Bastock, who had consented to act as joint show sec. with Mr. de Maillett, was taken ill with influenza some days before the show, and is still confined to the house. I am sure that members and exhibitors will sympathise with both Mr. de Maillett and Mr. Bastock.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY NOTICE

The offices of CAGE BIRDS will be closed on Monday and Tuesday next, and, as we must go to press on Wednesday morning as usual, all matter for inclusion in our issue dated Dec. 30 must be in hand not later than first post on Saturday, Dec. 23. Correspondents who have any communications intended for our next issue must therefore kindly post them immediately they see this announcement, or they may be too late.

Hard lines for Miax.

Owing to the prohibition by the railway companies of the sending of live birds by rail during next week, the show of the Halifax O.S., originally fixed for Dec. 23, has had to be postponed until Dec. 30. Entries will now close Dec. 26. See advt., and letter in correspondence columns.

Martins in Cage.

During the late summer a pair of Martins built a nest beneath the eaves of a building adjoining the Pitsford Institute, and belonging to Mr. A. Roberts, of the Griffin Inn. Some boys poked a hole in the nest, and exposed a brood of callow young, whose position was extremely precarious. Mr. Roberts, seeing their predicament, took them from the nest and transferred them to a small cage, which he hung beneath the eaves near the damaged nest. The parent birds made no trouble about the change, but immediately started to feed the nestlings through the open door, apparently having no fear of the cage. The charming sight was witnessed until the birds were fully fledged and left the parental roof to fend for themselves.

Polly as a Mascot.

By Felix J. Koch, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A Tame Parrot for the Mexican War—if it Eventuates.

SIR,—Latterly, the State Militia of the various commonwealths comprising the great American Union have been gathered into camps of no mean size, here, there, and otherwhere, incidental to their mustering into the Federal service, and, eventually, dispatch to the Mexican border.

Life in camp, with very nearly the conditions that might prevail in actual warfare, is intensely interesting to the present generation of young Americans, most of whom were still mere youths when Uncle Sam had his last big conflict, to wit, the one with Spain.

"Jackie Roosa" seems to enjoy almost everything in the day's work that presents itself, and is eager for the future, but away down in his heart Jack knows that if he does go to border, and Uncle Sam should open war on Mexico, things might not all be quite so rosy as you'd like. War, Sherman said, was —— but, there, you can read of all that in connection with Europe's world-war.

At any rate, it doesn't hurt at all to safeguard; in short, to have your own or your company mascot, and not a few of the companies in these camps have their little harbinger of luck, usually a pet dog, or some similar animal.

One company, however, Company C of Cleveland, O., has taken a most attractive Green Parrot along to implore for them the protection of the war god. Polly has his perch over the mail box of the post, and gets the best the passing soldiers, or the men as they come up to drop their mail, may give him.

They've taught him to say this or that, to ask for such and such goodie, if he will, and when Polly proclaims his desires they are not long in being supplied.

The picture is of the mascot and his perch at Camp Willis, on the outskirts of Columbus, Ohio.

The Old and the New Bell Glucke

By W. H. SHEPLEY, Associate Royal of Music, Clapham.

I greatly admire the spirit and frankness shewn in Mr. Tomlinson's excellent article on this much despised tour.

We have now, all but for a solitary few, got rid of the old Bell Glucke birds, and replaced the tour with a much purer "new" Bell Glucke. Surely there is not going to be the same opposition to these birds. If so, let us take Mr. Tomlinson's advice at once, and thrash it out before they are spread broadcast.

Personally, I ought not to speak very disparagingly of the "old" Bell Glucke birds, some of which were not at all bad birds. During the two seasons I bred them they won me many valuable prizes, including five silver cups. The prejudice, though, became so strong, especially in the North, that I cleared them out. In fact, I gave away my biggest winner.

I then bought several birds, guaranteed Deep Hollow Glucke strain. One, a very fine bird, I bought from a fancier, well-known as a strong opponent of the Bell Glucke. Here comes the joke, which confirms Mr. Tomlinson's remarks that many of these gentlemen have got the new Bell Glucke and don't know it.

The bird in question had certainly a beautiful deep Glucke, but skimmering above it came a faint small silver bell-like tone of this new Bell Glucke, vibrating a pure diminished fifth above the deep glucke. I bred some youngsters from it which gave out this tour equally as good. I gave an example to the fancy as sung, suggesting it was an improved B.G., but was quickly informed it was not a Bell Glucke at all. All examples in text books I have perused also confirm that it is not. If you look up those very excellent translations and examples mentioned by Mr. Gutierrez you will find it is not given as B.G. However, that is immaterial. In case of further confusion let us have it as now known. The NEW Bell Glucke. When sung well it is a very beautiful tour, and in my opinion for beauty comes next to the deep Hollow Glucke.

Now you men of the North, let us have your reasons for your dislike of this tour. I know you to be sports. I come from your midst, and I know you will speak frankly. I beg of you though not to overlook these birds' advantages.

At the same time as you are objecting to this new B.G. you are also craving for the Koller tour. Are you aware these birds are fast approaching perfection of this valuable tour? I have myself, by judiciously blending them with deep bass strain, produced a youngster this season that has taken second prize and special for best Koller in a champion class of 87 entries.

I have heard fanciers say the Hollow Roll is fast deteriorating at the expense of this B.G. Just look up the scores this season, and you will find very many getting six points for their Hollow Roll. Some are also singing twelve tours. Surely they are too great an advance on the old Bell Gluckes to be also scrapped. This new B.G. is a full octave deeper than the old one, and you are always pleading for deep birds. The mere fact of some of you possessing this new tour and not knowing it proves it cannot be very objectionable.

When sung in its best form it occasionally passes our judges unnoticed, and receives points as a Deep Glucke, but no wonder under such hurried judging conditions as at present. I marvel often at the extreme correctness of the judging of our birds. We have, without doubt, excellent judges. Do try and make their work less laborious, and allow them the extra time asked for by Mr. Tomlinson. Also try and restrain a little of your prejudice against these Bell Gluckes until we have produced something better. I have had several applications for Koller birds which must not have the B.G. tour in their song. Now is your chance to come along and instruct us how to obtain the Koller without the assistance of the much despised B.G. birds.

A Correction.

It was at Cardiff that my birds could not be staged through my illness, writes Mr. J. Bastock. The second prize winner in Class 49 is Mr. J. A. Bowdidge.

The Avicultural Magazine, the Journal of the Avicultural Society, for December has for frontispiece a very nice reproduction of the painting, "The Wounded Soldier," by Miss Estella Canziani, showing a crippled soldier feeding the Seagulls in a London Park. The picture accompanies an article by the hon. editor, Mr. H. D. Astley, "Birds in the London Parks." Lady Wm. Cecil contributes "Notes on a Few American Warblers," which indicate how intensely interesting must be the study of bird life in Canada and the States. Mr. W. H. Workman sends an account taken from the "Zoologist" of 1844, recording the breeding of Grey Parrots in England, and there are other interesting articles, "Notes," and correspondence

Sawdust: Its Lighter Particles.

By E. W. ALLSOPP (Cardiff).

A Little Story, not exactly on "Birdy" matters, but treating "in lighter vein" of a material in use in most birdrooms.

AT this season of the year, and even under the present awful circumstances, I offer no apology in undertaking or, at least, endeavouring, cheerfully, even perhaps humorously, to pass away a few minutes that otherwise might drag and tend to lengthen some faces as long as the proverbial fiddle.

If you don't know Cardiff, I will gamble that you can hardly realise how busy everybody is "on the make," down to the sawdust man—I beg pardon, the sawdust king! No coal magnate enjoys the last word more than he. His contracts embrace all the output of all the mills, and he dominates the retail trade down to the last bag. Truly a king of kings, and an autocrat of all autocrats; and, incidentally, the Alpha and Omega of any domestic trouble I manage to get out of.

When needing a few bags, I mentally make a note and keep my eyes skinned. Sooner or later I shall be sure to see him seated upon the shaft of his flat cart, or barrow, careering along behind his donkey.

An Odd Time Will Do.

Then I hail him with a respectful "Good morning," and if he knows he has none of my sort at the moment, he just waves his hunting crop and shouts: "Not to-day, guvnor." Even if he has a supply of nice coarse-cut stuff he will not trouble to stop, but shouts: "All right, guvnor; I'll bring a bit round. Number 40, ain't it?"

Of course, I would like to suggest a date and time, if only in deference to the wishes of the lady who shares my joys and sorrows; but, alas, I realise he will just please himself as to when he calls at my Agapemone. Once he actually called one Sunday evening, and, whilst I do not know what our neighbours thought about it, I must confess I felt that on the Sabbath an undertaker's cart would look at least a bit more classy than a donkey cart loaded with sawdust. Anyhow, I tactfully told the good wife to drop a hint, upon opportunity, that I was of a scientific turn of mind and really had to have the sawdust just then, before the chemicals gave out or the salt had lost its savour.

Unfortunately, there is no back entrance to my house, and when I hear some evening his cheery "Whoa!" to Teddy, then I know I am about to go through it. Knowing, also, however, that he has it within his power to cut off supplies and leave me, or the birds rather, on bare boards, it would not be tactful to greet him by saying "Why the devil did you not come before the missus had cleared up?" Oh, dear, no. About half of that would cut me off for ever.

Where Diplomacy Comes In.

I welcome him as a brother, and suggest I might assist him to carry in the bags. Once I nearly gave everybody in the house "an athletic fit" by asking his kingship to have a cup of tea, but, fortunately, his reply was: "No thanks, guvnor; it don't agree with me stumic," and as I covertly glanced at the bloom his nose was then carrying, I somehow felt a cup of tea would be quite a stranger within his gates, and it certainly was something stronger than tea that had pushed his waistcoat so far from his backbone.

Anyhow, he never will allow any help. Handling each bag as a new-born babe, he thumps through the hall, up the carpeted stairs, and lays it to rest in my little top back room. I know he thinks I am a "mug." At the bottom of his shallow brain he thinks I do not realise that he has to carry the bags just so, and not dump them down—the contents would collapse to about half a bag.

Some day I am going to help, and then he will realise that I know a wheeze or two about sawdust, for I shall probably express myself about his "more holey than righteous" bags; but at present, "not a word," or I shall be driven to the extremity of cutting my own sawdust. When he has finished and his lovely palm has been crossed with silver, he just says: "Any time, guvnor; just give me the word and you shall have some more."

After this is where I come in, and the act usually commences by the youngest member of the household telling mother: "Dad has made an awful mess up the stairs," when really I had not touched a bag. Really, I could say a good bit, but in practice the only way to tackle a few streamlets of sawdust up the stairs carpet is to go down on your marrow bones and collect all the fragments. Never mind any loaves or fishes. Just get your three bags full and be satisfied!

Should I omit to gather in just one granular, or any pointed fragment, I will bet one of my "chips" when going to bed in stockinged feet will find it. Then I get the wireless, in a real good healthy yell, a sort of S.O.S. message. When it happens to the "chip" that told mother "Our dad has made an awful mess," honours are easy, and as I whisper in his ear that I expect he got it because he told tales to mother, I feel indeed the victor.

Once a fragment got mysteriously into "our" bed, of all the places in the house. The first indication of trouble was an uneasy stirring, and then I realised that a minute search was being made by the aid of the candle. Presently, following a vicious puff, the light got dark again, and, desiring to learn the worst, I ventured to ask: "Did you catch him, my dear?" and received the reply: "No, I did not, for it's a piece of that blessed sawdust again!" Usually I can give the soft answer that turneth away wrath, but I defy any diplomat to make much headway in only his shirt.

Of course, I am told it is a pity I did not shake myself before turning in after messing about with that beastly sawdust. Bless my soul, as if I did anything else but shake myself this cold weather, when turning in or out.

Matter in the Wrong Place.

Really after fifteen years' experience with sawdust, I cannot say where it is not likely to get.

Once, when I had rescued from the back of my throat what I thought was a nasty bone taken with a spoonful of soup, bless me, that bone was only sawdust. You can deal with it as you will, and it will easily serve you some monkey tricks.

In this I am reminded of a patient soul who had invested in a ticket for a prize drawing, the prize being a real live donkey. Subsequently a neighbour told her how near she was to winning the prize, hers being the last ticket in the hat with the winner. "Oh, how thankful I did not win it," she said. "I really don't know how to feed him, and I could only keep him in the parlour."

Take my tip, if you have only the parlour in which to store sawdust it will pay better to invest in two live donkeys. Dead ones, of course, don't exist. The worst of it is some folks are so unreasonable about sawdust. Just because it is found where not wanted, it seems to me that these people would cut our supplies off altogether.

In conclusion, I would say that this is only the light stuff in sawdust. Some day I will tell you what it is worth in the bird room. Meanwhile I trust I have, if only for a few minutes, confirmed the old saying "Laugh and the world laughs with you; Cry and you cry alone."

Where the Grass-hopper Warbler Reels His Lay.

By "Beeni," Sonning.

A description of the haunts and habits of a somewhat rare but interesting bird.

ONE warm evening in late spring, while strolling through the country lanes of South Oxfordshire, my attention was suddenly arrested by a sound which, to ears already acquainted with it, is unmistakable. The sun had disappeared from a clear sky and the dusk was descending upon one of those rare occasions when a perfect day is succeeded by a still more perfect night.

The sound which I heard might easily have been mistaken for that caused by water running from a leaky tap, and my first thought was that a stand-pipe in a neighbouring field which supplied a cattle drinking-trough was running. But when the sound stopped suddenly and then began again I recognised at once the so-called "reel" of the Grasshopper Warbler. (Locustella nœvia.)

The Song of the Grasshopper Warbler.

Once heard, the sound can hardly ever again be mistaken, as it is unlike any other call uttered by a bird in this country. It has been described as similar to the sound made by a grasshopper, but as the chirrup of this insect is of quite short duration, while the reel of the bird is frequently sustained continuously for a full minute, it will be seen that the comparison is deceptive.

Other observers liken the call to the sound made by the ratchet of the reel of a fishing rod when the angler is reeling out his line, and this description would perhaps give the novice a better idea as to what to listen for than the supposed similarity between the reel of the Warbler and that emitted by the stridulatory organs of the grasshopper.

The bird is rare in any locality, but as it has sometimes made its appearance on the show bench and has frequently been kept as a cage bird, some details of it may be of interest to the readers of CAGE BIRDS.

The Grasshopper Warbler is generally seen in the locality of commons where furze, bramble, and long loose grass provide suitable nesting sites. Its nesting place is generally a hole in a tussock of grass, entered by a sort of tunnel under the undergrowth.

The bird runs with astonishing rapidity through the tangle of a clump of bush and, to my mind, it deserves its name more from its movements than from any supposed resemblance of its call to the amatory song of the grasshopper. It is a case of a name bestowed for some fancied resemblance becoming, by a coincidence, appropriate through an entirely different cause.

Its Artfully Concealed Nest.

Having located the bird on its appearance in our country in early summer, it is by no means easy to locate its nest. One of our great authorities on British birds, in speaking of the Grasshopper Warbler, says: "Its nest I have sought for in vain." If then a close observer of bird life, who might reasonably be expected to be up to the dodges of secretive birds, is thus unsuccessful, the novice may be pardoned if he searches without success for the elusive nursery of this Warbler.

A pair of these birds built on a common close to my house, and I was able to study them quite closely during their stay in the neighbourhood. They chose a most surprising spot for their operations. Usually the nest is concealed with all the cunning imaginable, but the pair of which I am writing showed that queer lapse from habit which other birds occasionally exhibit when, contrary to their usual custom, they build in situations so exposed as to be open to detection by the most unobservant eye.

This particular pair nested in a diminutive bramble bush, scarcely two feet high, and about two yards in circumference, and this by the edge of a much frequented track across the common. Here the hen laid four eggs and successfully hatched them. I often wondered how many people who passed within a few inches of that nest realised that their feet, injudiciously placed, might have crushed the life out of small bodies which, under certain circumstances, would easily fetch two or three pounds apiece!

However, all went well in this case, and I had the satisfaction of seeing the youngsters just as they were beginning to feather, after which, having no immediate opportunity of visiting the nest, the young were safely fledged and I saw them no more.

Another pair nested but a few yards from this spot, and although I both saw and heard the young after they had left the nest, so well had the old birds obeyed instinct and secreted their nursery, that I was unable to find it, even though I knew to within a few feet where it was. Altogether, this season, there were three pairs in this locality.

There is nothing striking about the appearance of the bird. Sobriety is the dominant tone of the plumage throughout, but the tail is fan-shaped when full spread, and slightly barred, and this feature constitutes the chief beauty of the bird.

It can be successfully caged if the diet is suitable, but the high prices commanded by well-caged specimens prohibit the bird ever finding its way into the home of the average fancier. Only those who wish for rarities for aviary or show would purchase a Grasshopper Warbler.

It is quite within the bounds of possibility that under suitable conditions as to environment a pair might be induced to breed in an aviary, but it is of shy disposition.

One of Migration's Wonders.

I have always marvelled that such diminutive birds as the Warblers should be capable of such long and sustained flights as are necessary upon migration, and my wonder is increased in the case of the Grasshopper Warbler, which, upon its arrival in this country, seems incapable of a flight of any appreciable length, preferring, as it does, to flit from bramble to bramble, or run actively through the grass at the foot of the undergrowth.

But there are strange problems in Nature, and the bird-lover becomes acquainted with many of them which his brother outside the fancy does not know of.

Correspondence.

Canary Keeping in Natal.

Where Ants and Snakes Have to be Reckoned With.

SIR,—In a previous communication I expressed the hope that your correspondence columns would continue to be a feature of your very excellent publication, and it would appear, therefore, to be up to me to do my "little bit" towards that end.

The one thing that strikes me more than anything else when reading the experiences of your contributors is how slight, after all, is the difference in feeding methods. The one feeds on egg and bread crumbs, the other egg and biscuit. One feeds twice a day, the other three times, and so on. Nearly all give green food; some in limited quantities, others in plenty.

There is then nothing new that one can say in that connection unless I confess that my own birds are kept entirely without green food, a deprivation which I have found ensures the rearing of more young birds.

I know quite well that many of your readers consider that some hens will not rear young unless kept supplied with green food, but I can assure them that any hen which has not, herself, been accustomed to green food will do so, and the young will be less liable to diarrhœa after leaving the nest.

I am never troubled with sweating hens, but some of my hens lay too quickly, with the result that I sometimes lose a nest. My experiments have convinced me that this fault can be somewhat nullified by the removal of the cuttle fish shell from the cage, after the hen has commenced to sit, but when this is done there is a risk that the next nest will be a poor one, and also that the young in the nest may be weak-limbed. So that, taking those disadvantages into consideration, it appears better to put up with the fault of fast layers, and demand a low average from each hen, rather than a large one. Many hens, on the other hand, are too slow-laying, and I am not sure that a fast layer is not preferable, especially when a large number of birds are kept. The young are seldom, if ever, plucked by a hen which lays her succeeding clutch whilst they are still safe in the nest.

I am a great believer in Hawley's and Keating's insect powders, and apply this freely to the nests during incubation. I also dust the birds at intervals, with the result that lice and red mite have no terrors for me. I am, however, troubled by ants, and last year, for a diversion, had to put up with the visits of snakes, which during the season took no fewer than 14 nests.

My bird "room" is an open-fronted shed, wired to keep out the cats, but it is practically impossible to keep out the ants. My only precaution is to stand the egg-food vessels in saucers of water, and to use paraffin if the pests become troublesome. Fortunately, the ants do not put in an appearance until late in spring, so that my breeding season is well advanced, purposely, before their presence affects me.

The disappearance of nest after nest of eggs last season caused me considerable anxiety until I, happily, remembered the possibility of snakes. In all I killed four, two of which were over 7 feet long, but the damage was done by the two smaller snakes in the dead of night. Coming home late one night I found one with his head under the hen's wings, and, of course, quickly dispatched him. The unfortunate part was that the hens thus disturbed absolutely refused to sit again.

However, I ended the season with a substantial credit balance, and can, therefore, afford to look back and to view the season as one of new experiences, and, really, there is always something new cropping up. For that reason I look upon CAGE BIRDS as indispensable to all bird lovers.

In that respect I am like the Rev. Mr. Jolliffe, whose series of articles were no doubt appreciated by your readers. I would, however, like to say to him that we in the Colonies always felt that the breeders of England considered that anything was good enough "for export," but we never expected a parson to be so brutally candid over it.

Not so long ago an acquaintance of mine was deputed to meet and to forward to Johannesburg a pair of Norwich Canaries whose cost was £8. He told me the birds quite shocked him, and that they were worth no more than some he, himself, was offering at £2. I have seen Roller Canaries costing £5 or £6 which did not excel in song others purchased through a dealer—probably one of those Mr. Jolliffe has so little love for—for less than a sovereign, and I have, myself, imported roller "cocks" which have laid eggs and reared healthy and lusty youngsters. These "cocks" were not from a dealer. If the Rev. Mr. Jolliffe desires a co-operative bird society in order that he and others may dispose of their weedy birds, incognito, "for export," then I hope his suggestion will fall flat from the start.

I note that one of your Australian correspondents, Fred King, wishes to know the best time of the year to import birds into Australia. We in Natal have found that the best can be got from birds sent from England as early as safely possible after their moult. They then reach us late in our breeding season, and can be brought on to lay at least one nest before falling into line with our own birds by moulting. As a rule the hens are erratic during the succeeding breeding season, but they do lay, and their eggs can be hatched out and the young reared by other hens.

I personally have found both cocks and hens most unreliable in their second season from England, but as my cock birds are polygamists I have by that time got all I wanted from them except song, and that they give freely. This plan might not suit the feather breeders, but answers admirably for those who, like myself, think more of the song than of the singer's outward appearance.

This carries me to the question of inbreeding which has been so well discussed in your columns of late, and I shall have to leave that subject for another occasion, otherwise I will exhaust not myself but your patience and space. With best wishes to CAGE BIRDS.

The Example of the Wild Birds.

SIR,—I quite believe with Mr. R. P. Bixter that birds will do far better on the wholemeal bread, only I fear it will require renewing more often, as I have found that the wholemeal soon gets dry.

I have often put bread in my garden for the wild birds to pick over, and the first to be eaten is the wholemeal bread; this shows that the birds know which is the best. I wish CAGE BIRDS continued success.

JOHN WILLIAMS.

No Fear of Any Relaxing Effects.

SIR,—If your correspondent, S. Smith, is correct in stating that the new flour will contain no "offal" such as thirds and bran, then our discussion is knocked on the head, but before accepting the statement I would like to ask where the extra percentage of flour is coming from. Personally, I have not classed "war bread," i.e., National Bread and wholemeal bread as one and the same article.

In answer to the Rev. C. B. Jolliffe, re bran for fowls, my experience has been that if bran is given in large quantities the birds become too relaxed, but when given in moderation they seem to benefit by its use; therefore, having had this experience, my contention is that the small quantity of bran which will enter into the new flour will prove beneficial, even to so tender a bird as a Canary.

As I do a little experimenting each breeding season I will have no hesitation in giving National bread a trial during the season of 1917, although it is not my usual custom to use bread or biscuit when feeding young Canaries. In conclusion I would like to thank the Rev. C. B. Joliffe for having introduced the subject under discussion, also Messrs. Claud St. John and S. Smith for their contribution.

R. P. BIXTER.

A Blessing in Disguise.

SIR,—As far as my conviction of the harmlessness of our forthcoming war bread, or even wholemeal bread, is concerned, I can add but little to what I wrote in my last letter. But I think, possibly, the Rev. C. B. Joliffe has overlooked two little points, the observance of which would materially allay any lingering doubt he may have on the matter.

Firstly, our war bread will not be wholemeal by a long way, nor hardly the standard quality which was boomed in the Press a few years ago, and the latter quality leaves a sufficiently large margin for offal to exclude totally all coarse bran. Wholemeal flour or bread, as the name suggests, contains the whole, or 100 per cent., of the grain from which it is milled; standard flour or bread contains only 80 per cent. of the grain, thereby leaving a margin of 20 per cent. to be extracted in the shape of bran and coarse sharps, which is certainly amply sufficient to exclude all bran.

Our war bread, or, as it will probably be termed in the trade, National flour or bread, will contain an average of only 76 per cent. of the grain—the percentage of flour to be produced according to the regulations varies with the quality of the grain; in some cases it is less than 70 per cent., and in no case does it reach 80 per cent., the average from all qualities of grain being 76 per cent.—thus leaving an even greater margin than standard for the extraction of the coarser parts. Therefore, bran, even if it were harmful, is not in the least likely to form any part of our war bread, and should not do so.

Secondly, our Reverend friend is probably attaching too much importance to the term "irritant" in this connection. It would be more correct to say that its purpose in the internal economy is to excite the organs to healthy action. Highly concentrated and digestible articles of diet which are so largely assimilable as to leave little residue for expulsion are a frequent source of sluggish action of the intestine and consequent constipation, simply because there is so little residue for the peristaltic action of the intestine to work upon, and this is the reason why wholemeal bread is often advised by the medical faculty as a remedy for chronic or habitual constipation. White bread, in proportion as the grain is robbed of its coarser parts and is more completely assimilable, leaves less residue and is more productive of intestinal inactivity. Most of the waste matter in our food comes from the vegetable portion of our dietary, and it is quite easy to understand why wholemeal biscuit, in addition to white, is supplied to our troops on active service when vegetables are inaccessible.

Instead of war bread giving rise to more cases of "sweating" hens, I am inclined to think that it will tend materially to reduce this trouble. It is, indeed, as a possible preventive of this trouble that I have in the past most frequently suggested the use of wholemeal bread in the preparation of the egg food.

I quite agree that comparisons of wild birds with those in captivity are apt to be unfair. But one might also argue on these lines that the wild birds get natural foods with the full proportion of waste matters for the intestine to work upon, and are not, so far as we know, overmuch troubled with digestive and intestinal troubles, whereas our caged pets are provided with many highly concentrated, malted, or pre-digested foods deprived of as much as possible of their coarser elements and, well, they are not so free from these troubles as their wild brethren.

CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SIR,—Having read several letters in CAGE BIRDS on the question of feeding young birds on the new war bread, I am sending you a sample of the bread, also a sample of the flour. When I started Canary breeding a little over 30 years ago, this is about the class of bread I fed my birds on, and from one pair I bred eleven young and brought them all up successfully. If the Rev. Mr. Joliffe has as good luck now, as I had then, I do not think he will complain. If he will send his address I will send him a sample also. With the season's greetings.

F. W. C. FLINT.

Late of L. and P.O.S.

[We have to thank our correspondent for kindly sending us the sample loaf and flour mentioned. All we can say is that if this is the "National" bread which has caused so much discussion no fear need be felt of its having any detrimental effect on young Canaries. There is no trace whatever of "offal"; the flour is of a very pale creamy tinge, and the bread is certainly no darker than the home-made bread of our youthful days. It is light in texture, beautifully sweet in taste, and far in front of the best white bread we have ever eaten. We have forwarded Mr. Jolliffe's address to our correspondent, and we hope our Reverend contributor will enjoy his lunch of "war bread" and cheese as much as we have ours.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

Christmas Greetings from the Fighting Line.

The Hon. Sec of Bedford and Beds. United C.B.S. to His Fellow Members.

SIR,—Will you allow me through your valuable columns to wish the Bedfordshire fanciers the greetings of the season. Last year we were amongst the hobby after a fine show, and were consoling ourselves that £3 4s. had been handed to the Blinded Soldiers' Institute. This year your secretary sits writing on some straw in a natural aviary (unfortunately, under the perches), with the enemy not far distant, but with a happy remembrance of the hobby, and the knowledge that, despite our troubles, there is still 9s. 5½d. in hand for us to go on with when these stirring times are over, and they have been so, for the chairman and secretary are both away, and the vice-chairman and treasurer are engaged on war work. Last, but not least, is the sad death of our old friend, Mr. Beanland; so, indeed, we have been hit hard as a society, but optimism will win through, and let's hope the time will soon be when our rooms are once more full of chirping youngsters, and these things are in the past.

Wishing CAGE BIRDS and its readers the compliments of the season.

A Success in Hybrid Breeding.

Six Different Crosses in One Season.

SIR,—Mr. H. James, at our Brighton Show Dec. 13, exhibited all his crosses which he has been successful in breeding this season, and about which I wrote you some time ago. There were:—Goldfinch-Canary, Greenfinch-Canary, Linnet-Canary, Redpoll-Canary, and Siskin Canary Mules, and a Siskin-Greenfinch Hybrid, and they made a fine team for one exhibitor to stage at the same show. Is it a record?

Exhibits at Larkhall Red Cross Show.

Return Delayed by Railway Restrictions.

SIR,—I wish to let fanciers know who were exhibiting at our show on Dec. 15 and 16, that our show committee got not a little surprise on Saturday, when they received instructions from the railway company that all birds going by rail would have to be packed and at the station in less than two hours, otherwise they would not get them away till Monday, Dec. 25. As there were about 430 birds to pack, although the work was undertaken with all speed, I am sorry to say that two cases of birds are left on our hands, as the railway could not deliver them on Saturday night. But they are in good hands and will be dispatched as soon as the railway company will take them. This new order has not tended to help our show, as many fanciers were greatly disappointed when, on arrival at hall only a few local fanciers' birds were to be seen. We extend our sympathy to those who were disappointed, and hope that everything will come out all right.

The Perpetual Novice Question.

Wins at Sliding Scale Shows.

SIR,—In my visits to the various shows this season I have frequently heard the remark that "So-and-So" has no right to exhibit in novice classes, for he has lost his qualification twice over and ought to come out. But, says another, wins at a sliding-scale show do not count against him. I have inquired of several fanciers what the novice's position is at these shows. One says the same as at any other open show. A second says: Wins don't count, they are on the same footing as members' shows. A third says: Don't know. The shows I refer to have no price limit or fixed radius, and are open to all comers. Personally, I know of cases where exhibitors have won firsts in champion classes at these shows, and have then figured prominently amongst the novices at subsequent exhibitions. Can you, Mr. Editor, give us an official ruling on this point?

E. WILCOX.

[We quite fail to see how the allocation of the prize money can affect the question. A first prize in an open class remains a first prize, whether it carries money or not, and it can make no difference whatever whether the amount of the prize money is previously fixed or depends on the number of entries, as when the sliding scale governs the amount. At the same time, we shall be pleased to publish opinions on the subject.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

The Reputed Goldfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid at Clapham.

Another Question for the National British Bird and Mule Club.

SIR,—On receiving CAGE BIRDS last week I was very pleased to see the letter from Mr. J. Bastock re my Hybrid at Clapham Show, and I quite agree with him as to the bird being a poor specimen of its cross. I was disappointed with it myself after its moult, for I had quite expected to see it moult out a much brighter colour, but of course being a hen you cannot expect it to have such good colour and markings as a cock bird. I am not saying it is a good specimen of its cross; what I want to prove is that it is a genuine Hybrid of the Goldfinch and Chaffinch cross. Mr. Robson is the only man I know of who has seen the bird that cannot see the Goldfinch parentage in it, and what I was most surprised at was that if he was so sure it was nothing but a poor specimen of a hen Chaffinch why he did not "wrong class" it.

I wrote Mr. Stephens, secretary of the N.B.B. and M.C., on Nov. 28, asking him to ask the Committee to allow me to send the bird up for inspection at the next meeting, and on December 3rd I received a reply saying he had received my letter, and would put it before the committee at their next meeting, Dec. 28. In conclusion, I should like to thank Mr. Bastock for writing his opinion of the bird, also for his pluck in staking his money to back it up. He could safely back all he's got on it being a genuine Hybrid of the cross claimed.

An Aged Linnet.

Is this a Record Age?

SIR,—I have just lost a Linnet 16½ years old. Although so old he was singing a few weeks ago. I might say it has been fed on Capern's Finch food, with seasonable green foods.

New Roller Club Suggested.

SIR,—It has been suggested by several old Roller fanciers that we form a Roller Club for Colne, Nelson, and Burnley District, and that prospective members should communicate with me with a view to calling a meeting for the formation of the club. Will you kindly announce this in your columns so that the necessary arrangements can be made before the year end. Mr. Mawhood, Mr. Harrison, or myself will be pleased to answer any enquiries re same.

Postponement of Halifax Show.

Railway Regulations Intervene.

SIR,—It is with regret I have to announce that our open show of Canaries cannot take place on the date specified, Dec. 23, owing to all the railway companies' refusal to carry live birds between the dates of Dec. 18 to 26 inclusive, so that we have no option but to postpone our show until Saturday, Dec. 30, which is putting our society to considerably more expense. I kindly ask all to extend the fullest possible support to our show. Entries will now close Tuesday, Dec. 26.

Heavily Marked Borders and Show Cages.

The Necessity for Uniformity.

SIR,—Mr. Patterson's letter on heavily marked Borders is very good, but the question is: What is a heavy-marked? Some exhibits at a recent show to my taste and to many more were far too heavy, what I should consider foul greens. However, at the annual meeting of the Border Club I hope this question may be raised: also that of standard show cages. Going to some shows, the cages are an eye-sore, and this ought not to be. It is certainly improving in Scotland, but one cannot but notice in English exhibits a big difference in cages. They look to me home made. I do hope this may be put a stop to if there are any from down South at our New Year's Show.

Please allow me to say in conclusion that I never enjoyed your weekly CAGE BIRDS more than I am doing now.

Are the Manufacturers at Fault?

SIR,—I was very pleased to see "Distinct Mark's" suggestion in CAGE BIRDS re the need of uniformity in the size of Border Show cages, as, on sending to firms for them, you do not obtain what you actually require. If the suggestion of uniformity was adopted by the manufacturing firms, I thing the "Wee Gems" would be shown more to their advantage.

Specials at Larkhall 1915 Show

The Matter Righted.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Park's letter in CAGE BIRDS, Dec. 9th, I would like to state that my object in writing was to let fanciers know (who had heard the statement) that the fault was Mr. Park's, and not the show management that the special was not paid. I wrote in the interest of the present secretary and show committee on the eve of their Red Cross Show, and on their instruction. Since writing I have discovered that special 43 alloted to best 3rd bird in class 36, 37, 38, 39, has been marked in error in entry book as won by 1st bird in class 36, and sent to owner, Mr. Dykes. Mr. Parks won 3rd prize in class 36, and after hearing he had the special, I have now posted the special to him, although a bit late.

I trust the letter with postal order may not be like the two letters of enquiry for the special, but may reach its destination. I don't say that Mr. Park did not send these letters, but I do say they never reached Croft Place. I take this opportunity of apologising to Mr. Park for the mistake, as it was pure carelessness on my part. As to his remark about making a beginner into a finisher, had it been a beginner who made the statement I should not have been afraid of his remarks injuring our next show, and should not have troubled to write, and naturally would not have known about the mistake. However, I am very pleased to say Mr. Park has sent along a good entry for our next show, and trust he may receive a good share of tickets and specials.

Birds Stolen on Rail.

A Reward Offered.

SIR,—In your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, during last month you published several letters referring to birds lost on railway journeys, and as I have suffered a similar loss I thought I should only be doing my duty in reporting the occurrence.

On Dec. 8, about 7.50, I sent a cock Canary by my son to Bank Top Station, Darlington, to be forwarded by the 8.8 p.m. train from there to Bedale to a friend of mine. It was sent carriage paid, but it has never arrived at Bedale, a matter of a little over 20 miles to travel. I have reported the case fully to headquarters at York, and hope they will trace the theft to the one that is guilty of such a dirty way of getting birds without paying for them. I will also give a good reward for any information that leads to the conviction of the thief.

Sawdust in Cage Bottoms.

British Birds Disqualified at Whitehaven

SIR.—I was greatly surprised on receiving my birds from Whitehaven show this morning, Dec. 18, to find they had been passed by the judge for having sawdust on the cage bottoms instead of plain canary seed. Now, I have heard of birds being debarred for many reasons, but never for a more paltry reason than this. I have shown birds all over the country at one time and another, and have always used sawdust, without a complaint. I should like to know who would send a valuable team of British Finches on a long journey with nothing but plain canary seed in their cages; not your humble. If such a case had occurred at our own society's show the sawdust would have been taken out and things put right. If the Whitehaven Society want the support of fanciers they will have to alter their rules.

MATT. PHILIPSON.

A Model Goldfinch Sire.

More Exemplary Finches.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Savage's query as to allowing the cock Goldfinch to stay with the hen Canary during the time she is sitting, feeding, etc., I should like to say that during this past season I have, like Mr. Savage, allowed the two birds to do as they chose in a double breeding cage. Although only having one nest from them, three in number, I consider myself very fortunate, seeing that they were the first Goldie mules I had ever bred. One was almost clear, one pied, and one dark, with grand Goldie face. Unfortunately the light one died, but the other two, a cock and a hen I have now. The Goldfinch was the property of Mr. A. Martin, the noted exhibitor of Kettering.

W. LYNHAM.

Going One Better.

SIR,—In reply to Alf. Savage, I consider the Goldie I have goes one better. In the early part of this year I purchased a Goldie from Messrs. Power and Russell, of London, and ran him to one of my hen Canaries in a three compartment breeder; they had two of the compartments, and I had another hen in the other. I separated the Goldie from the hens for a first nest of Sibs, and on the day the hen laid her third egg I took away the Sib cock, put three addled eggs in the nest, took away the slide, let in the Goldie, and kept watch from behind a screen in the bird room. The Goldie appeared to be timid of the nest at first, but soon curiosity got the better of him, and he flew on to it and tested what it was made of. After watching for a time I left the room, and when I went back in the evening all the eggs were perfect as when I put them in. I took those out, put in the three fresh eggs, and left them to the mercy of the Goldie.

He remained with the Canary the whole season, and helped to rear the following:—1st nest, four Sib Canaries; 2nd nest, three Sibs, one Mule (I let him and the Sib cock run with the hen on alternate days, and so got Canaries and a Mule from one clutch of eggs); 3rd nest, three Mules and fostered a Greenie Mule.

He fed from the start as soon as the young were hatched, and it was great fun to see a big lump of a Canary almost half as big again as the Goldie following him round the cage calling for food, and they always got it. He was better than the best cock Canary in my opinion, in this way, the hen had to come off the nest for her food because I never saw him feed her, although I watched him many a time, but for feeding the young he was "some" feeder, and when he wasn't feeding he was singing. He is the best Goldie I ever had, and I am glad to say I still have him, and with the help of thistle, plantain, knap weed, shepherd's purse, corn marigold, and bunches of grass, and anything that may be pulled with it, he has come through a grand colour, and will be on the show bench shortly, when I hope to see the "Red" one on him.

I also have another Goldie which is perfectly safe with eggs, and feeds the hen Canary, but does not feed the young, neither does he interfere with them. He also has been with the hen all the season. Another, an old breeder I have had for seven years, and the man I got him from had him two years. If I forget to run the slide between this bird and the Canary, there is a mess in the nest, and I am minus an egg. If I am not there first in the morning he will smash every egg and eat it, but after the young are out they are quite safe; he does not touch them, neither does he feed them.

The reason I say that I think the Goldie I have goes one better than Mr. Alf. Savage's is this; all my birds are in cages. I believe there are many Goldies who would be splendid feeders if they were given the chance, but one wants to be cautious in dealing with them, although not more so than with other wild birds. I have a Linnet that will eat all the eggs he can get, even if they have been sat on, and I have others that will not look at them. I have a cock Greenie that sits on the eggs when the hen is off, and who nearly killed a cock Canary he caught looking through the wires of the partition which separated them. He nearly bit the Canary's leg off. I had a hen Twite which was as good a mother as the best Canary I ever had, and reared Goldie-Twites and Canary-Twites. My advice is study the birds, test them, and then tell CAGE BIRDS, the only birdy weekly, all about it.

E. SOUTHWOOD.

The Roller Canary.

How to Increase Its Popularity.

SIR,—I hope Mr. Montague will not think me remiss in not replying to his letter published in CAGE BIRDS of Dec. 2. To be brief, I cannot criticise his remarks, as I agree entirely with everything he says, that is to say, in principle. It is true I am the reporter of the British Roller C.C., but only when I write as such; otherwise I am just a private member, a free lance, so please don't make me responsible.

I think that with money to spare, a little energy, and enterprise, a good deal more might be done to popularise the Roller Canary. Every encouragement is being given by the Editor, and I see signs of success already in the increase in numbers who seriously mean to breed Rollers. Quite the latest of our new members has got his stock of four first-class birds and twelve hens, and he means business too; and this is not an isolated case. So you may take it, sir, that though the club, as it might, has not so far lent itself to a public propaganda such as Mr. Montague has in mind, and with which I am in sympathy; yet there is a bit of quiet solid work going on.

Here I might venture to suggest that it behoves leading fanciers, such as Mr. Montague and many others in the Provinces, to liven up the space the Editor so generously allots to us by letters of interest and edification on Roller breeding, song, etc., suggestions of ways and means in all things connected with the Roller Fancy. Many of those who are best qualified to do so never contribute from one year's end to the other.

All are not able to attend club meetings, many breeders belong to no club at all, breeders of good birds too. Having a musical, naturally, well trained ear, they know what good song is, but they are entirely at sea when it comes to defining or naming a tour. I could give a case in point this week even, and the correspondent asks me all sorts of questions. If the pages of CAGE BIRDS are well furnished with Roller matters, all we should have to do would be to refer him to such and such a number. Well, that will serve to build up and enlarge the fancy, and that is a way in which the much-talked-of patriotic movement can be stimulated.

The sum total to my mind is: Encourage breeding of high-class birds only; educate everyone in high-class song; never sell to a novice any bird which is not worthy to breed with; let him have it at a fair price; and, if possible, follow him up next season, and see how he gets on. The trader is looking after himself. He is watching it all, and only wants us to see that he is well supplied. He needs no "patriotic movement" to wake him up; he is quite alive to his outlets. Raise and maintain the standard above the Continental rubbish, and the British Roller Canary will be the hall marked bird.

H. W. GUTIERREZ.

A Canary that Sings to Order.

SIR,—I have often seen accounts of the doings of birds in CAGE BIRDS. I thought I should like to tell you about a Yorkshire Canary I saw the other day. A friend of mine, Mr. Piercey, of Ousegate, Selby, had often told me about a bird he has that will sing at command. The other day I was in his shop on business, and he said, "By the way, while you are here, you shall hear my bird." So he brought it out of the room, placed it on the counter, and said to it, "Sing, Dick, for the gentleman," and off it went into full song. After that he talked to it, but it never attempted to sing until he said again, "Sing, Dick," when it again burst into full song, and a third time also. I could not have credited it if I had not heard for myself. Another point is that it will not sing for any other member of his family. Try as they will, it will not budge. I think this will interest some of the readers of CAGE BIRDS. I might say I have been a reader of your valuable paper for many years.

A. PURVIN.

The Career of a Noted Border Fancy Canary.

Some Details of a Grand Record.

SIR,—In reply to the letter of M. James Hay in last week's CAGE BIRDS re my Cinnamon marked hen, I should very much like to give a good essay on her career, especially as she has added another 1st and 2nd to her list of wins since Cardiff show. But through want of time I have to curtail it very much.

She was hatched June 6th, 1908, and was bred from winners on both sides. Her sire was an uneven green marked, head and both wings, exactly the same markings as herself. He was 1st Porth, 1st Morriston, 1st Swansea, 1st Llanelly in 1908. Her dam was sister to my yellow hen that won 1st and championship diploma at Crystal Palace in 1910. She was 1st at Swansea, 1st Nantymoel, and other wins. Her great dam was 1st and special at Dulwich, 1st and special Swansea, 2nd Morecambe, and 1st at Crystal Palace, and was depicted in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL of that year, 1907. Her great sire was a yellow green cock, with about 45 per cent. Cinnamon blood. He was also second at the Palace two years in succession, and had many other wins, including 1st L.C.B.A. She has travelled a good deal in the South, as much as 940 miles in one season. Her longest journeys have been Frome, Cheltenham, and London. The last time she visited the Metropolis she was first in her class at the Great Glass House under Mr. Dewar, defeating the well-known Yellow Cinnamon mark owned by Mr. Nicholson. She has been hand-washed six or seven times in a season. She has always been a very hardy bird, and very clean in her habits, never taking cold, but I am sorry that old age is beginning to tell the tale. I think, however, with a little care she will weather another season. Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success.

D. JENKINS.

Another Fine Record.

SIR,—It was very gratifying to read in your columns of the fine achievement of Mr. Jenkins' cinnamon marked buff hen, and it would be interesting to hear how it would compare with the record of my yellow cinnamon marked cock, which has won the following prizes, all at leading shows:—Thirty-six firsts, seven seconds (including four times defeated by my green marked yellow cock, a son of the cinnamon mark), and two thirds. The bird is now in his fifth season, and still in the pink, having won four firsts this season. These two records speak volumes for this lovely variety, and I think it is a pity our leading societies do not include a class for them, as I feel sure it would be the means of making them more popular.

What is a Ticked Bird?

Mr. House Quotes Blakston.

SIR,—Messrs. Stubbs tell us that the bird over which my ruling is disputed won in the marked class at Birmingham, and all agreed who saw it that it was correctly classified. This does not prove my judgment wrong. I do not say it offensively, but my experience is greater than that of Mr. Roe, whom Messrs. Stubbs quote against me. I was an All-England judge before Mr. Roe began exhibiting.

Messrs. Stubbs next proceed to lay to my charge something which I have not said, and which does not concern the point at issue. We are discussing the variegation on a certain bird; let us keep to it, and not seek to confuse the issue by talking about something which has no existence. The gibe about my 40 years' experience will not settle this matter. Let us reason it out properly, and in a gentlemanly manner. There is no need for heat or temper.

As to my having a very high opinion of myself, I admit it. My career justifies it, and I should be false to myself were it otherwise. As to many of our judges having had as much experience as myself, that is open to question. I believe I can with confidence say that no man living has judged or reported so many shows as myself, or written so much upon Canaries. As to capability, I admit many are quite as capable as myself of judging. But capability and experience are not one and the same thing.

As to certainty or uncertainty, I have no doubt whatever that my action at Aberavon was correct. Had I not thought so I should not have taken action, neither should I have explained to Messrs. Stubbs, and the stewards at Aberavon, the difference between a "Ticked" bird and a "Marked" one. The explanation I gave them is the same as I gave in my reply to their letter in CAGE BIRDS, and the same as I give now. As Messrs. Stubbs still believe I am wrong, and I am confident I am right, I will give some authorities whom Messrs. Stubbs will, perhaps, accept, seeing that they sneer at my 40 years' experience.

Speaking of variegation in Norwich Canaries, Blakston (can one give a greater authority?) says: "The most advanced form of light variegation is when the entire bird, including wings and tail, is perfectly clear with the exception of a few dark feathers interspersed here and there, or in the form of a grizzly patch on the head, neck, or back, such feathers usually being not dark from the quill to the end of the web, but grey or grizzly, showing a tendency to the entire fading out of the native green. These birds are known as 'Ticked' birds." These words will be found at the finish of the second paragraph on page 95 of "Canaries and Cage Birds."

Further on, on page 97, Blakston says: "It will be plain that marking is a question of locality, and there are but six places in which marks can possibly exist, elsewhere they are not marks." On page 96 he says such locality of marking is situated in the eyes, wings, and tail, and gives a long description of such marking.

The Yorkshire Union of Ornithological Societies say that a bird must be marked upon the eyes, wings, or tail to become a marked bird. The Yorkshire Canary Club definition is the same. All the old breeders of Lancashire and Yorkshire hold the same opinion.

I may be old fashioned, but it is my opinion that many of our judges of to-day do not pay that attention to technicalities that our judges of old did. They prefer the line of least resistance. They are not leaders of the Fancy, as were such men as Blakston, Bemrose, Bexson, Barnesby, and others whom I remember. Those giants of the past stood as champions of what was right. I remember on one occasion, in 1884, having a bird passed by the late Joseph Bexson because he detected a smoky tinge in the thigh of an otherwise clear bird. I had not seen it, but he did, and commented on it in "The Stock-keeper," saying but for this it would have won. He had to catch the bird to find it.

Judges of to-day act more like Nelson. They put the blind eye into action. They are followers of exhibitors, not leaders of the Fancy. On another occasion, in 1884 or 1885, just when the revolt against K.N. feeding was at its highest, W. A. Blakston disqualified the late J. H. Thackray and myself because he said our "natural colour" exhibits had been fed. This was at Swansea, and although the Committee told him he was wrong he stuck to his guns. Our judges in those days acted upon high principles. They knew what things should be, and they strove their best to keep exhibitors up to the mark.

Messrs. Stubbs have their own opinion, and, they say, that of all who saw the bird at Aberavon and Birmingham, the opinion of Mr. Roe, and of CAGE BIRDS reporter at Birmingham. Against that all that I can show is my own opinion, that of the late W. A. Blakston, the rulings and standards of the Yorkshire Union, and the Yorkshire Canary Club, and the articles which appeared in CAGE BIRDS about nine or ten years ago.

If such experienced judges as Messrs. T. Heath, J. Mackley, W. E. Graves, G. Gardner, J. H. Payne, C. E. Silk, and G. E. Russell would give their opinions I believe they would agree with mine. It is a matter upon which there should be no doubt, and it surprises me to find that anyone can consider a grizzle-backed bird a marked bird.

C. A. HOUSE.

[We shall be very pleased to receive and publish opinions, so long as personalities are not indulged in, upon what seems to us to be a question of general interest.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

Round the Shows.

ABERDARE.

At the First Annual Show of the Aberdare C.B.S., held at Market Hall, Dec. 7, entries totalled just over 400, a very disappointing number, considering the extensive classification offered. Judging by the remarks of exhibitors present we think if the society curtailed the classification, and in lieu of the sliding scale offered half prize money under nine entries, they would receive the support they so richly deserve. The exhibits were arranged in tiers at a very convenient height, giving everyone an opportunity of seeing all birds without any inconvenience. The day turned out bitterly cold, and it was a thoughtful act of the committee to provide warm water for the birds on arrival. Still, notwithstanding all the care expended on them, some of the birds went soft, making judging most difficult. The show managers, Messrs. W. Davies and Thomas Davies, had everything in good order, and they were ably assisted by a hard working committee, Messrs. W. H. Thomas, Geo. Davies, senr., D. W. Jones, Geo. Davies, junr., J. James, A. Evans, J. Hoare, Jno. Davies, C. Morris, A. V. Prince, T. E. Morris, and J. E. Goodliffe. The chairman, Mr. T. Davies, and vice, Mr. W. H. Thomas, are both keen fanciers, and were ever willing to do all in their power for the success of the society. Of the Sec., Mr. J. M. Shelby-James, we cannot speak too highly. Although not yet a fancier we have great hopes that he will soon become one, and if he makes as keen a fancier as he does a secretary, the older hands will have to look out.

Norwich, though not large in numbers, were good in quality, the local enthusiast, Mr. W. Davies, staging a very fine team and carrying off most of the awards; novice Norwich were disappointing. Yorks., both in champion and novice classes, were very fine, the teams put down by Messrs. Dykes, Watkins, Cook, and Maidment, being much admired. Borders were splendid in quality. Mr. D. Jenkins staging some real champions, and carrying off most of the chief awards. Unfortunately Mrs. Madagan's birds did not arrive until the first three classes had been judged, which was very regrettable. Mules and British were a fine collection, the Bullfinch and F.M. Goldfinch of Mr. Ford being birds of exceptional merit, as also were the exhibits of Mr. Chick, and the brace of F.M. Linnets of Mr. Jeffries. Crests were really grand, and it seems a great pity there were so few of these charming exhibits. Messrs. Smith and King, staged some real beauties, the former winning the four classes he competed in. Unfortunately, no doubt greatly due to the climatic conditions, the gate was a poor one, still we are given to understand that a considerable number of tickets were disposed of, and we trust the show will turn out a financial success, especially as the object is such a laudable one—the wounded soldiers fund. Judges: Canaries, Mr. J. H. Payne; Mules, Brit. and For., Mr. E. J. Davies.

GLASGOW
(Queen's Park) C.B.S.

Eighth annual show, Victoria Halls, Crosshills, Glasgow, Dec. 2. The hall is a very comfortable one, well lighted, and free from draughts. Staging was nicely arranged round the walls of the room, which was almost square shaped, and the arrangement had its effect in leaving the entire body of the hall for the comfort of visitors, who turned out in great numbers. Entries exceeded all expectations, and at the last moment an extra judge had to be called on to assist in making the awards in the Norwich section, which was a hot one. Mr. Barron, Glasgow, stepped into the breach and rendered first aid to Mr. Simpson, Airdrie. Yorks and Borders were good, though not quite so numerous, and were well handled by Mr. G. Hislop, Stirling. Mules, British and Foreign were judged by Mr. A. W. Watson, Edinburgh. Judging was over in good time, and all arrangements were carried out in capital style by a committee second to none. Everything passed off without the slightest hitch, and the management richly deserved the success. Hon. Pres., Sir J. Ure Primrose Bart.; Hon. Vice Pres., R. Heggie; Pres., R. B. Cairns; Vices, A. Forman, A. McLellan; Sec. and Treas., A. K. Hunter. Committee; Messrs. Jeffrey, Halliday, Connelly, Fulton, McClymont, McClusky, Keeling, Lees, Thomson, Black, Hamilton, Hardy; auditors, Messrs. Stewart and Ross; show manager, Mr. W. Connelly.

PORTH.

Annual show of the Porth and Rhondda Valleys C.B.S. held at Llwyncelyn Hotel, Dec. 14. Entries totalled 460, an increase of a hundred on last year notwithstanding that another show was being held a few miles away on the same day. The birds were nicely arranged in tiers and looked very comfortable, their wants being well attended to by a hard-working band of stewards. The show manager, Mr. J. Bevan, worked like a Trojan and had everything well in hand. He was ably assisted by an energetic band of stewards, Messrs. T. James, W. Baker, T. Emanuel, W. Evans, and J. Davies. The secretaries, Messrs. Challenger and Legg, are very capable and obliging officials, and carried out their portion of the arrangements admirably.

Norwich were really splendid, the winning yell. and buff cocks being birds of exceptional merit, as also were the brace of var. buff cocks exhibited by Messrs. Stubbs Bros. Other notable exhibits in this section were put down by Messrs. W. Davies, G. T. Jones, and Tedstone.

Yorks were very level in qual., condition alone in many classes separating the winners, Messrs. Thomson, Powell, Bevan, and Pritchard staging good teams. Novices were not as numerous as in some of the Welsh shows; still, what was lacking in quantity was made up in quality, Messrs. Maynard, Bevan and Pritchard's exhibits being much admired.

Borders were well to the fore, Mr. D. Jenkins carrying off the premier honours in four of the champion classes with a team of real gems, including the noted cinn. mkd. hen, Mr. Hurle winning in the other class with a lovely even mark of grand type and quality. The local crack, Mr. Bevan, won the novice class with a cl. buff—a very nice model.

Mules, especially darks, were a very nice lot, Mrs. Dalton carrying off the chief awards with a nice team, the winner, a dark Linnet of wonderful quality and colour, should yet do a lot of winning. British were good, the spl. for best British being won by Mr. Robinson with a charming Waxwing, in perfect feather, the runner-up being Mr. Chick's noted Yellow Bunting—another real gem. Mr. Chick also staged a lovely brace of Corn Buntings, and the noted hen Hawfinch and a charming Wheatear. Mrs. Dalton's Lesser Redpoll again headed her class, and was much admired, as also was the winning Bullfinch staged by Mr. Jellreys, a bird of wonderful size and colour. Judges: Canaries, Mr. J. Robson; Mules and British, Mr. S. J. Nicholas.

BROMLEY & PENGE (Combined.

This year the members of Bromley F.S. and Penge combined for the purposes of a members' show at Bromley. Mr. J. W. Ford officiated ably as secretary, and his efforts, well backed up by Messrs. Wraight and Judd, of Bromley Society, brought together a very fine collection. Quality in Norwich and Yorkshires was really good, particularly in Yorks., while Borders were splendid both in numbers and quality, a sweet little bird shown by Mr. Last in the unflighted class securing cup best unflighted and Soames' cup for best Border Fancy, in addition to special. Other specials were won by Messrs. Ramsey, Ford, and Last with Canaries, while in British Mr. W. Brown's Goldfinch and Mr. Dell's Blackbird won specials. The British were very nice classes, and close competition resulted. Mr. Geo. Gardner judgd.

Nor. Hens: 1, 2, 3, res, Dell, fine quartette, sweet and typical yell. leading, closely followed by a very shapely buff of nice feather. CL. or Tkd. CANARY QUERIES

NO RESULTS.

J. O. R.—There is no reason at all why the cock should not breed successfully next season, notwithstanding the fact that he failed to fertilise any eggs during the late season. Possibly he was a late hatched bird last season (1915), and in many cases the weather alone was responsible for many failures of this kind during the late spring and summer. Keep him on a plain diet for the most part through the winter, only treating him to mixed seeds and soft food about once a week each, on separate days; but you may give a little green salad when you can get it in a fit condition to use, and at other times substitute a morsel of carrot, boiled or raw, or sweet fruit three times a week. Keep him rather on the spare side, hard and active, until the beginning of next March, when a little extra feeding should quickly bring him into virile condition and ready to mate with a fair chance of success at the end of the month or the beginning of April, according to the weather prospects at the time. Please see Rule 2 at the head of these columns.

MOST SUITABLE FOR MULING.

A. Johnson.—The most suitable hen for muling would naturally depend upon the object you had in view—whether you wanted to try for singing Mules regardless of appearance, good dark show birds, or the much-sought-after Light Mules. So far as breeding Mules is concerned, any healthy Canary hen that will breed at all is a potential Mule breeder. But to try for good dark specimens, either for exhibition or song, a good-sized Norwich with plenty of rich colour would be best; a Yorkshire chosen on similar lines, but preferably of a pink-eyed strain, coming a good second. To try for light Mules you should get a genuine Sib.-bred hen—that is, a hen bred on consanguineous lines for several generations, the more the better so long as the size and stamina of the bird has not been materially affected thereby. If the Sib.-bred strain originates from a pink-eyed strain, or has a dash of Cinnamon blood in it, the chances of light Mules turning up will be materially increased.

WATERY EYES.

Jack.—See that the cage and perches are kept as clean as possible, and also take care that the bird is not exposed to direct cold draughts, especially when roosting at night. Then, get a few camomile flowers from a chemist and place a dozen or so—or about a drachm in weight—in a teacup, fill with boiling water, cover with a saucer, and allow to infuse beside the fire for an hour or so. Then strain off the clear liquid, add a small teaspoonful of boracic acid, stir till acid is dissolved, and when cold the liquid is ready for use. Catch the bird each evening, and bathe the eyes with the fluid for a few minutes, using a little fresh liquid and a fresh dossil of wool each time, and burning at once that which has been used. Dry the eyes carefully by squeezing the wool as dry as possible, and absorbing the moisture from the feathers with it a few times.

A MATE FOR YORKSHIRE.

Novice.—As far as colour is concerned, if you wish to breed cinnamon ticked or marked birds the best mate you could get for the clear yellow hen with pink eyes would be either a clear buff with pink eyes bred from pink-eyed or cinnamon-marked parents, or a lightly cinnamon ticked with a similar parentage. Avoid a bird with patches of colour on the back or breast, even if it is cinnamon colour, and give preference to one with eye marks or very light wing marks, but do not confuse eye marks with patches of colour on the head, crown, or upper part of neck. The bird should, of course, be selected with a view of counteracting any faults she may have in type, feather, etc. For instance, if your hen fails in length of leg you should choose a bird well up on the leg and showing plenty of thigh; or, if inclined to be crouchy or stout, see that the cock is extra slim and upstanding, or choose a very close and boxy-feathered bird, preferably bred from two buffs if your bird has any tendency to "trousers," or loose feathering around the thighs and on the flanks. These are points on which it is not possible to advise very definitely without seeing the bird or having a very full and clear description of it; hence it is only possible to give these general details about type.

PUFFY NORWICH.

M. R. W.—The bird seems to have got a little jaundiced, probably through a chill. Keep it in a rather warm place where the heat is fairly equable, and see that it is free from cold draughts or sudden extremes of heat and cold. In addition to the staple diet give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana or sweet fruit. In the drinking water, for two consecutive days, add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon-juice, and after this dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of water a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid, and give every second day this instead of pure water for drinking. Continue this treatment for a fortnight, if necessary, but you may discontinue it sooner if the bird seems quite recovered.

CREST BREEDING.

Beginner.—It is not usual, nor even advisable, to start with "a pair of Crests," if by that term you mean two birds both having crest. It is only in exceptional cases, and for some particular object, that two crested birds are mated together. The orthodox method, and the one for a beginner to adhere to as closely as possible, is to mate a crested bird with one that is termed a Crest-bred, which is a bird having all the typical point of the Crest save and except the crest, which is lacking, but in its stead the bird has exceptionally long and broad head feather, and a particularly massive head, of a type peculiarly adapted to transmit to its progeny the best type of head to carry a dense and well-shaped crest. Both types of bird are essential to breeding the best crest, and are mated together, just as yellow and buff, in colour, are used, and from this mating of a Crested and a Crest-bred bird you get both Crests and Crest breds in the young and in the same brood. I should imagine your crested hen is rather on the small side, and not too heavily furnished on the head. In that case you should try to get a Crest-bred buff cock with a massive head and short stout beak, and plenty of long, broad feather on the head, which, when turned forward from the fore part of the head will reach to the tip of the beak. It should have also a large massive body, and stout neck, of a Bullfinch type, with profuse and dense feathering, and well braced wings. You will not get such a bird for a few shillings, but it will pay you best to start with a good type and get as near this ideal as you can. In any variety, but in none more so than this, one good bird is worth many mediocre or wastrel ones.

MARKS ON CINNAMON.

Fancier.—The marks you describe are known as pencilling, and are not a feature to be cultivated, or bred for particularly. The object of the Cinnamon breeder is to breed his birds as clear and level in colour as possible, and, as a rule, heavy pencilling means a more or less muddy or smoky ground colour, and will always tend that way in the breeding cage when heavily pencilled birds are mated together. As a mate for your bird you should get a bird with as little pencilling as possible, and that little as faint as you can get it, and see that the ground colour is a clean cinnamon tone and of a nice level colour throughout, especially on the throat and lower breast and flanks.

LIGHT MULING HEN.

Archie.—Your bird is suffering from liver trouble, and I would advise the following treatment:—Stock mixture: Canary 1 part, sound sweet rape 3 parts, teazle 1 part. See that the rape is good, both by taste and smell, as inferior seed would not assist in a cure. Give soaked seeds (same mixture), small teaspoonful daily. Offer green food and fruit whenever you can obtain it. See that the green food is quite free from frost. Occasionally give a dose of six drops of syrup of buckthorn in the drinking water. Let her have a cage large enough to exercise in, and bathe on all fine days, giving the bath early in the day.

TREATMENT OF GOLDFINCHES.

K. C. W.—Finches in the open at the present time would not be so badly off for food; there would still be many wild plants with the seeds still in the seed pods, and others scattered on the ground around them, and nearly all the wild seeds that we gather in the autumn would still be available. One must not forget that birds have very sharp eyesight, and can detect the smallest seed, many of which we should fail to locate. (2) As regards the keeping of freshly caught birds, I prefer to keep them in separate cages; one reason is that one is able to attend to their individual wants, and another is that they are apt to be quarrelsome when kept together. Your seed mixture is about right, but it should also include cracked sunflower and maw-seed, and the cracked hemp should be given separately. At first they should be carefully watched and allowed an extra quantity of any particular seed they are partial to. Don't forget soaked rape and teazel. The main thing to remember in the treatment of these birds is to get them to eat and live; afterwards their diet can be regulated. (4) Individuals differ; the steady birds usually commence first. It is impossible to state any exact time; the treatment they receive would also influence their coming into song. One can only say that they should sing some time in the spring.

BIRDS IN THE KITCHEN.

Big Query.—(1) Blue Tits can be caught at any time during the winter months. There is a slight difference in the colour of plumage between the cock and hen, the cock bird being a little more brilliant, but this you would only notice by comparison. If you particularly want a cock bird you had better catch several and keep the brightest coloured bird of the lot. (2) As regards keeping birds in a kitchen, I am quite aware that thousands of pets are kept in such rooms, with more or less success. If the kitchen is large and airy and not over heated, there is not much harm in it, but in the majority of cases the birds are kept too warm, and being well fed get over stimulated and soon go wrong. Take your own case as an example, you have a Goldfinch with a hen Canary, and by the description you send of his actions I should say he is almost fit to breed. Now, remembering that in a state of nature the Goldfinch is a late breeding species, this is far too early, and is likely to lead to trouble. I would advise you to be careful in his feeding; give sunflower seed instead of so much hemp, and plenty of green food or fruit. (3) As regards rearing young on the food you mention, I have never tried it myself, so cannot speak from experience, but I am of the opinion that hen Canaries will rear on almost any food they are fond of, and I have known them to bring up broods on food containing less nutriment than the one you name. If you decide to use it, give a liberal supply of soaked seeds as well.

LINNET BARE.

W. H.—I feel convinced you are feeding your bird wrongly, but, of course, like most others seeking advice, you fail to say what seeds you are giving him; this is most important and should always be added when sending a description of a bird's illness. First of all give him an aperient; put 8 drops of syrup of buckthorn in an ounce of water, and let him have it to drink for six hours; see that it moves him freely, if not repeat next day. Feed mostly on soaked seeds, and if he will eat soft food let him have a small teaspoonful three days a week; give very little canary seed; offer green food and fruit daily; squeeze a few drops of fresh lemon juice in his drinking water. Just smear the bare place with vaseline or fresh lard. Examine the bird for insects.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

BREEDING MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS.

Zicka.—(1 and 2) It is not impossible to breed them in a cage, as other species of Lovebirds have been bred in a cage, though I cannot call to mind any instance of the Greyheads having done so. Much would depend upon the definition you put upon a large cage. In an aviary they have been bred as early as February and as late as December, as well as during the Spring and Summer months. (3) Add white oats and broken biscuits to your dietary when they have young to feed. (4) You had better refer this question to the Editor, as I have not read all the books that are in his list, but if you treat these birds the same as you would Budgerigars that is all that is required, excepting that they need as nesting material leaves and strips of thin bark, and dry groundsel stems, while Budgerigars do not use any nesting material. A nest-box, 9in. x 9in. x 11in., should be given them, or a small barrel 8in. or 9in. diameter and 10in. to 12in. deep; either should have an entrance hole 1½in. diameter, which should face the light.

BARE OF FEATHERS.

Ragamuffin.—Give your Cockatoo a piece of bread or cake, thinly spread with cod-liver oil emulsion, once or twice a day. The bird, without injury, can have stale bread and plain cake liberally, and a piece of either very lightly damped and then dusted with flowers of sulphur, daily, will benefit the bird; both the above to be given concurrently. Its bowels should be kept moving quite freely, yet must not be in a state of chronic watery looseness. One teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia to each ounce of the drinking water will keep them properly regulated—the bird's condition to regulate the frequency of the doses. It should be washed or sprayed with a dilute solution of fir-tree oil (from most florist seedsmen) twice weekly, to eradicate any parasites there may be. Try the following seed mixture: 1 quart each canary, white millet, oats, hemp, sunflower, and safflower seeds, also 2 quarts monkey nuts, well mix and keep a continuous supply in cage. Also give ripe fruit daily if it will eat it; sweet apple is very wholesome. Keep grit and cuttlebone continually in the cage, also a chunk of wood for it to exercise its mandibles upon. The treatment must be persevered with, as improvement will be gradual. Report progress in five or six weeks.

AMAZON PARROTS WITH INDIGESTION.

Mrs. T. L.—While the mixture you are using is a good one, the birds will be better for a change. Get one quart each giant canary, white millet, dari, white maize, safflower, sunflower, paddy rice, and oats; well mix, and then add two quarts of monkey nuts (shelled for preference), and again mix. The above mixture will be a very wholesome one, and more reasonable in cost than the ready mixed food you are using—it must be kept in a dust-tight vessel and stored in a dry place. Do not give any more milk pudding of any kind. Let them have a liberal supply of ripe fruit daily, also such extras as crusts of household bread, biscuit, and a little plain cake sparingly. Give Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in the drinking water) every other day for a month, and on the intermediate days lightly colour the water with chemical food; continue this for a month, then report progress. Parrot grit, cuttlebone, and a chunk of wood (for them to exercise their mandibles upon) must be continually in the cage.

BUDGERIGAR'S FEATHERS FALLING OUT.

Miss J. Bell.—It is rather a problem to find a cause for the trouble, as Budgerigars are such hardy creatures, they need no coddling, but changing continually from one room to another is certainly bad for them; for instance, moving a bird from a cool room to a hot one will frequently throw it into moult, and conversely changing from a warm room to a cool one will frequently set up the condition popularly termed "stuck in moult." In the light of your statement, diet the birds for a time on plain canary seed and note results; also it will be well to examine your cage for parasites, as it is just possible that this is the cause, and very probably so, especially as your own birds, when they come back to you from their temporary quarters, and any new ones you buy, are soon affected with this trouble; all this seems to point to the fact of some parasite trouble in the cage. Put them into temporary quarters, paint the cage with crude carbolic acid, well search all crevices, then well swill with boiling water and finally with cold; leave it in the open air, but under cover, to dry; then distemper it, and when dry it will be ready for the birds again. Before putting the birds back they should be well sprayed (use a fine sprayer) with a tepid quassia solution. Also lightly colour their drinking water with chemical food, and if there is any sign of constipation give a little fluid magnesia in the drinking water.

MEALWORMS FOR WAXBILLS.

Questions.—Mealworms will keep almost any length of time if kept in a dry warmish place, in bran; of course, you must use the large worms up first, or they will pupate and then turn to beetles, but these in their turn would lay eggs which would hatch out and supply you with some small worms for your Waxbills. If you do not keep them too warm the smaller worms among them should run for six months without pupating. Under present conditions I think you would be wise to lay in at least a three months' supply of sprays and millet seed at once, both for the sake of economy and ensuring a supply. Soft rain water is the best, of course, not stagnant rain water, but rain water pumped from a well should be quite safe, providing the well is not polluted by leaky sewage drains. The cock Orange-cheek has the orange patch under the tail, a little larger and of a more intense hue than his mate. The same applies to the Grey Waxbill, only in this case the distinction refers to the rosy patch on the under parts. In both cases the distinctions are comparative, and refer only to adult birds. It is also most difficult to tell with certainty the sex of an odd bird, though an "old hand" may make a shrewd guess.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harlow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's

Y. Yeovil.—Yorkshire cock died in a fit from apoplexy. The brain vessels were very congested, and the pulmonary vessels similarly so. The cold weather is likely the exciting cause.

GENERAL.

A QUESTION OF A CUP.

Crest-Bred.—It is an understood thing that death cancels contracts, and in the circumstances named we are of opinion that the son of the partnership, now that his father is dead, cannot claim any rights in respect of the two wins of the cup made in the lifetime of his father, and in partnership with him. If the survivor had carried on the business (in this case the business of showing birds) entirely on his own account, and as a continuation, then he might have had some claim on the two previous wins, but as it would appear from your letter that at the same time as he was showing at your show as a partner with his father, now dead, he was also showing elsewhere in his own name, we think he would have no legal right to claim, on winning the cup subsequently at your show in his own name, that the two previous wins of himself and his father should count as entitling him to its possession. We are giving this opinion entirely without prejudice, and if the matter is pressed to a conclusion we should advise you to take legal opinion on the subject.

GREETINGS AND THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Lidgett and Many Others.—Kindly accept our best thanks for the kind wishes expressed, with an assurance that the sentiments are heartily reciprocated. It is a sincere pleasure to feel that there is more than a business relation between the Editor of CAGE BIRDS and the readers of the paper, and it shall always be our sincere endeavour to maintain the friendly relations so happily existing. We have on our own part to thank those who have loyally helped us during more than two years of stress, and we hope that when the better times come, as come they will, our paper will at least maintain its reputation of the past.

ABOUT HOMING PIGEONS.

A. F.—Pigeon matters are a bit out of our line. If you write to the Editor, "Pigeons," Idle, Bradford, we are sure he will be able to give you the information desired.

COCK STONECHAT AT MORECAMBE.

Dixon.—The Stonechat is resident with us all the year round, and is most numerous in coastal counties such as your own. It is found throughout Scotland as well as in England, and breeds even as far north as the Hebrides. In winter birds of the species move to the coast and to the south, and doubtless some migrate to the continent, but we should think that there is nothing especially remarkable in a Stonechat being found in your county, Lancashire, in December.

BOOKS ARE STAR SHELLS

Our Handbooks Help Novice and Expert Alike.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS. By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.—An exceptionally helpful, intensely practical and instructive handbook for beginners and tyros at Canary Breeding. It contains 116 pages 7in. by 5in., and is profusely illustrated and contains innumerable hints helpful to all young bird-keepers. In this book the reader is instructed how to pair up the stock birds, how to cage and feed them, how to test the eggs, what to do when the young birds are hatched, and so on until the birds are old enough to be put on the show bench. It is interesting from cover to cover, and is by far the best 6d. handbook on the subject ever published. Price 6d., post free 7d. Cloth bound, 1/2.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS AND CAGES: THEIR CONSTRUCTION AND FURNISHING.—A practical, up-to-date guide on this most interesting subject; written and illustrated by "Cage Birds" artist-in-chief, Mr. H. NORMAN. It is fully illustrated with ten full-page photographic plates and numerous helpful sketches. Bound in cloth Gilt, price 2/-, post free 2/3; paper board covers 1/6, post free 1/8.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL. By H. NORMAN.—Published in two parts—"Hardbills" and "Softbills." This latest and most up-to-date manual on British birds has been written and illustrated in colours, and black and white, by "Cage Birds" artist-in-chief, Mr. H. NORMAN. The author, who has made a life-study of the subject, gives in these volumes information and hints of the utmost value to all keepers of British birds. Part I., "Hardbills," deals with the Finches, their keeping, feeding, showing, etc.; and Part II., "Softbills," Blackbirds, Thrushes, Larks, Buntings, etc. Price 1/- per part, post free 1/1.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS. By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.—A most useful manual for all keepers of Foreign birds. It will be found indispensable information of an entirely practical nature—by a life-long specialist—on the keeping and feeding of the more common and popular varieties of foreigners. It contains illustrations in colour, and black and white, of some of the well-known species, and should be purchased without delay by all fanciers who go in for this most interesting branch of bird-keeping. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½d.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL. By C. A. HOUSE.—5th Edition. A thoroughly practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing Canary). An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge. Price 1/-, post free 1/2. Cloth bound, 2/2.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED. By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7in. by 5in., is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid breeding. Being written by successful breeders, it is quite invaluable to everyone who would also be successful in his hobby. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

THE STOCK BOOK, OUR INVALUABLE BREEDING ROOM REGISTER. Compiled by G. E. WESTON. The stock book which makes bird breeding easy. The book no breeder of birds can really afford to be without. Everything that a cage bird breeder needs to assist him in keeping his accounts is found in its pages. A large number of emergency hints are also given for the assistance of the fancier during the breeding season. Price 6d., post free 7d.

NORWICH CANARIES. By C. A. HOUSE.—The latest and most practical manual on this popular variety of Canaries. It tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal," are worth the cost of the whole book many times over. Price 1/-, post free 1/1.

PET RABBITS, CAVIES AND MICE. By GEORGE GARDNER.—A complete and practical guide to the proper management of Rabbits, Cavies, and Mice. The information given in this handbook is thoroughly up-to-date, and deals with the housing, feeding, exhibiting, etc., of these popular pets. Many illustrations of champion rabbits, etc. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½d.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS. By various Leading Authorities. A comprehensive and complete manual on this most interesting subject. In it will be found information on the various seeds suitable for all varieties of cage birds, their food values, uses, etc. Descriptions and illustrations of the various wild plants that are indispensable to the successful keeping of all cage birds are fully given. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

SEPTIC FEVER OR CANARY PLAGUE. By R. H. CLARKE, M.D., M.A.—A very useful booklet on this subject, which should be found in every bird lover's library. Dr. Clarke has given the subject of his book very special study. Price 6d., post free 7d.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

NOTICE TO BIRD PURCHASERS.

It is advisable that all newly-purchased birds, especially foreign birds, be kept isolated from established stock for a week or ten days, until by their condition they establish the fact that they are thoroughly healthy.

GARSTON B B.A.

Seventeenth annual show, Dec. 2, Rechabite Hall. The show was a grand success under present conditions, 17 members staging 170 birds, and the judge, Mr. W. Young, had no easy task with some of the classes. Quality was of the best, some excellent teams being put out by Messrs. Rothwell, Griffiths, Evans, Corkhill, Woolfinden, and Mullock in Yorkshires, Messrs. Mullock, T. Radley, Prange, and Woolfinden, and J. Mercer in Norwich, whilst in the British classes Messrs. J. Lloydd, W. Leadbetter, Lonsdale, Jones, and Bryant gave the judge some excellent birds to separate, Goldfinches being a very fine lot, and some very good birds having to take a back seat. Everything went on during the day in businesslike manner, the sec. getting through his work far more easily than last year, which wae his first venture at running an annual show. Mr. J. Lloydd and T. Radley were very energetic in their attentions on the judge, and helped considerably in the management of the show. We were favoured by a very large number of visitors, amongst whom were a good number of fanciers from Liverpool and district. Mr. A. Wilkinson, an old member, and late sec. of the Society, kindly consented to distribute the prizes to the successful competitors, as follows:—Tate Cup and prize for best 6 nominated birds, Mr. J. Lloydd, 51 pts., the first member to win this trophy with British birds; runner up, W. W. Corkbill, cruet, 39 pts. Season Specials.—Yorks.: F. Rothwell, cake stand, 79 pts.; 2, T. Evans, pair of brushes, 53. Nor.: 1, T. Radley, photo frames, 46; 2, D. Griffiths and Son, jam dish, 33. Brit.: 1, J. Lloydd, photo frames, 141; 2, W. Leadbetter, vases, 88. Sectional prizes: Classes 1 to 12, F. Rothwell, 55; 13 to 24, T. Mullock, 28; 25 to 32, T. Evans, 29; 38 to 42, J. Lloydd, 29; 43 to 47, J. Lloyd, 25; 48 to 52, W. Leadbetter, 17. Best cl. Yorks., F. Rothwell; best cl. Nor., J. Prange; best green Yorks. or Nor., T. Evans; best Brit., J. Lloydd; best vhc Can., F. Rothwell; best vhc Brit., R. Lonsdale; best Greenf., J. Lloydd; vhc Greenf., J. GLASGOW (North West) C.B.C.

Fourth annual show, Blytbeswood Halls, Nov. 18. Entries came up very well and exceeded any previous attempts, and the gate also broke all records, the hall being packed all afternoon. President Thomas is unassuming, but methodical, and sees matters carried out in proper fashion; vice-presidents Loan and Brown are courteous and obliging, while the secretary and treasurer, Mr. P. Houston, is well known in Plainhead circles, and popular amongst his fellows, carries out the duties of his position in a trustworthy manner, ably supported by a fine committee, Messrs. Manson, Pringle, Stewart Junr., Boullet, Crawford, Brown, Davidson, Cumming, Runock; auditors, M. Stewart, J. D. Brown. Judges, Messrs. Simpson, Nor.; McLean, Bord.; Heggie, Yorks.; Craig, Brit.; Blackstock and Clark, Scots Fancy. All got through their work in nice time and to the general satisfaction. A grand list of specials was offered and hot competition was the result. Cup winners: Norwich P. Houston, with a fine cl. yell. ck., of much promise. Border, W. ROUND THE SHOWS.

ABERDEEN.

The Aberdeen Amalgamated C.B.S. held their show, Dec. 5, in the Music Hall. Like many other shows of the season, it was a War Charity Show, being held under the auspices of the Prisoners of War Bureau. Many willing helpers had everything ready as soon as daylight permitted judging. Some 500 exhibitors were present, and their being more varied than usual made the show the more interesting. Mr. H. Bennet, Bridlington, judged open Canaries, and no one could have taken more care in placing the awards. Criticism was almost nil, and we noticed him chatting with the exhibitors as if he were one of themselves. We were pleased to hear George had again got a few Norwich gathered together. Mr. Jonn Strachan judged Amateur Canaries. His work was more difficult, still, characteristic of John, he faced his duties in bulldog fashion, and with care and keen judgment gave great satisfaction. Mr. Geo. Finnie judged Mules and British, and seemed to thoroughly enjoy criticising the wild ones, for a smile frequently diffused his face.

Exhibits were sent again from long distances, even as far as Bristol. The foul-breasted Buff Nor. shown by Mr. Crawshaw, Accrington, was as last year, very much admired, and thought to be the best model in the show. All his birds excelled in type, but were not so stout as some here, and they looked none the worse for a heavy and successful show season. Geo. Mitchell's (Brechin) exhibits came in for much attention, and they were beautifully shown. The Crests belonging to Mr. J. A. Grant, Lossiemouth, came in for a lot of attention. His winning Crest is a regular eye-opener. His stud is characterised by soft, silky quality feather that, coupled as it is with size, always means reserve power.

Type and quality all round was an improvement upon last year. This was also applicable to the amateur section. It was nice to see so many amateurs trying their luck in the open section, and Mr. John Stephen made the champions feel small when he won the rose bowl for best young local bird. No one grudged John his success.

In Mules and British there were two very interesting classes. The A.V. Hybrids, and the Softbills; the latter were outstanding, and very much admired. The Grey Shrike shown by Mr. E. Taylor was short of tail or might have won the guinea special outright. Members were pleased to note that their popular secretary had taken his first notch for this special.

The work that R. J. Robertson (secretary) did cannot be spoken of too highly. Fortunate, indeed, is the society that possesses such a member. The committee did their part and all went smoothly to make one of the best exhibitions ever held here remembered. The exhibition answered to the full its purpose, namely, the education of the fanciers of the district, for there was a very large attendance.

CL. TKD. YELL. VAR. CK.: 1, Mitchell, easy win, well known, great sub., type and qual.; 2, Ironside, good col. and front, loses head and neck; 3, Hector, better head, big one, wins when judged; 4, Watson; 5, Duncan Ross; 6, Scott. BUFF (12): 1, 2, Hector, wins, short coupled, great front, fine qual. and col.; 3, Crawshaw, loses in stoutness and sheen, still, a grand exhibit; 3, Harris, hardly so stout, but very nicely balanced, nicely staged, good under-col.; 4, Strachan; 5, Sandison; 6, Morrice. VAR. YELL. CK. (13): 1, 3, Harris, winner massive head, bold front, grand cock bird; 3rd, better qual., nice type, lacks head properties; 2, Taylor, very nice type, a little open in feather; 4, Davidson; 5, Wile; 6, Hector. BUFF (9): 1, Crawshaw, perhaps the best known Canary in Britain, and best model, foul breast, in grand cond.; 2, J. Strachan, larger, nue col., up against something to-day; 3, Wagstaff, nice col. and front, somewhat cut away behind; 4, Watter; 5, Rae; 6, Stephen. CL. OR TKD. YELL. HEN (9): 1, Harris, easy win, well balanced, round head and front, good size, fine qual. and type; 2, Yeats, full, wide front, graod hen; 3, Crawshaw, straighter and smaller built, lacks bloom; 4, Wilson; 5, Hampton; 6, Wile. BUFF (8): 1, Mitchell, great subs., full wide front, fine qual.; 2, Campbell, fine head, neck, and subs.; 3, Emslie, nicely staged, little flat on sides; 4, Crawshaw, nice full type, dirty; 5, Rae; 6, Sandison. VAR. YELL. (4): 1, Mitchell, fine type, wide front, qual., and size; 2, Craigbead, good, but smaller built; 3, Scott; 4, Ironside. BUFF (9): 1, Taylor, beauty for size and front, nicely cut away, smallish head; 2, Mitchell, larger, shows more feather, not so typical; 3, Ironside, typical, feather not so soft; 4, Scott; 5, Ross; 6, Sandison. UNFLIG. YELL. CK. (9): 1, Mitchell, cl., great subs., type and qual., wins; 2, Harris, grizzle head, very sweet, smaller every way; 3, Ironside, better balanced variey., thicker in neck; 4, Rae; 5, Cranna; 6, Baxter. BUFF (10): 1, Emslie, cl., round head, thick-set, fine col., rounded, right type; 2, Mitchell, cl., good all round; 3, Harris, good, one, deserved his place; 4, Morrice; 5, Baxter; 6, Wile. YELL. HEN (13): 1, Mitchell, a perfect model, perhaps the best young bird, fine size, excels in type and qual.; 2, Wagstaff, cl., nicely proportioned; 3, 6, Stephen, Var., nicely balanced, lacks the head and neck of a winner, won rose bowl, best local young bird; 4, Crawshaw; 5, Sandison. BUFF (9): 1, Mitchell, the Glasgow medal winner, bears the stamp mark of his many winners; 2, Sandison, beautifully frosted, nice type, will be heard of yet; 3, Yeats, cl., fine front, loose up; 4, Crawshaw, Var., coarser in head, still good one; 5, Wile; 6, Sontar. CINN. (1): Stewart and Milne, really nice Cinn. cock. NON-FED YELL. CK. (9): 1, Ewart, cl., nice wide front, good shape and feather; 2, Morrice, grizzle head, similar built, loses action and qual.; 3, Hampton, full green, straighter built, still good one; 4, Fairweather; 5, Sandison; 6, Grigor. BUFF (6): 1, Hampton, cl., wins, nice front and fine balanced; 2, Wattie, grizzle head, fine feather, good 2nd; 3, Ironside; 4, Baxter; 5, Scott; 6, Goodall. YELL. HEN (4): 1, Ironside, var., stands out from others, very sweet and typical; 2, Hampton; 3, Grigor; 4, Baxter. BUFF (6): 1, Morrice, wins, nice all round; 2, Goodall, not much separated; 3, Wile; 4, Ironside; 5, Grigor. CREST (8): 1, 4, 5, 6, Grant, leader var., one of the best seen here, small crest, very dense long veiny feather, falling gracefully over a wide skull, much admired; 4th, var., not so dense, but lovely broad feather, and wide skull, the Glasgow 4th, our choice for 2nd; 5, 6, lovely grizzle crests; 2, Donald, fine cl. body feather, lovely large round crest, with nice droop; 3, Holman, green, good front, rough behind. C.B. CK. (5): 1, 2, Grant, winner the Glasgow first, now well known, massive in every way; 2nd, cl., fine soft feather, much lashed; 3, Donald, cl., smaller, built, close body feather, wider at back of head, the length of feather was a revelation, and plenty of it, more than equalled leaders, but did not look it till handled. HEN (2): 1, 2, Grant, green and variegated, lovely birds, could hold their own in good company. BORD. (16): Fine class: 1, 3, Blackie, two nicely tapered beauties; 2, M'Donald, lovely yell. right for qual., chest somewhat pronounced; 4, Campbell; 5, Taylor; 6, Smith. YORKS. (6): 1, 2, 3, 4, Junor, all good and deserved better competition; 5, 6, Simpson. CINN. CK. (3): 1, Wagstaff, well known buff, good subs.; 2, 3, Wilson, both yellow, naturally less subs., rich in col. and qual. HEN (1): Wilson, won sp for best Cinn., a beauty. A.O.V. (4): 1, 2, Mrs. Burgess, Gold and Silver Lizards, well known winners, and much admired; 3, Todd, buff coppy ck., useful for Lancs. breeding, neat crest, good body. PAIRS (6): 1, 4, Strachan, yell. ck., good size, col. and qual., with rare buff hen, good head, nice round front, well matched; 2, Sandison, very similar, but hen hardly so good in front, still a sappy pair; 3, Ross; 5, Park; 6, Goodall. AMAT. YELL. CK. (14): 1, Reid, fine qual., somewhat straight; 2, Dunn, similar, opener in feather; 3, Sinclair, our choice for first, heavy var., broad head, good front and feather; 4, Fleming; 5, Riddell and Cummings; 6, W. Strachan. BUFF (12): 1, 6, Campbell, tkd. eyes, nice type and qual.; 2, Reid, heavy var., thinner built, and rougher in feather; 3, Campbell, cl., poor carr.; 4, 5, W. Strachan, 4th might have been higher, good stocker, claimed £5 5s. YELL. HEN (18): 1, Davidson, good spread, fine feather; 2, Stephen, cl., good type, fails wing carr.; 3, R. Campbell, cl., good, but more open in feather; 4, 5, Ford; 6, Robb. BUFF (9): 1, Krohn, mkd. saddle and tail, good bird, somewhat erect; 2, Walker, large swanky hen, long-sided; 3, Christie, cl., very sweet, just on small side; 4, Ford; 5, Fleming; 6, Allardyce. CINN. (2): 1, 2, Prince, non-feds, on the small side. YELL. CK., 1916 (15): 1, cup, Emslie, nice one, good rich col., and round; 2, Sinclair, var., pressed hard, lost in stoutness; 3, A. Strachan, excels in qual., on the small side; 4, Riddell and Cummings; 5, Anderson. BUFF (20): Very difficult class to judge, type so varied; 1, Reid, certainly a fine large head, too long in body and tail, poor col.; 2, Ross, cl., our choice, fine rich soft feather, rich col., well over perch, nervous at times; 3, Dunn, var., shorter, nice front and feather; 4, W. Strachan; 5, Forsyth; 6, Christie. YELL. HEN (12): 1, Krohn, var., good size, nicely moulded and fine qual.; 2, Gordon, var., equal, but hardly so fine in feather; 3, Stephen, var., very smart, too small; 4, Strachan, very taking Cinn. var.; 5, Robb; 6, Ford. BUFF (18): 1, Krohn, cl., a model, right type, nicely frosted, good size, rare qual.; 2, 3, Sinclair, var., typical, rich col., shows more feather; latter, smaller, and paler in col., two useful hens; 4, Reid; 5, Forsyth; 6, Ross. OLD SECTION, NON-FED CKS. (9): 1, 6, Noble, cl., good size, close feather; 2, Bowie, var., nice big head, and front, the right sort, claimed; 3, Fyfe, cl., typical; 4, Ross; 5, Bryson. GATESHEAD.

A Record Show—Nearly 1,000 Entries.

The 17th annual show of Gateshead C.B.S. in the Rochester Street Schools, Dec. 9, had a record entry of 980, and the birds made a glorious display, giving the judges a real hard day's work. Of the management we cannot speak too highly, but they were sorely tried owing to a breakdown on the railway, which caused some of the birds to arrive late, and left judging late in being finished. Otherwise all passed off splendidly. The committee is headed by the chairman and show manager, Mr. A. Holden, who has done a lot for the society in past years, working very hard and keeping things well in order. He was well supported by a good band of workers in Messrs. H. Wellsbury, J. Maddison, E. B. Hooper, J. W. Coulthard, F. Rowan, R. Havis, G. Dobson, W. Espie, R. Tindale, J. W. Lawson. C. G. Pettersson attended to the door to see nobody paid twice, and the hall was well filled before judging was finished. We must not forget W. Curry, the genial sec., who gets through an enormous amount of work with never a grumble. Among the visitors we noticed Messrs. Farrar, Steele and Parkett, Sheffield; Carr, Middlesbrough; Lawson, Carlisle; and J. Wright, West Hartlepool.

Norwich were the finest collection seen in the North for some time; good birds were staged by W. Crawshaw, J. Thomas, J. Carr, and the section produced an average of just over 21 per class. Crests were good in quality, if not in number. Yorks. were an exceptionally good average, 18 per class. The winning Unflig. Yell. cock and Unflig. Yell. hen of R. Heggie being much admired, as was the Unflig. Buff cock of Mr. Thomas.

Borders were a tremendous entry, 40 being staged in the Novice cock class. Mules and British were also good; splendid Mules were shown by Messrs. Chick and Heggie, and Dr. M. A. Wilson, while J. Wright supported the British with 38 entries, and did well. Luncheon was provided at the hall for visitors, the arrangement proving very convenient, and being greatly appreciated.

The judges were: F. W. Laidlow (Nor. and Yorks.); T. Almond (Crests and Selling); D. Hamilton (Borders and S. Fancies); C. Waters, Mules and British. Their awards were well received, but owing to judging being late in finishing, and birds being sent away by early trains, we could not obtain notes of Mules and British.

MR. LAIDLOW'S CLASSES.

MANSFIELD O.S.

Second annual open show, Dec. 16, in the large club room of the Horse and Groom Hotel, Stockwell Gate. Entries came up splendidly, and each class contained some noted birds just finishing off their season's outing. Great credit is due to this hard working society, and we hope to see this open annual fixture improving each year. The room was nicely fitted up, and the birds beautifully staged so that every one could be seen at a glance, each bird having splendid attention from well known fanciers. We were sorry to see several birds thick on account of the very cold night, but they were receiving every attention. Mr. B. Gabbitas is an ideal secretary, and great credit is due to him and his committee for running such a well-managed show. Mr. J. Robson judged. When we left the room was nicely filled with fanciers from all parts.

Norwich were a fine collection, and contained many noted winners, the novice classes being keenly contested. In Yorks, although the number was not great, quality was of the best. British were quite a show in themselves, Messrs. Chick, Parlett, Blacken and Leadbeater having fine teams out, all in the best possible condition. Crests were quite a failure.

EDINBURGH (Open) O.S.

63rd Annual Show, Nov. 18, Buccleuch St. Halls, an ideal and cosy hall for such a grand display of Scotch Fancy and Belgians. Entries were about the same as last year, and the quality was well sustained. The office-bearers are a well-known body of fanciers, had everything in good order, and all worked with a will. The Sec., Mr. Lilc, is an adept at secretarial work, and had everything in perfect order, and also did a lot in sending the birds away. The judges were Messrs. Carlow, Conway, Stewart and Paterson, who gave general satisfaction. It was very gratifying to see such a turn out of fanciers from Dundee in the North to Glasgow in the West. The cup winner was a very nice buff piebald shown by W. David, runner-up W. Allan with a hen.

WHITEHAVEN.

A capital response was given by exhibitors to the schedule issued for the third annual show of the Whitehaven Yorkshire Fanciers' C.B.S., Dec. 16. The Tangier Hall, in which the show was held, was this year taxed to its utmost capacity, no less than 300 exhibits being forwarded in the 21 classes provided. Yorks., with eight champion and three novice classes, averaged nine per class. Borders had an average of 20, and British reached 17 per class. A regrettable feature in the Border and British section was the passing by the judge, Mr. J. Ellwood, Cockermouth, of every exhibit whose cage contained anything else than plain canary seed, as stated in schedule. The section that suffered most was the British, no fewer than ten cages being debarred from competition in the A.O.V. Scedeater. Owing to the illness of the appointed judge for Yorkshires, Mr. Coulson, the Committee secured the services of Mr. Harryman, Penrith, a former south country exhibitor of Yorkshires, who gave every satisfaction in this section. The officials, Messrs. Brown, Barrie, Stewart, Walker, Buchannan, Armstrong, with Mr. Smith (chairman) and Mr. J. McLaughlin (sec.), each and all worked hard for the success of the show.

LONG EATON C.B.S.

Annual open and members' show Dec. 9, in the club room of the Blue Bell Hotel. Entries came up very fairly indeed, and the quality was very good, Mr. E. Fox showing a grand team of Norwich, and Mr. Wall staging a splendid team of Yorks. The birds were splendidly staged, and all could be seen at a glance, and were well looked after by a band of hard-working committee, who left nothing undone for the comfort of the birds. Special note should be made of the splendid display of the members' birds, which were truly a fine show. The cups were very keenly contested for. Mr. J. Turner makes a fine sec., and had things well in hand, and everything carried out A1. Mr. W. Vardy judged. There was a nice attendance.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Ninth annual open contest, Dec 1, 2, Old Boar's Head, Manchester. Five classes were provided, with a splendid list of specials, including 3 cups in classes 1, 2 and 4; in classes 1 and 2 prizes were given down to the 9th bird. Entries reached 200, a record for the club, the judges, Mr. Oldroyd, Mr. Wareing, and Mr. Lyons having no easy task in allotting the prizes. Novice young birds hold the record of entries in one class, with 133; it must have been a trying task for Mr. Lyons, as he sat for 12 hours on the Friday and till 2 o'clock on Saturday to give every bird an equal chance. I think this is also a record for a judge to devote two days to one class. Several birds were claimed on the Saturday, including the first prize winners in classes 2 and 5, the former being claimed by 4 exhibitors at the catalogue price of £2, and finally sold for £3 5s. It speaks well for the owner, Mr. Vernon Cowpe, of Haslingden, as both his birds were claimed, the other getting hc. The new Sec. being unable to get off work, his duties were again undertaken by Mr. Kilshaw, of Bolton, who fulfilled the office to perfection. The stewards experienced some difficulties in despatching birds that were left over week-end, for several could not be got away till the Tuesday morning, owing to the railway companies being so short staffed. Mr. J. T. Johnson, Bacup, won 1st and 4th in champion young birds, the first prize winner being a splendid bird; Mr. Cowpe gained premier honour in novice young birds, Mr. R. Vernon in champion old birds, Mr. Beetson in amateur any age, and Mr. Wardleworth in £2 limit class. Mr. Lyons has the honour of winning the challenge cup and gold medal for best bird shown by a member with extra 1st in champion young birds. Several well-known visitors were present on the Saturday from all the well-known Roller centres, Wigan being represented by a small army of exhibitors, and the room was packed on the Saturday. A record entry and a good gate will make the show a big success.

MAESTEG C.B.S.

Annual members' show, Dec. 6, in the billiard room of the Bird and Hand Hotel, a lofty, spacious, nicely decorated room, around which the exhibits, nearly 100, were tastefully arranged, with numerous decorative plants. The show proceeded like clockwork, and the fact that some 400 tickets were sold before the show opened speaks well for the energy and enthusiasm of the sec., Mr. Owen Couzens, and his committee and members. Mr. E. W. Allsopp judged.

In the Plainheads W. Morgan won in the class for cocks with a capital all round cl. buff, and in hens class with a vareg. yell., which also captured sp for best Plainhead. Messrs. Roberts, Williams, and Griffiths won in Yorkshires, the first named being awarded sp best Yorks. and sp best Canary. In the British 1st and 2nd in Hen Goldfinches fell to Owen Couzens, both exhibits having expansive, square cut blazes, though both lack hard condition. The F.M. class was won by T. Griffiths with a promising bird, C. Huntley won in H.M. Linnets, also sp best Linnet, W. Mortimer in F.M. A capital Bullfinch won for O. Couzens, whilst C. Huntly headed the Greenfinches. W. Evans won in British hens with a Bullf. hen, and O. Couzens won 1st and sp best exhibit in show with a topping Jonque dark Linnet Mule.

CLITHEROE C.B.S.

Ninth annual show, Dec. 2, in the National School, and a very creditable exhibition. Several of the members have been called to the colours, but those who remain are striving hard to keep the flag flying. In this endeavour they are receiving valuable assistance from the President (Alderman J. T. Whipp), and vice-president (Alderman W. Hardacre), who figured as opener and chairman respectively. Entries were about 40 less than last year. A number of special prizes were offered, chief amongst these being the society's challenge cup for best bird. This was awarded to Mr. L. Grainger, the 2nd to Mr. R. Calverley, and prize for best hen fell to Mr. Barnes, who also won Mr. Hargreave's special. Mr. J. Cook won Ramsden's special for hottest fed. Mr. E. Godley judged; Mr. J. Cook, show manager.

EASTERN COUNTIES C.B.S.

Show in aid of the Red Cross funds, Dec. 9, Art Gallery, Ipswich. Members' classes were the mainstay, and altogether it was a very nice show, with plenty of visitors, despite the weather. Several members of the newly formed East Anglian Norwich Plainhead Club paid us a visit and seemed very pleased with the result of this, our first attempt at open classes. Entries in these classes did not quite come up to our expectation, but with better classification another year, I feel sure we shall meet with a very hearty support. We received the patronage of the East A.N.P. Club, for which we tender them our best thanks.

OPEN CLASSES: Nor. Yell. Cock: 1, sp, Rippon, eye mkd. Yell., good col., grand head (unflighted); 2, Harrod, eye mkd. yell., lovely feather and col., very close; 3, Shearing, cl., much larger than the 1st and 2nd, good col., little open in feather, good stock bird; 4, Shearing; vhc, Gordon Stewart; hc, Martin. Buff: 1, sp, 2, Rippon, beautiful cl. and eye and wing mkd., 1st grand col. and qual., round as an apple; 2nd, similar stamp, both unflighted; 3, Gordon-Stewart, wing tkd., good size, not quite the qual.; 4, vhc, Hurst; hc, Hall. Yell. Hen: 1, sp, Gordon-Stewart, eye and wing mkd., nice carr., typical, wins; 2, Kerr, bit rough when taking notes; 3, J. J. Smith, cap and wing mkd., typical Norwich, good wings and tail; 4, vhc, Hurst; hc, Olle. Buff: 1, sp, J. J. Smith, a bouncer, nat. col., good head and body, well braced wings, neat tail, wins; 2, 4, Shearing, variegs., good subs., a little soft just now; 4th, clear, nice feather, a little long in tail; 3, vhc, Hall, another clear, of good shape, must have pressed for 2nd; hc, Tomlinson; c, Hall. RICHMOND (Surrey) C.B.S.

Fourth annual show, St. John's Hall, Nov. 20.; 191 birds entered. Mr. Rohson judged. The show was the best ever held by the society. Specials were numerous, Mr. Colin Brown assisting materially in that direction. Miss Squires gave 5s.; Mr. Baker, Cowes, 5s. for best Nov. Nor., won by Mr. Martin; and Dr. Weeks, of Southampton, 2s. 6d., won by Mr. Hollingsworth. Almost every member gave a spl. Mr. W. H. Phipps took Mr. Jones' special of 5s., Miss Squires' 2s. 6d., and Mr. Colin Brown's 5s. for best champ. Nor. ck. Our Wokingham friends helped us also, and Mr. Wilson has given freely, also Miss Garland. Mr. T. Harris won spl. best Yorks., a grand bird. Mr. Snow gave us a treat with his threo Hybrids. Mr. Hatton, M.R.C.V.S., also gave a spl. Our sympathies go out to Mr. Baker, of Cowes, in the sad affliction which has overtaken his wife, her eyesight grievously failing her.

GAINSBOROUGH.

Fifth annual members' show, Dec. 9, in Co-operative Hall. The entry was a capital one, and quality extra. Staging was neatness itself, all benches tastefully decorated. Yorks. were a nice collection, the best lot seen at this show, but Norwich took pride of place, pressed hard by a delightful assortment of British. Special winners: Best 1916, Jackson; best in show, Newbert; rose bowl, Newbert, with a very massive and grand quality cl. yell. Nor.; best Brit. and best 2nd do., Messrs. Miller and Hulatt. Judging was over in good time, and cards displayed promptly. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged, and his awards gave satisfaction.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Successful members' show, Dec. 9, headquarters. The entry was good, over 250 birds being staged, and there was a distinct advance in merit, as compared with last year. In Yorks. some very fine specimens were on view, particularly the unfl. Clear Yellow of Mr. T. Ridal, which won special for best bird. Norwich were not so numerous, but quality was superb. Crested and Crestbred exhibitors came up well, and the birds included several excellent specimens. In fact, the section was almost equal to an open show. British and Foreign were a treat, and included many well-known exhibits. The keenest competition was in the unfighted classes for the cups, which were awarded as follows:—Yorks.: W. Bingham. Nor.: Irviue Hartley. Crest: J. Evans. Brit.: P. Walsh. For.: R. Colton. Mr. J. H. Roe judged.

Corrections in Show Reports.

In the report of Barrow Red Cross Show, 1st in Amateur Buff Norwich should read Shorrock, not Huggins.

Prize Money Paid.

All prize money and specials for Larkhall C.B.A. Red Cross Show have been sent out. Any fancier who may have been overlooked should please communicate with the secretary, T. H. McGregor, 48, Sarahville Crescent, Larkhall.

In Aid of a Stricken Roller Canary Fancier.

In response to a letter published in our issue of Dec. 16 appealing for funds to purchase a self-propelling car for Mr. T. Simpson, of Wakefield, a well-known Roller fancier who is rendered almost helpless by spinal disease, we have received half a crown from Mr. W. N. Shepley, the author of the article on the Old and the New Bell Glucke which appeared in our last issue. This would appear to be a case where "He who gives quickly gives twice," for the need is an urgent one, and we shall be pleased to receive and acknowledge further subs. for this very worthy object.

A Tall Magpie Story.

"Gareth," whose Sporting Notions columns in the "Referee" are often enlivened by interesting birdy notes, says that he has received from the Editor a letter from a reader whose son at the front wrote him as follows:—"The following is very tall, but true as gospel. We have a retrieving Magpie here! It goes shooting with some brother officers, and gets to the victim almost before it reaches the ground; its only fault is that if you are not quick it starts to consume the 'bag.' If a bird is missed it cocks its eye at the shooter on the first occasion, on the second it will scream, and should you unfortunately miss a third it goes off to try and catch it for itself."

Why Not More Foreign Finch Hybrids?

Referring to the Alario-Greenfinch Hybrid, an account of the breeding of which was given by the owner, Mr. S. A. Reynolds, in our issue of Dec. 2, "J. G.," in the "Scotsman," says: "At the recent Clapham exhibition an interesting exhibit was staged by a Stourbridge exhibitor. This was a cross between an Alario finch cock and a British Greenfinch hen. Unfortunately, the judge marked it "wrong class," as he could not make out its parentage, and put it down as a Cinnamon Greenfinch-Canary mule. This was not surprising, as the young Hybrid is a hen, and neither of its parents possesses distinctive high colouring in their plumage. It has, however, the decidedly characteristic Alario head, without the father's cap marking. The Alario finch, although a native of the East, has none of the orthodox bright colouring usually associated with birds from that zone. Its body colour is a nice shade of brown, with a breast of grey and black cap over the head, a soft, beautiful blending, even if somewhat sombre. . . . The crossing of the foreign finches with our British birds opens up a wide field for experimenting amongst those interested in hybridising, and it is to be regretted that some of our leading ornithological societies do not offer some encouragement by providing classes for such exhibits."

A Thought for the Wild Birds.

Even in these economical times, says the "Sheffield Daily Telegraph," there are many crumbs and scraps, otherwise useless, which it is humane to save for the birds. These little minstrels are feeling the pinch of the frosty weather, as was evidenced by the eagerness with which they crowded to our bird-table one sharp morning lately.

First visitor of all was the Song-Thrush, a sensitive bird which hardly seems fitted by nature to endure the English winter. A period of cold weather invariably thins the ranks of this species, and, in such Arctic winters as that of 1894-5, the Song-Thrush has come dangerously near extinction. Those who know and love his cheery song, one of the earliest of the year, will realise that such a result would be a tragedy.

The Blackbird is a very shy and casual visitor, and the hen seems the only one to venture even when we have a visit from that species. The Blackbird seems unlucky in his plumage. It is so very conspicuous, especially in the white and leafless landscape. Nor does the striking gold of his bill help matters in this respect. Evidently the Blackbird's too conspicuous feathers have made him a marked and cautious bird.

Hunger, however, will tame a lion, and, if the frost should become prolonged, not only Blackbirds, but even shyer inhabitants of the wilds will come near to the houses.

REVIEW OF SCHEDULE.

Pontypool C.B.S.—St. James's Hall, Jan. 4. Judge, J. R. Houghton. 36 classes: Nor. 11 (3 Nor.), Yorks 12 (4 Nov.), Bord 4 (1 Nov.), A.O.V. 1, Brit. 4, Mules 2, Sell. 2. Prizes 10/-, 5/-, 2/6, if 9 entries. Sliding scale if less. Fee 1s. 6d. Ent. close Dec. 30 to W. D. Lewis, Holyoake Terrace, Abersychan.

A Freak Robin.

A Robin with a white tail is reported from Aberlour, Scotland. Excepting for its pure white tail feathers the bird is said to be of normal coloration.

The Pied Wheatear in Orkney.

In the "Scottish Naturalist" Mr. J. Bain describes the occurrence in Orkney of the Pied Wheatear Oenanthe pleschanka. The only previous record in Great Britain is of a female in the Isle of Man in 1909.

A Gentle Hint.

Will members of the Provincial Roller C.C. please note, writes, J. T. Smith, hon. sec., that the next meeting will be held at the Joiners' Arms, Bolton, on Jan. 6, the date of Bolton Show, when the Secretary hopes that more than one member will be present.

Norwich Canary Missing from Porth Show.

Kindly ask exhibitors at the recent open show of the Porth and Rhondda Valleys held Dec. 14, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, if anyone has had a Norwich Natural Colour sent by mistake. The bird was third prize in class 10, No. 13. The stewards at the show feel confident the bird was packed and sent with others in the same case, and our Secretary says the bird was ticked off in the entry book as having been packed with the others in the same case. The bird belongs to Mr. T. H. Davies, Heol Dan, Llangyfelach, Morriston, who would be glad to hear of anyone who has the bird, or it may be sent direct to me at 7, Primrose Terrace, Porth, Glam.

Nine Eggs in a Chaffinch Nest.

At the last meeting of the British Ornithologists' Club a discussion relating to abnormal clutches of eggs was continued. Among the unusual clutches to which reference was made were a set of fourteen eggs in one nest of a Nuthatch, and eight eggs (originally nine) in a Chaffinch's nest. In the latter case it was explained that the first two eggs had been laid, and then buried by a further lining of the nest. Then three more had been laid and the nest deserted for some time, as all these five eggs were quite stale. Then four more eggs were laid, which were quite fresh when found. All nine eggs were evidently laid by the same bird.

Among other eggs exhibited were the only two sets of six ever found by the exhibitor, a very handsome, heavily blotched set found by him near London, a set of small eggs taken by him in Sweden, and several sets of pure spotless blue and blue with cloudy lilac blotches and fine black spots.

In the same tray were five sets of Bullfinches' eggs, including a set with pure white ground and bright rust-red markings resembling some varieties of Great Tits' eggs taken by Mr. Read in Somerset. Another set were white with only faint markings, whilst a third set were pure white without any markings.

A Bird that Cannot Fly.

New Zealand is noted above any other part of the world for its flightless birds, one of which of course is the Kiwi (Apteryx), a bird which, although unable to fly, could outstrip a horse in fleetness of foot. The "Strand Magazine" for December has a most interesting account of another species, the Weka, a bird which, in spite of its handicap in not being possessed of the power of flight, is said to be the most genial and sociable bird the Dominion possesses. The article is illustrated by a drawing of a pair of these curious birds, and concludes as follows:—"Most birds have inherited a shyness of man. The Weka seems to have inherited an instinct in the opposite direction. When aware of man's arrival in its haunts it comes out to meet him, with an obvious wish to make his acquaintance. The same instinct is possessed by a few other New Zealand birds, but not by any birds introduced into the Dominion from other countries.

The Weka's tameness is beyond all reason. It cannot even learn a lesson. When we chased Wekas away from our hut on the Gouland Downs they merely ran round one side of a tussock and appeared at the other side, with an air of innocence and unconcern, and immediately tried to get inside the hut again. They refused to take "no" for an answer. Threats had no effect on them whatever.

It is this astonishing effrontery and an inexplicable fondness for human society that endear the Weka to all who go up into New Zealand's wild places, and I have discussed the Weka with shepherds, musterers, bushfellers, and miners.

These men, by the bird's thievish tricks, have lost tin pannikins, forks, spoons, and other possessions at times when such things could ill be spared; but they have assured me that, in spite of their friend's foibles and frailties, they would not be without its entertaining company, and that its presence at the camp or along the forest track is always welcomed.

It now enjoys the law's protection, and happily is at least one member of New Zealand's strange avifauna that probably never will become extinct."

A MATTER OF OPINION.

A paper read before the members of the Queen's Park (London) C.B.S., by Mr. W. G. Sanders.

In opening, I should like to tell you that I do not pose as any great authority of any branch of the fancy of which I am so fond, namely, that of bird keeping, but I think it is the duty of every member to at least try to do something to interest his fellow members, and I will endeavour to do my bit by giving you this paper in the hope that some good may accrue from it, or by the discussion that may arise out of it.

I know it is a difficult task for one like myself to give anything new to the fancy, when we have a number of famous fanciers giving their experiences week by week at some club or another.

However, I will address my remarks chiefly to the novice, and when I say novice, I mean the one who is just feeling his way in the fancy so to speak. My advice to him is to frequent at every opportunity any show or fellow member's bird room, ask his fellow member to allow him to pass his opinion on any bird he may show him, and then get him to tell him if he has made a good report on it. I think he will learn the points more quickly in this way than any other of which I know.

The One Opinion that Counts.

I should like you also to bear in mind that anything I may say does not allude to anyone in the fancy, but simply expresses a view of my own. For instance, often we get a show and see a particular bird standing first, and then we hear certain of the critics say, "The third bird should have won in my opinion," but you must always remember that the judge has passed his opinion, and that is final.

Many times I myself have thought certain birds should have stood higher in the cards, but again it has simply been my opinion versus the judge's, and of one thing I am certain, that at all the shows in which I have taken part, the judging has been done in a fair and honest way without fear or favour for anyone.

The first duty of the novice when entering the fancy is to select his variety, and he at once seeks the opinion of those better qualified to know whether he has made a successful start or not, but after a year or two in the fancy he will be better able to judge for himself. At that stage I would advise him to ask himself the question: "Is my own opinion worth considering first?" as by that time he at least ought to know what constitutes a good bird in his particular variety.

For instance, he may have bred say two or three good hens, and, finding out he needs suitable partners for them, he usually proceeds to some fellow fancier's room who has been pretty successful, to procure a mate or mates for his hens. He sees a number of good birds, and is offered some, but does he buy the bird or birds he wants? My opinion is that he buys rather what his fellow fancier wants to sell, and although he may get good value for the outlay he has made, he does not get what he went for, namely, the suitable partner.

Spurred by Success.

He probably by now has two wins to his credit, and he realises he must have something a bit better on his advance to his next section. He is quite hot with knowledge, and feels he has an opinion of his own, at least that is my experience of the majority of the novices who have favoured me with a visit to my room. But I like to have even a novice's opinion on my birds, for I feel it helps me considerably. I strongly advise anyone who has had a set-back with a bird of which he has had a good opinion, to try and meet the judge in the evening and get his opinion as to why you were outclassed, as all the judges I know are ever ready to explain why you were beaten; then you have his opinion, and your own you know.

But always remember that the judge has already passed his opinion, and that is all; the best of judges are always liable to make a slip.

Then we have, as in pairing to produce winners, methods of feeding and rearing, inbreeding, double-buffing, double-yellowing, housing and keeping our birds generally, methods which are so various that to me it all amounts to a matter of opinion as to which is the best to adopt.

My reason for choosing "A Matter of Opinion" for the title of this paper is that a deal of discussion, sometimes quite unpleasantness, has arisen out of views differing as to the merits of some exhibit. I could state many cases in point, but I have no wish to do that. If anything I have said has been of any interest, I shall feel amply repaid for the time spent in writing these few lines.

We are indebted to Mr. H. F. Witherby, the Editor of "British Birds," for permission to extract from an exhaustive article entitled: "THE MOULTS OF THE BRITISH PASSERES, WITH NOTES ON THE SEQUENCE OF THEIR PLUMAGE," which is appearing in the magazine, the portions which refer to such birds as are generally kept in cages or aviaries. Readers are referred to the magazine mentioned for the complete account.

THE moults of the Shrikes are exceedingly puzzling, and so different that it seems inadvisable to summarise them. Those interested in the subject may consult the details given below, which are the result of a very careful examination of all the material I can find. Whether I have interpreted the moults correctly or not, other workers must decide, but in some cases, and especially in the Red-backed Shrike, it has been difficult to say exactly what takes place. Shrikes would seem to be in a transition stage with regard to their moults.

LESSER GREY SHRIKE (Lanius minor).

ADULTS.—Complete moult in autumn. In February and March (sometimes April) there is a moult confined, so far as I can discover, to the body-feathers. The male in winter has a few grey feathers mixed with the black of the forehead, and the plumage is not so bright and clean looking as in summer. The female in winter has more grey on the forehead than the male, the ear-coverts are browner, the upper-parts are duller, and the under-parts have less pink. After the spring moult the female becomes more like the male in winter.

JUVENILE.—Forehead whitish, rest of upper-parts brown-grey (not blue-grey as adult) and the feathers barred with dark brown, the under-parts white to pale cream, with the flanks and under tail-coverts faintly barred, the wing-coverts tipped with buffish-white. Sexes apparently alike.

FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile body-feathers are moulted in autumn, but not the wing-coverts, wing or tail-feathers, and frequently a number of juvenile body-feathers are retained. The male in first winter has only a few black feathers on the forehead (sometimes none), is brownish grey on the upper-parts, and has a creamy, instead of pinkish, tinge on the under-parts. The female is much the same, but has no black on the forehead and is browner grey on the upper-parts.

FIRST SUMMER.—In February and March a complete moult takes place, all the wing and tail-feathers being involved instead of the body-feathers only as in the adult. After this moult the birds become indistinguishable from the adults, except that the male has a few grey feathers on the forehead.

GREAT GREY SHRIKE (Lanius e. excubitor).

ADULTS.—Complete moult from September to November, the wing and tail-feathers often commencing as early as July. From March to May (sometimes June) there is a moult confined to the body-feathers. In the male the winter and summer plumages are the same. In winter the female frequently has faint wavy brown bars on the breast, but many examples are indistinguishable from males. After the spring moult the bars on the breast are usually absent, or when present are very faint.

JUVENILE.—Upper-parts grey, washed with brown, the hind part of crown, nape, rump and upper tail-coverts usually with dark brown wavy bars, but these are sometimes absent, the under-parts are white, washed brownish, with faint brown wavy bars on the breast and flanks, and fewer on the chin and throat, the innermost secondaries and greater coverts are tipped with brownish instead of white and the median coverts are dark brown with tips of greyish-brown speckled with dark brown, instead of all black as in the adult, the lesser coverts are greyish-brown speckled with dark brown, instead of grey with black bases as in the adult. The sexes are alike.

FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile body-feathers, innermost secondaries, lesser and median wing-coverts and inner greater coverts are moulted from August to December, but occasionally a good many juvenile body-feathers are retained until the spring moult. Except for the juvenile feathers retained, the first winter bird is much like the adult, but both sexes have wavy brown bars on the breast though those on the female are stronger than those on the male.

FIRST SUMMER.—A moult takes place as in the adult, after which the birds become like the adults.

RED-BACKED SHRIKE (Lanius c. collurio).

ADULTS.—So far as I can ascertain the adults have only one moult. The body-feathers often commence as early as July, but the wing and tail-feathers and the rest of the body-feathers usually do not moult until December to February and the moult is sometimes not complete until March. I think this must be regarded as one moult, though it is interrupted and spread over a long period. The female has a browner and less grey crown and nape than the male, and a browner and less chestnut mantle, the rump also is brown and the under-parts are white without any pink and with the breast, flanks and sides of throat marked with black-brown crescentic bands, the tail-feathers are brown with narrow white tips and white borders to the outermost feathers, thus being very different to the black and white tail of the male.

JUVENILE.—The whole upper-parts are buff to rufous, closely barred with black crescentic bands and the under-parts cream-coloured similarly barred except the chin, middle of belly and under tail-coverts which have few bars; the tail-feathers are much like those of the adult female, but with distinct dark pen-ultimate lines, the wing-coverts and innermost secondaries have blackish crescentic bands. Sexes alike.

FIRST WINTER.—Most of the juvenile body-feathers and lesser and median wing-coverts are moulted from July to September, but a varying number of juvenile body-feathers and wing-coverts are retained as well as the primary-coverts, wing and tail-feathers and usually the greater coverts. In this plumage there seems to be no sexual difference, and the birds much resemble the adult female, but the crown and rump are more rufous, and most of the feathers of the upper-parts as well as the wing-coverts and innermost secondaries have black crescentic bands. As compared to the juvenile, the plumage is not nearly so much barred, and the upper-parts are darker and more rufous-brown.

FIRST SUMMER.—The first winter plumage together with the remaining juvenile feathers are completely moulted, including all the wing and tail feathers, from November to February. After this moult the male becomes indistinguishable from the adult male, but the female differs from the adult female in having a varying number of feathers of the upper-parts, wing-coverts and innermost secondaries with black concentric bands.

WAXWING (Bombycilla garrulus).

ADULTS.—Complete moult in October and November. No moult in spring and no change by abrasion. Exceptionally adult females are indistinguishable from adult males, but usually the tail-feathers have paler and narrower yellow tips and are without red tips to the shafts, the yellow borders at the tips of the primaries are paler than in the male and usually confined to the outer webs, the red waxy tips to the secondaries are smaller and frequently missing from some feathers.

JUVENILE.—The upper-parts are browner than the adult, the feathers of the crown are only slightly elongated, the chin and throat are brown instead of black as in the adult, and the lower breast and belly are slightly striated with pale buff, the tips of the tail-feathers are duller, and those of the primaries have the yellow and brown on the outer webs only and the waxy tips to the secondaries are small and frequently absent on some feathers.

FIRST WINTER.—The juvenile body-feathers, lesser, median and greater wing-coverts are moulted in early autumn, but not the wing or tail-feathers, so far as I can ascertain, but I have been able to examine only one specimen in the moult from juvenile to first winter. After this moult the birds resemble the adults except for the differences in the wing and tail-feathers already referred to under the juvenile.

The Essentials of Aviculture.

By J. W. N.

The proper method of preparing bread and milk is to pour the hot milk over the bread until it is just sodden. Any superfluous milk should be drained away, and the bread slightly squeezed. In giving bread and milk it is most important to ensure that the receptacle is washed out thoroughly each morning, and a fresh supply made.

Live insects are usually appreciated by our feathered patients, and a little finely scraped raw meat, which is perfectly fresh, given twice a week is a powerful stimulus to recuperation for such birds as will take it. For drugs, Parrish's chemical food is almost the standard remedy, but three drops of Fellow's syrup in the drinking water is equally good. As recovery takes place give plenty of green food and a liberal supply of cracked hemp to seedeaters.

To Deal With the Red Mite.

Of insect pests that trouble birds the red mite is the most prevalent. It is a source of great annoyance and discomfort, the birds very soon getting into a condition of ill-health. The treatment of the cage is discussed elsewhere, but, for the bird, quassia is the best and cheapest remedy. Obtain a quantity of quassia chips from the chemist, and make an infusion by pouring on boiling water. The correct strength can be gauged by the colour, which should be that of weak China tea. The bird may be hand-washed in this solution, and subsequent sprayings will destroy any red-mite that may be lurking amidst its plumage. This is a proved remedy for all insects that are likely to make the lives of birds a misery.

About the only disease of the nervous system that is met with in aviculture is epilepsy. Amongst good healthy stock it is rare, being mostly confined to victims of excessive in-breeding. It is brought about by injudicious feeding, and emotional causes, such as frights, but a blow in the region of the head is stated to have been the exciting cause in some cases. If too rich food is at the bottom of the evil, this should be remedied, and an aperient of Epsom salts given.

With some of the larger birds as Parrots, however, treatment is sometimes more effective. In these the disease is often the result of parasites in the intestines, such as the ordinary tapeworm. Where these are suspected grated areca nut is the remedy, as it is eaten without any difficulty, and the action is fairly certain. To make quite sure, it can be followed by two drops of castor oil given into the beak.

Parrots and Parrakeets respond to the bromide treatment in many cases. It should be preceded by a strong purge, and then two grains of potassium bromide dissolved each day in the drinking water will have a marked effect. As this drug gives the water a saline and disagreeable taste, a little sugar can also be dissolved in it with advantage. If there be any signs of a recurrence of this trouble the above remedy should be made use of. Strict attention must of course be given to diet and a liberal supply of fruit is a necessity. If, however, in spite of treatment the fits still continue at frequent intervals, it is much kinder to have the bird done away with, as life does not afford great opportunities of enjoyment to victims of this disease.

Egg-binding and the Treatment.

Egg-binding is sometimes the result of cold, and is often seen when a bird has been put in an outdoor aviary too early, or if a sharp spell of weather happens after breeding has started. The signs are unmistakable, and action should be prompt. The hen is found crouched in the bottom of the cage or aviary with her head turned away from the light. The feathers are all bunched up until she looks like a ball.

Treatment consists in removing her immediately and giving a drop of warm salad oil by the mouth and allowing another to drop on the vent. A feather or camel hair brush is the best means by which this can be done. She should then be placed in the cage and allowed to remain for an hour or two. If by this time the egg has not been passed, hold her over a jug of hot water for a few minutes, or place her on a piece of muslin stretched loosely over the top. The steam, of course, must not scald. Again place her in the cage, not in the nest, or she will most probably fall out and injure herself. This usually is quite sufficient to bring matters to a climax, but, if not, then there only remains the last remedy, which is as follows:

Lay the bird on its back in the left hand. With the thumb and forefinger of the other hand press on each side of the vent until a little white speck can just be seen appearing. An assistant with a sharp darning needle, which has previously been dipped in methylated spirit and passed through a flame to sterilise it, should carefully pierce the shell and allow the contents to escape, after which the bird will pass the remaining shell with little difficulty. This proceeding should only be employed as a last resort, for the effects of it often prove fatal, especially if the needle has not been sterilised and a slip is made.

In every case after the egg has been laid the hen should be kept quiet for a day or two, and light nourishing food, such as the bread and milk, so often advised before, used in addition to its staple food. As a preventive of this annoying trouble plenty of cuttle-fish bone should always be in the cage, and a little niger seed in the egg food of Canaries is also useful.

Although the foregoing may seem a formidable list of diseases, yet birds in captivity are not difficult to keep in health, or to care for when ill, if proper food, sufficient exercise, light and air all play their part.

Correspondence.

An Aged Goldfinch.

An Untimely End After All.

SIR,—I notice in CAGE BIRDS correspondence columns that Mr. S. Slocombe asks if it is a record for a Goldfinch to live for 19 years on hemp seed only. I should like to say that this is not a record, for I myself have kept a Goldfinch for 22 years, during which its only food was hemp seed with a little greenstuff. The bird improved in colour every year until coming to an accidental end by breaking his leg in the wire of his cage. Right up to the time of his death he was one of the very best of songsters.

Lutino Parrots.

A Curiously Coloured Amazon.

SIR,—I have read with interest letters in CAGE BIRDS on Lutino Parrots, and those who are interested in this curious coloration may like to hear of a yellow Yellow-fronted Amazon in my possession.

This bird is of a good rich yellow, showing the faintest tinge of emerald green on the neck and rump. The eyes are normal, and the red markings are present on flight feathers and shoulders.

I do not know whether this bird can be called a true Lutino, but I think a Parrot coloured in this way must be curious, and it is certainly very beautiful.

A Soldier Novice Fancier Writes from Hospital.

SIR,—As a reader of CAGE BIRDS, I was very pleased indeed to read Mr. J. Gibbons' article in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 4 on "Some show season hints," and I think it was very good of him to show the novice how to go on and what to do with his birds; it is very good advice indeed. I have cut his article out for future use for myself. I think a very good point of his worth bearing in mind is to look for the nearest show to your home, and therefore keep down railway expenses. I might say I am in the Army and at present in hospital at Malta with malarial fever, but am improving immensely. I come from Oldham district, and I still get CAGE BIRDS every week, and have had it for fourteen months on active service. I hope Mr. Gibbons and other fanciers will give more advice to the novice in the future, and I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

The Judging at Whitehaven Show.

A Complaint and Some Questions.

SIR,—We were exhibitors at Whitehaven Show, held December 16, and on looking through the birds we find on the class label attached to our cage the judge's mark "1," which obviously meant that he had originally awarded us the first prize. Finding that no prize card was affixed to our cage, we made a search for this, and found it upon a cage the tab of which had no mark at all upon it. There was no other tab in the class with the same mark as ourselves, but the tabs on the other winning cages were marked in their proper rotation. We drew the secretary's attention to the matter, and he admitted that the judge had made a few mistakes which had been rectified. We are asking why, if these mistakes had been put straight in other cases, it was not done in our case.

What we complain of more than the simple losing of the prize is the attitude of the judge himself when the mistake was pointed out to him. He simply opened his book, looked at the numbers, and walked away without even saying a word in answer to our questions. The opinion of the Border men present, and they were from all parts, was that the bird whose cage was decorated with the 1st prize card was quite the worst in the class. The very fact that there was a delay in placing the special card on the cage was evident that someone knew things were not right.

We have three questions to ask the judge and committee, with your permission. Why were some birds awarded prizes although they had other material than canary seed in their cages, while some were disqualified for the same reason? How far would anyone like to send British birds with only plain canary seed in their cages? Why was the special for best in the show altered to Whitehaven only? To conclude, the wagers offered at the show are still open.

COOK & ADAMS.

An Inexpensive Outdoor Aviary.

Discarded Carbide Drums for Walls.

SIR,—I am writing this for the benefit of those who would like an outdoor aviary but have not much spare cash. By the following means I have made a very serviceable, if not an elegant one, and the cost was not much. In place of boards I have used galvanised drums which had contained carbide of calcium. One can usually get these for the asking from users, and they are glad to get rid of them. When hammered out flat they cover a space of 3ft. 6in. by 2ft; it means a bit of trouble, but who minds that where birds are concerned?

First, I got four larch poles (other wood will do if fairly straight), made a square with these, nailing together firmly, then nailed another piece down the centre to the top and lower pole on the inside. By nailing four carbide tins securely to this framework I had a good, strong back, in one piece. This was stood in position, with the lower part let in the ground about a foot, to foil the mice.

I next started on the front portion, making this a foot shorter in height, and using two tins to cover the lower portion about half-way up; the upper portion I covered with half-inch mesh netting, with the exception of six inches in the centre. Here, with the help of grocers' boxes, I made a sliding door, worked by a string from the outside flight.

I then stood the front quite square with the back, and started to nail on the roof. In my case this was made of old boards half-inch thick, which I bought cheaply for firewood. I used the two soundest for the ends, letting them project over about three inches on each side, to keep the sides of house dry. If wood is not available, tins can be again used, but in this case I should cover it with tarred felt, or by the method I will describe, as the tin alone is very cold in winter and very hot in summer. I might say that I got my idea from a little book called "An Income from Backyard Fowls," published by "Poultry World," 154, Fleet Street. I cut open a closely-woven sack, and tacked this firmly on the roof, and about half an inch over the side (I ought to have said that the roof comes over the front wall of house about three inches), and then gave it a coat of tar, rubbing it well in, and threw a little sand all over while wet. A week afterwards I tarred it over again, and now I have a roof that will keep out any wet.

The end portions I made of tins half-way up, leaving a space for a door about three feet by two feet on one side; the top portion was made of boxes knocked to pieces, and in the end facing south I put a narrow sheet (about three inches wide and 18 inches long) of frosted glass. If one's boards are too short, by putting them end to end, and nailing another piece over the join securely, they can be made any length. The ends and front portion were let in the ground about a foot.

For the floor I put down six inches of stones and sand, watered this well, then beat it down until a fairly level surface had been obtained. I then got half a peck of cement, mixed a peck and a half of sand (sifted) with it in a dry state, then wetted it with water until quite sloppy. This I put all over the floor and levelled off with a short flat piece of board. When this had dried I had a floor that would keep out both rats and mice.

Having finished the house, I started to make an open flight. The front of this I made with four two-inch splines, with another nailed in the middle (upright) to strengthen. This is a foot less in height than the front of the house, as I still wanted to keep a sloping roof. The advantage of this is, that during snow or very wet weather a sheet or two of the galvanised tins can be laid over. I covered the whole front with half-inch netting.

For the roof of the flight I nailed four more splines together, put another piece down the middle, and a foot from each end I put another spline. These end portions I covered with biscuit tins straightened out, the middle portion being half-inch netting. This roof rested on two splines at the back, which had been nailed to the front of the house, the front being nailed to the all-netted portion, and resting on it. The end portions were made similar to the ends of house, with a door at one end.

The floor is of earth, and can be planted if desired. I painted the two fronts white; all the rest is tarred. Any small holes, or parts not fitting closely, are covered with small pieces of tin. The birds always go inside to sleep, and the sliding door is dropped at night.

The Bell Glucke and Other Tours.

A Time Limit Suggested.

SIR,—I see that Leeds Roller C.C. is now on the right way of getting more fanciers for the contest Roller. I think, as they say, every one will agree that it is time something was done to get judges into the same way of thinking as to the different tours the birds sing. At some shows Bell Glucke is not recognised, yet you cannot mistake a good Bell Glucke. Some judges give it as a Glucke Roll; compare your judging sheets of the different shows and see if they are the same. I should like to see the B.R.C.C. take up the Federation control, fix show dates, and appoint judges, that is, judges with the same ideas of the tours, also a time limit for judging each bird, say three-quarters of an hour; if a bird does not sing in that time, "no song." With such large classes it would give judges more time, and put every exhibitor on the same footing. I feel sure if this was done we should have more birds on the show bench, and I hope more fanciers will take this matter up.

A. E. WORTON.

British Birds Scarce in the Markets.

The Value of Shepherds' Purse.

SIR,—On reading the letters on the "Famine in Canaries," I was wondering how many fanciers have found that there is a British Finch famine as well, although in this case the birds are already around us. Furthermore, the advertising dealers are ready to pay a fair price; in fact, some who may have sold you fresh-caught birds in former years have now the cash waiting to pay the same price for a similar article and take them by the dozen. I have lately spoken to several who advertise in CAGE BIRDS, and all say that they have hard work to keep pace with their orders.

This fact is due to more causes than one, I will admit, but it speaks well for the honesty of the trader, and the popularity of the only paper devoted to birds, and the question of not having enough to go round must be taken in hand if we are to keep up the fancy until things get back into their old stride.

It is my opinion that there is a very strong masonic feeling among bird men, and it is our time now above all others to make things "as they were," with the fixed resolve to have no further trading with our country's enemies. But the advanced price of everything will have an effect; it will make some shift for themselves. I speak from experience, as I have other pets besides birdy ones, and the cost of their keep is increasing daily.

Still, they keep down the cost of my birds' food, for, like all other children, they like to pick the wild flowers when they go out, and always bring back groundsel and plantain, and they have been specially told the usefulness of shepherds'-purse. I am afraid the value of this plant to breeders who keep Linnets is not well enough known, and those who use it do not get the full benefit of it, as just a small spray is generally threaded through the wires, and this is not sufficient.

To those who do not know the plant I may explain that it grows about nine inches high with leaves something like dandelion, but placed up the stem. Stems growing seed pods are thrown up, and these pods are heart-shaped, held by the point to the stem carrying them; at the present season it is topped by a tiny white flower. It has a long season, just coming to an end, and you will find it on almost any field lying fallow that has been this year grown with wheat or potatoes. You will find plenty around the edges, if you are not afraid of the notice "All trespassers will be prosecuted."

Having got your plants, or rather the stems carrying the seed, put it through a sieve or a coarse colander, and feed it to your Linnet on the cage bottom if you have nothing else. When you look at his seed box still full of dry seed, don't think he has lost his appetite and is going to die; he is doing well, and if he does not breed he will be one in a hundred.

This reminds me of an experience I had some years ago. I halted outside a house once to look at a rather sick-looking hen Canary, and the proprietor quickly was on the step. "Ah!" he sighed, "I would give a pound to have her young again. I have bred with her for years with Linnets, Mules, Larks, and everything." He must have noticed how surprised I was at his success, for he quickly said, "I only want two bob for her." He was an aged man, and no match for me, or I should have asked how he thought it would go with a Magpie. Of course, this is only one of the dodges of ignorant sharps which give the Fancy a bad name in some quarters.

Talking of bad names, "bird-catcher" is one by which some people would not like to be styled; but what should we do without them? I do not wish to pat myself on the back because I "do some"; I should like a few more to take it on. I would sooner have one day's catching for holiday than a week at the seaside.

Further, there is no time like the present; most wild birds have moulted clean of their nest feathers by now, and the cocks can be picked from the hens when in adult plumage. In most counties there has been a spell of dry weather, and the birds are on dry seed. After the first frost or two they will be more dead than alive, and if examined will be found to be thin, and when the thaw sets in the seed will be soaked and you will have the trouble to get them on hard seed again. By the time you have done this and got them tame your chance of trying them in their first season is over. I mention this because some fanciers have the idea that British birds must be house-moulted before they will breed; but field-moulted birds will breed just as well if treated in the manner suited to their species.

Satisfactory methods of catching having been gone into recently in CAGE BIRDS, there is no need to trouble you further with them, but Finch fanciers and Mule breeders must not allow wild seeds to ripen in vain and then complain that they are unsuccessful. If I can help anyone I will do so with the greatest pleasure.

ARTHUR BURROWS.

How to Catch Bullfinches.

Further Information Desired.

SIR,—I was much interested in reading Stoker F. W. Stone's excellent article on the above subject, together with his practical advice regarding the treatment of newly caught birds, which, as another Bullfinch catcher, I heartily endorse. I write from Scotland, where trapping by nets has never been engaged in to any great extent, partly, I think, owing to the land being so uneven that the working of large nets is practically impossible in the majority of our fields. Thanks to the courtesy of one of your leading advertisers of bird nets, however, I have been able through correspondence both to set and use large clap nets effectively in the south-west of Scotland.

I have never netted Bullfinches, and before trying I would like to ask Stoker Stone, for the benefit of the uninitiated, to explain what a "side net" is, what length of staff or pole is required to work it, and if the net is used as a single net only. Personally I have found difficulty in effectively using a small single net, even when working very quickly, for Chaffinches, as Mr. Chaffinch invariably manages to get clear in time to escape capture.

Regarding the food plants of the Bullfinch, these must, of course, vary according to locality, and it may surprise English readers to know that privet berries are practically non-existent in this upland locality, which is also too high above sea level to permit anything but an occasional bramble to ripen, and hedges are entirely absent, being replaced by stone dykes built of rough unhewn boulders.

The autumn foods of the Bullie here are wild raspberries, rowans, i.e., the fruit of the mountain ash, queen of the meadow (also called meadow sweet), seed of the common stinging nettle, seeds of the silver birch, seed of the common heather, and I have frequently observed them feeding on larch trees, but too high for me to see exactly whether the cones or buds of the larch were being eaten. I fancy it was the buds, as the cones would be difficult to manipulate. In winter, during hard, frosty weather, I have observed as many as fifty Bullfinches in a single flock feeding on the heather alone on the edge of a moor adjoining a large pine wood.

There is one place near here where Bullies abound during the autumn months, but I have never been very successful in securing more than an occasional bird, and perhaps Stoker Stone could assist as to the proper tactics to pursue. Picture to yourself a steep bank overgrown with sloe and thorn bushes, with a dense undergrowth of queen of the meadow, wild raspberries, and nettles. The bank extends for, say, two acres, and stretches down to one of Scotland's most famous rivers, and is bounded at the bottom next the river by a fringe of birch and elder trees. The top is a hayfield, and viewed from there the little bosky glen is a very pretty spot indeed, and a favourite nesting place of both the Bullie and the Long-tailed Tit.

The trouble is to get the wild Bullfinches, who make this their feeding pitch for months on end, to take any notice of a call bird; they simply refuse to leave their native thicket to light on limed twigs, and I don't blame them, either. Perhaps Stoker Stone's plan with three call birds would do the trick, and when time permits I'll try. Again thanking Mr. Stone for his able and clearly expressed article.

A Hull Soldier Re-started.

Sir,—I received the birds from Mr. Jeffries, Richmond, Yorks, and I can assure you I am very pleased with them. They are two fine birds, and I hope I shall have the best of luck with them. I wrote to Mr. Jeffries telling him I received them.

The Sensational Greenfinch Mule at Leicester Show.

Is the Finch Responsible for Light Mules?

Sir,—I have had a further communication from the breeder of the wonderful Mule I wrote you about after Leicester Show. The breeder tells me that though he had been described as a boy, he is 24 years of age, and has been a reader of Cage Birds for nine years. The Mule in question was bred from a variegated yellow hen, the Finch being a buff. He also paired to this Finch a Buff hen, from which he reared four, all nearly clear. Here is proof for those who hold the idea that the Finch has something to do with Light Mules. The breeder tells me that he thinks of putting a Cinnamon hen with the Finch this coming season, but my advice would be to stick to the ship that carried him through, and if he makes any alteration let it be a good yellow hen in place of the buff. No Cinnamon Mule he may breed will be of the same value as a clear or nearly clear.

[When I first wrote on the above I said it was a clear, and the best Mule of any kind ever bred. You evidently thought this too tall an order, so you let it down by saying with your reporter that it was nearly clear, and that I said it was the best Greenfinch Mule ever bred. I also stated that it was "said to have been bred" by a boy; this was showroom gossip, so I safeguarded myself, but as printed it appears that I said it was bred by a boy. See the difference? J. Bastock.

An Alleged Mistake in Judging.

Sir,—Kindly permit me space in your correspondence columns to make a correction in connection with Buff Green Border Hen Class at Hamilton Show.

As reported in Cage Birds of Dec. 23, Mr. Graham is credited with being 1st in this class, but this was owing to an unfortunate mistake made by the judge in marking the cages when he had finished judging. He marked the second bird 1st, third bird 2nd, and so on, with the result that my bird (which went to the top of the table at the first handling, and remained there throughout the judging of the whole class) was left out of the tickets altogether. I met the judge some two hours afterwards, and I asked him his reasons for placing my bird at the top of the table, comparing it so often with the other birds, and still leaving it out of the tickets. He at once said "I am afraid I have made a mistake." We proceeded to examine the birds together, when he admitted in front of other exhibitors that my hen was his first bird and apologised for his mistake.

I at once accepted his apology, saying that I was quite prepared to forfeit the prize-money, especially seeing it was a novice who was so lucky in getting the red ticket, but added that I should claim the credit of the win, which I was justly entitled to. On arriving home I at once wrote to your reporter asking him to make a note of this incident in his report, also to the judge, asking him to oblige by writing the reporter substantiating my statement, but received no acknowledgment to my letters from either of these gentlemen, and was rather disappointed on reading over the show report and seeing no mention made of this matter. I think I acted the part of the sportsman in accepting the apology and forfeiting the prize-money, and now claim the honour of the win which is certainly due to me, and with which I think other fanciers will agree.

James Lumsden.

[The letter to our reporter states the case substantially the same as above, and the judge, Mr. T. Ritchie, in reply to the letter of Mr. Lumsden, sent our reporter a letter as follows:—"I enclose Mr. Lumsden's letter in regards the awards of the Buff Green Border Hens at Hamilton Show. I fail to see how Mr. Lumsden can claim the honour of the win. Quite possibly I made a mistake in placing the awards, and after Mr. Lumsden drew my attention to the placing of the awards I said I was sorry if I had made a mistake. I do not remember admitting that I gave Mr. Lumsden the honour of the win."

A NOVICE'S NORWICH CANARY.

Winner of 1st Prize at the Show of the Clapham C.B.A. for Mr. Bailey, Hornsey.

What Constitutes a Novice?

A Suggested Grading According to Monetary Means.

Sir,—Having been a reader of Cage Birds since its infancy, and having read from time to time articles on the novice question, I would like to give my opinion on the subject. I think there are two sides to the question. On the one side, is the person who can afford to pay for high-class stock to commence with; and on the other, those who can only afford a few shillings. If you read the rules in most schedules of open shows you find it stated that a novice is one who has not won three first prizes in open novice competition.

Taking my own case for instance, I am at work from 8 a.m. till 10.30 p.m., Saturday till 12 p.m., and every Sunday throughout the year on a limited salary, so that I do not get very much time to attend to my birds. I get an interval in the afternoon ranging from 1½ to 3½ hours, which often has to include dinner as well as tea time. If I want any fresh stock I have to think about it some time before hand, so as to save a shilling when I can manage it for that purpose. On the other hand, we will take the non-fancier who is already in very good circumstances, and through the chance meeting of a friend who makes a hobby of keeping prize birds is invited round to view them. He tells his friend he thinks he will go in for the hobby, and having money at his command, he is recommended to buy some birds which are bred from champion cup winners. The consequence, perhaps, is that at his first attempt at breeding he rears two or three extra good ones, and then comes a heading in the paper, "A novice's fine achievement," because under the present existing rules he is allowed to compete as a novice, although with champion stock.

That is where the question comes in; what chance has the working man got when the odds are 100 to 1 against him? None at all. To my idea the exhibiting of birds, especially Canaries, should be divided into three grades, viz., Champion, Novice, and Amateur, Amateur to mean one who can afford not more than a fixed price for his stock.

No doubt there are plenty of working men who keep Linnets, Goldfinches, etc., for a hobby who have never heard of their local societies, and who perchance have some fine exhibition specimens which would realise a good turnover for them if they only knew it. Under the present stress all societies naturally wish to keep as many fanciers together as possible, and I think it would do them no harm if they were to have a prominent notice in their local paper of their next two or three meeting nights, with the announcement: "Special; short lecture for the benefit of any working man fancier not a member of a society who likes to attend." By this means we might have the pleasure of seeing brought to light some beautiful specimens at present hidden.

Another point we have to consider is about the washing of a bird. How many of the ordinary bird keepers have ever heard of a bird being washed with soap and water? Very few. As a member of Clapham C.B.A., I exhibit at their shows, but have never had the opportunity of witnessing a washing exhibition, so therefore I have to go by what I read on the subject, which I do not consider so good as seeing the thing done in front of one's eyes. I think that if the working man is catered for so that he stands a chance of reaping a little reward for the hard-earned money he lays out, we shall see and hear a lot more of them. The present system puts me in remind of the Army before the war. The young man with money could start as a commissioned officer, the one without had to be satisfied by being a private.

F. C. Henry.

The Hobby of Bird Keeping.

A Hobby that Pays Its Way.

Sir,—We have seen it discussed in the fancy papers at different times about cage birds paying, or losing money. I maintain if a person has a hobby of any description, and that hobby pays its way, and he has all the pleasure derived from it without being out of pocket, he should be well satisfied, and I know of no hobby that does this better than bird keeping, whether the birds are kept in aviaries or cages.

Ever since I can remember I have had a hobby of one sort or another, but anything that grew feathers always stood prominent with me. I have kept pigeons, but not many, and none with any class about it, and I have also kept several different varieties of poultry, and have bred birds that have won prizes at all the principal shows round my district. I always had a wish to keep a cage bird or two, but was not allowed to do so by my parents.

When I got married and had a home of my own I thought I could do as I liked in that respect, and I started with a pair of common Canaries. Since then I have had scores of birds (I still have several), including British, Foreign, and good class Canaries, and I know my birds have given me more pleasure than any of my other hobbies, and I always manage to sell enough every year to pay the food bill.

I was very proud when I bred and reared my first nest of common Canaries, and since then I have bred some good class Yorkshires, and several species of foreign birds, Mules, and Hybrids, including a Goldie-Bullie this season. I have exhibited at some good shows, including the London C.B.A., Norwich, etc., and generally manage to get into the money. When one is exhibiting, and pays a visit to the show, one is sure to meet other birdy men, and make some new friends. I know I have done so.

Anyone taking up bird keeping has a good choice of birds to select from, and if he thinks he would like a change or addition to what he already has, he can do so. We have British (Hardbill or Softbill), Foreign (Parrots, Parakeets, Finches, or Softbill) Canaries (varieties of all colours, shapes, and sizes), and when one has had a little experience they can try their hand at the fascinating branch of Hybrid breding. I am sure the person who tires of that would be hard to please, as every bird a person manages to breed is something different to any of the others bred before.

In conclusion, I would add that, where convenient, birds are best kept in outdoor aviaries; it takes less time to attend to their wants, and if one is busy (which all ought to be at the present time) one has a little more time left to watch them and admire their beauty. Besides this, the birds themselves are more in their natural element, and are therefore happy and healthy. S. J. G.

A Miller Explains Its Composition.

Sir,—As your correspondent, Mr. Bixter, would like to know where the extra percentage of flour is to come from, I will try to enlighten him a little. In the first place out of 100 lbs. of wheat before the "War Bread" was made, in ordinary milling 71 or 72 per cent. was made, now it has to be made up to 78 per cent., that is, leaving 22 per cent. of offal, which is made up of the following:—Bran, pollards, coarse middlings, middlings, and germ.

To get the extra percentage you will have to go to the middlings which are the first run from the flour. These are very white, and will simply make the flour a little greyer as the term is called in the milling, and therefore you will not see much difference in the flour. There are many people eating the new bread without knowing it, for there has not been any white flour made since Nov. 25.

I do not think fanciers need fear any trouble with the new bread. I see some think that wholemeal will do good, and I am of that opinion myself, for I have used it myself in the spring before pairing up and after, with a little salt butter in it with the egg, and have never had a hen egg-bound or any other ill effects from it, so I think we can get on with our hobby without any fear. I am sending you samples of white flour, "War Flour" and "Standard" for your inspection. Wishing Cage Birds success in the coming year. J. Crow.

[The samples kindly sent confirm precisely our note at the foot of Mr. Flint's letter of last week. The "War Flour" is scarcely to be distinguished from the White Flour.—Editor, Cage Birds.]

What is a Ticked Bird?

Mr. Silk Agrees with Mr. House.

SIR,—As my name is mentioned by Mr. House, I may say that I consider he was justified in what he did, as a bird without a technical mark is not a "marked," no matter how heavy the ticking, and the butts mark that Messrs. Stubbs mention is not a mark proper.

C. E. SILK.

No Rule Governing Norwich Canaries.

SIR,—With reference to this question, I am perfectly satisfied from the description that has been given to me of Messrs. Stubbs' bird that Mr. House is right in his judgment.

The Norwich Club has no rule upon the matter, with the result that judges invariably wink the other eye when meeting a bird like the one in question, but where a judge accepts and carries out the only cage bird law upon this matter, then he must act as Mr. House has done.

What is wanted is a Norwich Club law dealing on this point for all judges taking Norwich classes to carry out. Wake the Club up, Mr. Cole, and let's have it.

F. J. MARTIN.

Views of Other Judges Solicited.

SIR,—The particular question as to whether Messrs. Stubbs' bird was wrongly disqualified still requires an answer, and it is to be hoped that some judges may give their views, although only one infallible authority, Mr. House has modestly given us his name.

I certainly had the utmost faith in Mr. House, but if he has reached an age when he has nothing more to learn my faith in him has been shaken. He says, "Who is the man who shall decide whether my judgment is right or wrong?" In such circumstances I do not know why he condescends to quote Blakston and others. He is unlike all other sages. Hitherto the wise men have found that as their knowledge increased so did their claim to infallibility decrease. As an Oxford professor once said, "We are none of us infallible; not even the youngest of us."

Professor Blackie added a prayer to the Litany: "From the three infallibles—the Pope at Rome, the Editor of a party newspaper, and a woman when she is in the wrong—good Lord deliver us." Even Professor Blackie shows his ignorance—he had never heard of Mr. C. A. House

SIR,—As there is not now any bird fanciers' club in Blackpool (when there was it was only for Canaries), will you kindly allow me space in CAGE BIRDS to bring to the notice of fanciers in Blackpool and district, my intention of forming a society at Blackpool as early as possible for fanciers of Canaries, Mules, Hybrids, British and Foreign Birds. Fanciers interested and intending to become members will oblige by sending me their names and addresses, or call and see me, and I will do my best to get a meeting together at the earliest possible date. I will let each fancier know date, place, and time if they will kindly let me have their names and addresses.

Blackbirds and Thrushes Fourteen Years Old.

SIR,—I have been very interested in the correspondence columns of CAGE BIRDS, especially when anyone has written about Softbills. Mr. A. Gregory says he has a Nightingale and a Skylark in full song, and if you would kindly give me his address in Manchester I should like to give him a call and see the birds. I have four Thrushes and three Blackbirds, all in perfect feather; three of the birds are 14 years old, and the other four are this year's hand-reared birds. I have two young Thrushes ringing the neighbourhood with song at this minute, and they can be seen at my place. They are out day and night, and I should be pleased to show anyone round.

Fresh Start for Wounded Soldiers.

Generous Gift from King's Lynn C.B.C

SIR,—With the greatest pleasure I thank you for the kind consideration you gave my application to the CAGE BIRDS Wounded Soldiers' Schemo of some time ago.

On Friday last I received from the King's Lynn and District C.B.C. a pair of first-class young Norwich Canaries. The birds are really handsome, and I am at a loss to find words sufficient to express how grateful I am to the above club for their kindness. In addition, Mr. Chapman, the secretary, kindly sent me a very neat carrier, and also an amount of valuable information. I consider I have received a very good start, and with a little perseverance and the necessary care I am looking forward to success in the coming breeding season. Again I must thank you and send you my best wishes.

Chicken Meal as a Substitute for Egg Food.

A Canadian Reader Asks for More Information.

SIR,—I notice among the interesting letters in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 11, a letter signed "Tom Tit" in reply to "Saxon's" enquiries, and I would ask for further enlightenment on this most valuable question if our Mr. "Tom Tit" will be so good as to furnish me with the information I require.

I do not know just what "chicken meal" consists of, or what it looks like. What proportions do we mix with water? Do we give about the same quantity as of ordinary egg food? Do we feed it as soon as the chicks are hatched? I will be greatly obliged if our friend will answer theso questions soon, for I would like to try his scheme myself this breeding season.

I do not know what eggs are selling at in England, but over here it is almost a State secret if one can buy them at less than 30 cents. a dozen, so if Mr. "Tom Tit" has discovered this cheap food for raising young birds, and has obtained such success he should be presented with a medal; he is "some" Tom.

With hen fruit at the price it is here it almost makes one feel like taking off his hat when he sees an egg, and pretty soon eggs will be as great a luxury as Christmas turkey.

The time has passed when a crust of stale bread was thrown to the hens, and they have reached the stage when they can dictate terms to the farmer, and will soon be demanding their meals served on a silver tray.

These valuable producers of eggs strut around the farm these days with their noses in the air, and pretty soon they will be allowed the privilage of laying eggs in the parlour.

It's up to some one to invent a hen capable of laying a dozen eggs a day; we need the eggs.

I hope Mr "Tom Tit" will help me out by answering soon, and I also wish to thank CAGE BIRDS for the space this letter will take up. I'm sure we all are getting a goodly share of interesting material in the weekly letters.

I am enclosing some "birdy" material I have taken from some of our Toronto papers, and hope it will be of some interest to your readers.

Capturing the German Bird Trade.

Gramophone Records for Teaching Bullfinches.

SIR,—When this matter was discussed in your columns some time ago, although I think I read all the correspondence on the subject, I was surprised that no one alluded to the German system of training Bullfinches to pipe tunes, or suggested that this might be taken up here, where there was always a ready sale for them at high prices, more especially as it seemed to me that it might be a kind of side line which disabled soldiers could combine with some other light employment.

These birds, I understood, were trained in Germany, where they were kept singly in quiet rooms, where the cages were kept covered while a boy was kept grirding out the tune from a hand organ, the covering, of course, being removed to allow the birds sufficient time for feeding and exercise.

Now that gramophones are so good and in so many homes these might be used for the purpose of training the birds, and I thought that if I could get a suitable record I might try my hand at training one or two myself during these long, dark evenings, when there is little inducement to go outside. I therefore applied to several dealers to see if I could get a record of a short, simple air without any harmony, but was told nothing of the kind could be got. One of these gentlemen, however, gave me the name and address of a London manufacturing firm which he thought would be most likely to have anything of the kind, or if not would tell me the cost of producing it. I accordingly wrote the following letter to this firm:—"I have applied to several dealers in gramophones recently to ascertain if they could get me a record of a short, simple, well-known tune, such as 'God Save the King,' as played on a piccolo or some such instrument. I want it for the purpose of trying to teach a Bullfinch to pipe the tune in the manner the Germans have been in the habit of training these birds. The tune must be a simple air played without any harmony, and repeated on the record as often as possible with one winding up of the gramophone. If you have nothing of the kind in stock would you be good enough to give me some idea of the cost of preparing one?" To this letter I received the following reply:—"There is no record issued so far as we know of any simple air which could be used for the purpose you mention. The cost of preparing such a record would be £5 5s., and this would entitle you to one copy of the record, further copies being supplied at 2s. 6d. apiece."

I am not prepared to go the length of paying £5 5s. for the preparation of such a record, but if among your numerous readers there should be 20 willing to send you 5s. for the purpose I will be pleased to send you a similar sum, or, better still, if 40 would contribute 2s. 6d. it would pay for the first record, and each would get a record for an additional 2s. 6d. If you would agree to receive the money I would suggest that it should be sent to you, and that you might kindly arrange with the manufacturers for the preparation and distribution of the records when you have received a sufficient number of subscriptions. If you agree to the suggestion I will send you my 5s. on receipt of your issue containing this letter, and would advise all who have any sympathy with this idea to do the same, sending to you at once either 2s. 6d. or 5s. I have to add that on further consideration I think the record should be taken from a flute rather than a piccolo, which is not so shrill an instrument, and I have the impression that the best piper I ever had was trained from that instrument. Besides, it would suit better for a Starling or Blackbird, the former of which is a very clever pupil.

AYRSHIRE LADDIE.

[Those of our readers who are prepared to subscribe towards the cost of a record, and afterwards to buy copies at 2s. 6d. each, should send us their promises only, not the money. If we receive sufficient names, then we will call on the writers to send on the subscriptions accordingly. It would seem to us, however, that it would be necessary to have three simple tunes on the one record, for the best of the trained piping Bullfinches could always pipe three tunes perfectly.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

The Scotch Fancy Canary and Why it is Not More Popular.

A Better Future Predicted.

SIR,—I was pleased when I opened CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 25, and saw a letter concerning the Scotch fancy. In answer to "Bird Fancier's Son" I have proved by experience all I said. I have kept the Belgian, the Scotch Fancy, and the Yorkshire, and have won first prizes with them all, and I prefer the Scotch Fancy. But I allow every other man his fancy, and I condemn no one for his honest opinion, and if "Bird Fancier's Son" thinks that breeding a few Yorkshires as songsters is the best paying, and that he gets more pleasure from them and less expense, he is right to breed the variety.

I am only a working man myself, and my wages do not exceed the amount mentioned but where there is a will there is a way, and I would say that it is for exhibiting purposes that I keep my birds, not for selling as songsters. I would also say it is not for money making that I keep them; it is for the love of the birds, but if I lost money by them I could not afford it, and I would have to quit the fancy. I have always been able to make them pay their way.

"Bird Fancier's Son" is a lucky man if he can buy winning Yorkshires at 20s. each. I could never do it, for I have paid over 40s. for ones that could not get a card on the show bench, and I have often been asked five pounds and more for ones that could win. Of course, I may have got a Yorkshire from a personal friend for about the half he would have charged a stranger, but that is no rule, and may be that is how "Bird Fancier's Son" can get prize winners so cheap. I can assure readers of CAGE BIRDS that the Scotch Fancy is as cheap and as good as any other variety of the Canary. You will often see in show reports Yorkshires and Norwich Canaries claimed at catalogue price, ten, and sometimes fifteen pounds, and I knew a man that paid fifteen pounds for a Yorkshire.

If "Bird Fancier's Son" ever starts with Scotch Fancies I can assure him he will not regret it, and I will do anything I can to assist him. I cannot speak of forty years ago, I had not said goodbye to the cradle at that time, but I have exhibited the Scotch Fancy for over twenty years, and I can endorse every word that Messrs. J. J. Penaluna and Son say. They don't get fair play, but let breeders be up and doing, and give support to all shows that give classes for the Scotch Fancy, and let all clubs give lectures on the Scotch Fancy, and you will soon see many young fanciers joining the ranks. I believe that day is not far distant, and I am surprised at the breeders of the "Bird O'Circle" being so quiet. Come forward and express your views. CAGE BIRDS pages are open to you to express your views, and the Editor always welcomes a discussion so long as it is done in a friendly spirit. Now, Sir, I will draw to a close, with thanks to you for past favours, and a wish that you may be long spared as editor of such a paper as CAGE BIRDS. What would the fancy do to-day without it?

CANARY KEEPING FOR BEGINNERS.

By J. NORTH.

Helpful Hints on Management, Pairing, Breeding and Rearing, which should make the Hobby of Canary Keeping easy of pursuit by the amateur, and containing information of interest to older hands.

THE seeds can be collected without much trouble and in considerable quantities, and are simply invaluable for Goldfinch and Goldfinch Canary Mules. They should be well dried before being stored away, by being spread out on paper, or in trays, in a warm or sunny window.

Be very careful during frosty weather to avoid giving your birds any frost-bitten greenmeat; if it is at all suspicious looking, steep it for a few minutes in warm water, then shake out all the moisture, wrap in a dry cloth, and then discard any transparent pieces. Nothing is more likely to give both old and young birds serious inflammation of the bowels than frost bitten green leaves.

We have not thought it necessary to say anything particular about lettuce, because it is extensively used for human use as a salad, and it would occur to everybody, without special mention, that it is equally available for Canaries and cage birds generally.

It is really wonderful what a quantity of large fleshy lettuce leaves a pair of birds will consume in a day, when feeding a nest of youngsters ten to thirty days old.

It would be well for us now, perhaps, to speak about the sex and colour differences, and to explain some of the technical terms used by fanciers.

By the time that birds of the year attain their adult plumage, that is, at from six to eight months of age, there should be no difficulty in distinguishing the sexes, especially if the cage or flight contains several birds of both sexes, because then the various distinguishing features could be compared and made plain.

Points of colour, shape, size, all lend themselves by comparison to the identification of the sexes. Yellows and Buffs are the two colours, to one or the other of which every Canary belongs, but the subject of variegation is apt to confuse matters, unless we bear in mind a few elementary rules.

Besides the confusion likely to arise through heavy variegation, the practice of frequently mating buff with buff, or "double buffing" as it is called, or of pairing a yellow bird to another yellow bird, tends in the former case to the production of washy-coloured coarse-textured plumage, which is far removed from the quality of the best buff birds which are to be seen in the Norwich classes.

Sexual differences also have their corresponding colour differences, for it is very seldom that a yellow hen is anything like as pure in solid yellow colour down the poll and back as a cock. This is appreciable to some extent in Norwich Canaries, but more so in Yorkshires and so on through these, such as Scotch Fancies and Lancashires, where colour points are not cultivated to any extent.

The yellow colour should be as solid and level as possible, and free from any white edging to the tips of the feathers. The quality, or texture of feather of a yellow bird is also quite different from that of a buff; the yellow bird is more silky, and the individual feathers, when compared with those of a Buff bird of the same family, are shorter and thinner.

To put it concisely the yellow feather is all "quality." The buff feather differs from the yellow in having its edge frosted with white, which, being distributed over the whole body of the bird, gives it a bloom or mealy appearance. Hence buff birds are also called "Mealies." This "meal" would seem to be an addition not only to the colour but to the length and substance of the feather, for birds of this colour are generally larger than their yellow brothers or sisters.

Cock Canaries are also almost invariably larger than their sisters. One could not say that "yellows are always smaller than buffs," because yellows of varieties that are bred for size, such as Lancashires, would be larger than the buff of a variety that was cultivated for colour-properties before size, such as Norwich or Cinnamons.

The double buffing, having a tendency to increase size, has been practised for all it was worth with the modern Dark Crests, and also probably to a very considerable extent with the forbears of the present-day Lancashires. It cannot be said of the breeders of the latter variety that they have neglected the maintenance of the "yellows," because as a matter of fact they are almost as numerous as the "buffs," and taking into consideration the difficulty of yellow-coppy-breeding, the way they have held their position is very creditable.

Now the ground colour of either a yellow or a buff may be variegated by dark coloured feathers occurring in small patches, spots, or splashes, when it is called "ticked." If in larger portions it would be said to be "variegated," or the dark colour might extend from one end to the other, and to the exclusion of any clear yellow or buff feathers anywhere, when the bird would be said to be "self-coloured."

These self-coloured birds might be either Green or Cinnamon, still the mealy edging to the feathers would be discernible if they were "buffs," but if they were "yellows" the richness would be more apparent. A very heavily marked or nearly green bird is said to be a "broken green," or "just off the greens."

It having been shown that the yellow birds represent quality, and the buffs or mealies mean quantity, it will be readily perceived that a consistent matching of the two colours would tend to a correct balance of all the properties being maintained, and not one quality being sacrificed for another.

The different ways or proportions in which the points of size, colour, shape and style are combined have been the root cause of the branching of the common Canary stock into "varieties," but the high degree of excellence which has been attained, and which may be witnessed at any good show, is the result of many years' work by ardent fanciers, and nearly each year means a generation, a step up the ladder.

Club Reports.

GLASGOW (Queen's Park) C.B.S.

Meeting, Y.M.C.A. Rooms, Dec. 20. President, Mr. R. B. Cairns, chair, and a large attendance. The chairman said that the annual show, held on the 2nd Dec. was the finest effort of the club that had ever taken place. Each successive year the entries had gradually been going up, till this year they had reached the high mark of over 520; 54 of the club's 70 members had exhibited, so that the entries showed an average of 14 entries per exhibitor. This, for a confined show, was truly a great effort, and showed the high standard of efficiency in which the club stood. The catalogue also was a fine piece of work, being an award-marked one, and on sale 30 minutes after the show opened, showing the club's officials had not been idle. He thanked the committee for the energetic way in which they had carried out the work allotted to them, also the show manager, Mr. W. Connelly, for the enterprising way he conducted the affairs of his post, also the sec. for the successful way he had conducted the affairs in general. New members proposed: G. S. Robertson, Jas. C. Brown, Geo. Lea, and Allan Robertson. Notice of motion for next meeting, by Messrs. Kerr and Black: That four new trophies be got for the club. Specials won at annual show were handed out. Chairman read letter from Sec. re notice of resignation. Next meeting, annual general meeting, will be held Jan. 31, in Y.M.C.A. Rooms, at 7.30. As there is some very important business to come up for discussion, it is imperative that every member should make a special effort to be present.—A. K. Hunter, Sec. and Treas.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Meeting Dec. 12, Cock and Lion Hotel, Wigmore Street, Mr. F. E. Fisher chair. This was the last of the season at which birds were a special feature in being brought for edification in the song. Some very fine specimens were present, notably bass, hollow roll, and a fine schocked pointed cut and dilated upon by the chairman. We had a full meeting. The club is now getting occupied over show matters.—Hy. W. Gutierrez.

FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting, Minto Hotel, Lochgelly, Mr. Smith, President, in the chair. Balance sheet for year was passed. Office bearers were appointed: Pres., Mr. Smith; Vice-Pres., Mr. Storrar; Sec. and Treas., Mr. Sneddon; Auditors, Messrs. Storrar and Baxter. Next meeting, Coaltoun of Wemyss, Feb. 3, at 6. After the meeting Mr. Smith, in an able speech, presented the cup to Coaltoun of Wemyss, whose President suitably replied. Specials were handed over to the winners. Songs were rendered by members of the various societies, and a vote of thanks to the chairman brought the evening to a close. The Sec. extends the compliments of the season to all members in the League.—J. Sneddon, Sec.

SOUTH SHIELDS (Always Ready)

Meeting, Dec. 12, Hunt's Shop, Ocean Road; Mr. J. S. Dixon presided over a good attendance. Balance sheet was read by Sec. and was received with enthusiasm. The balance in hand, £14 8s., will be paid out in prize money next year. We have received the names of 15 new members to be made at next meeting, Jan. 24, when all members will have received their balance sheets. Auditors elected, W. Duke, T. R. Baker; E. Coppock trustee pro. tem., until R. Ridley returns from active service. Agreed that any wounded soldier of the Borough who is in the Fancy will be made a member free of charge the first year; also decided that election of officers will take place at next meeting. The auditors went through the books at close of meeting and found all correct.—J. W. Watson, Sec.

AYR C.B.C.

Meeting, High St., Mr. P. McQuiston presiding. Present, Messrs. McLachlan, T. Erskine, W. Erskine, Cameron, Alexander, Girvan, Gribben, W. Wilson, Lelland, and Ferguson. Balance sheet was submitted and considered satisfactory. Decided to hand over £12 to the Carrick House Red Cross Hospital. All prize-money and specials in cash have been paid, specials in kind delivered, and accounts paid to date. The Sec. was congratulated upon the success of the recent Red Cross Show, and in return thanked the members who had supported him in his efforts to make the show such a successful one as to be a surprise to those who came to see it. Mr. John Forbes, Deputy Chief Constable for the County, intimated his resignation of the position of Honorary President, and his resignation was reluctantly accepted. Mr. P. Paterson was elected to the position. Mr. Robert Gribben was proposed as a member. Messrs. W. Wilson and W. Lovie appointed auditors. Decided to have no "Pairs" show in the coming season; but to have a First Feather show, date to be fixed at next meeting. The annual open show will be held Dec. 8. Next meeting Mar. 3.—H. M. Ferguson, Sec.

Queries Answered

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.

(7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).

(8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence.

CANARY QUERIES

SEXUAL DISTINCTIONS.

Beginner.—Externally, these are very slight indeed in the Canary, and of quite a comparative nature, long generations of domesticity having almost obliterated al trace of what might have existed in the original stock. In a general way the cock has a bolder and more dominant appearance, is more pushful, has a less angular sweep of outline from the lower breast on to the under tail coverts, a bolder eye, and richer tone of colour on the throat, wing butts and at bottom of back, just above root of tail. The call is more clear and musical and the song itself more clear, ringing and unbroken, and when he sings the throat will be seen to pulsate and throb very perceptibly as the notes are produced. Some hens will make a very fair attempt at singing, but, in all save very exceptional cases, the song is short, scrappy and harsh in comparison with that of the cock. These points taken altogether will enable even a novice to sex his stock with a fair amount of success, and coupled with close observation he should soon be sufficiently expert to sex a given bird correctly. At the beginning the song and the inflation and throbbing of the throat are the most reliable and certain guides.

FIXING AND KEEPING COLOUR.

J. Y. A.—(1) A short course of iron in some form at the end of the moult will suffice both to tighten up the plumage and make the colour more permanent. When the feathers have quite ceased dropping dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea in the drinking water three times a week for two or three weeks, which will usually suffice for the purpose, and if it appears to cause undue constipation you may easily correct this by adding a little extra green food of a succulent nature, such as watercress, to the dietary until the droppings resume a normal consistency. (2) The tone of colour-fed birds is always apt to become a little washed out, towards the end of the show season, especially if shown much, which may necessitate many washings. To prevent this, and also provide for the reproduction in proper colour of any stray feathers that may be lost, accidentally or otherwise, you should give, about once a week, or three times in a fortnight all through the show season, a small teaspoonful of egg food with a little colour mixed in it.

ALWAYS SNEEZING.

D. L. L.—Possibly the bird has been unusually susceptible to the cold changes whilst thinly clad during the moult. Still, you should be sure that it is not exposed to direct cold draughts or sudden extremes of temperature. Remove either of the latter exciting causes which may exist, and give in addition to the usual dietary a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a week or fortnight as may seem necessary, and on the alternate days add to the water five drops each of oxymel of squille, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre. Do not allow the bird to hang near or over a burning light in the evenings nor high up near the ceilings, as the air is very apt to be vitiated in these places and cause frequent sneezing by mechanical irritation.

MAKING A START.

T. M. J.—You would certainly go wrong at the beginning if you purchased a pair of yellow birds to start with even if you wish to work up a strain of light muling hen Canaries. This would be what is termed double-yellowing, and unless it is well understood it is liable to produce progeny with thin and scanty feather, coarse extremities, small size and a variety of minor defects. It is a system of mating which the novice with no experience at all should leave severely alone. Get two clear birds if you like, but let one be a buff and the other a yellow, and if the buff is bred from a mating of two yellows so much the better if it is of good size and well feathered, as it will be a much better and safer mating for you to attempt. A strain of Canaries specially bred for producing light Mules, or what are known as Sib-bred Canaries, is, or should be, invariably the result of more or less close in-breeding, and this again requires some experience to carry it on for any appreciable length of time without material deterioration in the stock. Upon the whole you would be best advised to put yourself in the hands of a known successful and reliable breeder and get a pair of clear birds, or if you start with two pairs, a pair of clears, and the second pair a clear and a ticked or lightly marked. Have what would be termed unrelated birds, which, of course, with birds coming from the same stud must not be taken to imply total absence of kinship, but only comparatively so. Get strong, healthy, young birds, and as soon as they are quite through the moult, and whilst breeding with these next season read and digest such books as House's "Norwich Canary," 1s. 2d., and "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., both post free, from our manager, and if you have any doubts about mating the young the following season send along full particulars of the birds, young and old, and I will do my best to help you.

SLACK FEATHER.

B. J.—If it is not due to a natural defect in the feather the plumage will gradually fine down in the course of a week or two after the moult is finished. Offer the bath on each nice, bright day, keep a morsel of fresh raw carrot stuck in the wires of the cage for it to peck at when it likes, and add to the drinking water a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea and four drops of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight or so. A morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar every third day during the same time will also be very beneficial. By the end of a fortnight or so the effect should be to make the bird quite fine and tight in feather, if the slackness is not due to a natural coarseness of plumage.

ROLLER QUERIES.

Novice.—(1) No hard and fast rule as to the length of time it takes to train Roller cocks to sing can be laid down, as the birds naturally vary in aptitude individually, as well as by reason of their breeding—birds from a good, free-singing strain showing more aptitude than those bred from a stock which has not been specially trained. But in a general way young cocks that have had the privilege of tuition constantly from the time they leave the nest should be perfectly trained by the time they resume full song after moulting—say about November. But they may improve up to the beginning of the following year. (2) If not trained they could not be expected to sing typical Roller tours, but the song might be classed as a good type as common Canaries' song usually goes. (3) This is rather a poser and depends somewhat on what you mean by "sing properly." Given the advantage of proper tuition the vast majority of Roller cocks will learn to sing a very good average type of song, though it may not be able to carry off the palm in a Roller singing contest; a fairly large percentage, if bred from a well-trained stock, should come within reasonable distance of the top; and a few specimens here and there may prove incorrigibly bad. I am sorry I have no figures from which I can give you any definite percentages of either class, and doubt if any reliable figures could be evolved that would be generally applicable.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SUITABLE STOCK BIRDS.

E. M. H.—(1) If the bird is quite healthy in other respects there is no reason why it should not be suitable for breeding, notwithstanding the watery-looking eye. Possibly the eye is a little inflamed and the following treatment for a week or two should set matters right. Get a few camomile flowers from a chemist, place a fair-sized teaspoonful—about a drachm in weight—in a teacup, fill with boiling water, cover, and allow to infuse beside the fire for an hour. Then strain, add 30 drops of tincture of opium, and when cold it is ready for use. Each evening for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary, catch the bird and bathe the eye for a few minutes with this, using a drop of fresh liquid and a fresh pledget of wool each time. (2) I cannot advise you to breed with the sib-bred hen that is deformed. Although it appears quite healthy, and the physical defect may have been the outcome of some injury in the nestling state, it would be unwise to risk breeding with it even if there were no inherited defect which is by no means certain.

SWELLINGS ON TOES.

Anxious One.—You ought to have described the appearance of the swellings as nearly as you could, and also said whether they are on the hind or the middle fore toes. I cannot decide which of these you would call the "big toes." Anyway, try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not well in that time write again and give these particulars. Mix a teaspoonful of extract of wych hazel in a saucerful of lukewarm water, and bathe the affected feet in this solution for a few minutes once daily. If there appears any "head" with pus underneath you may carefully prick it with a clean needle, and gently press out any free matter during the bathing. After bathing a few minutes, dry gently, and paint on the swellings a little of the neat extract of wych hazel with the tip of a small feather, holding the bird a few moments until the "sting" has passed off.

SAMPLE OF CANARY SEED.

F. P.—The seed sent shows a very good all round sample, of quite good quality, and I see no valid reason whatever why the birds should object to it. They ought to be mighty glad to get such seed in these times. You omit to say what form their objection takes. If they husk it and drop the kernel on the cage floor, add ten drops of lemon juice and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water for three consecutive days. This may set matters right, which may be nothing more than a little digestive derangement.

TO DISTINGUISH SEX.

G. W. G. (Gorton).—It is by no means an easy task for a tyro to tell the sex of Canaries with any degree of certainty, but the ability to do so will come with a little experience and observation. You will be lucky indeed if you are not reduced to the straits of having to depend upon such fanciful aids as threaded needles and silver coins. All the sexual differences are comparative and quite slight in most cases, but you will generally find the cock is of a bolder and more pushful, domineering disposition, and if you had birds of the same brood he would as often as not be a trifle larger than the hens, but size in a general way is no reliable guide. He is more smart and upstanding, and, if natural colour, will probably have a richer tone of colour on the throat, butts of wings, and on the rump. The eye has a larger and bolder appearance, and the under-tail coverts are more neatly packed, showing a more graceful sweep of outline from the abdomen on to the under-tail coverts. The voice is more clear and liquid compared with the harsher tone of the hen, and when the cock sings, which is far the best guide for the novice, the throat is inflated and throbs perceptibly as the notes are produced. Some hens will make a decent show of trying to sing, but their efforts are more or less a broken twittering, and there is little, if any, inflation of the throat. In the spring, when the birds are in breeding condition, the appearance of the vent will be a further guide, that of the cock being more prominent than that of the hen, which is flat and more on a line with the abdomen. You should cage the birds you are doubtful of by themselves in separate cages, and feed a little liberally, when they should soon come in song if cocks.

MICE IN ATTIC.

W. Leech.—It must naturally depend very largely upon the nature of the building and its surroundings as to what is the best way to clear it of mice. Not knowing anything at all about these points, the best thing I can suggest is that you put down a course of Danysz Virus, which you may often see advertised in our columns. This should make a clearance for a time, but unless you adopt also suitable measures of prevention and encouragement you can only expect that more will come in their places after a time. As soon as a clearance is made, hunt out and stop with cement, in which you have mixed a portion of finely-broken glass or china, all holes or crevices by which they have gained access, and, more important still, keep all seeds and foods, and such-like temptations, securely in mouse-proof boxes or tins. Adopt any practicable methods to keep them out of the cages, and do not allow any waste seed or husks to lie about the floor or accumulate in the cages. Where such temptations as the latter exist for any length of time, it is an exceedingly difficult problem to keep out mice entirely.

HOARSE VOICE.

R. Hughes.—If there is no sign of the bird having cold or any coughing or sneezing, seeing that it is in apparent good health and active, your description of its call is rather suggestive of a hen. Anyway, see that it is kept free from cold, direct draughts, damp, or rapid extremes of temperature, and, in addition to its usual seed diet, give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. If there is no improvement at the end of this treatment you had better get some more experienced fancier to look at the bird and tell you if it is really a cock.

AILING BORDER FANCY.

W. F. S. (Ealing).—The cold the bird had would not necessarily have anything to do with it losing its plumage now. You do not say whether the bird moulted at the proper time earlier in the autumn, but in any case the present moult affecting the flights and tail, as well as the contour feathers, is an abnormal one, as a Canary hatched this year should not yet lose its tail and flights. Try the following treatment for a month, and if it does not set matters right in that time write again and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further. As staple diet, give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately every third day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white nillet, teazle, and broken groats. On the intervening days give first a morsel of banana or boiled or raw carrot, or sweet apple, and next a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed. Also dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add 30 drops of syrup of buckthorn and give 15 drops of this mixture in the drinking water every second day until the feathers have quite ceased dropping. Offer the bath twice weekly in the early part of the day, and keep the bird in a comfortable place, not necessarily overheated nor yet on the chilly side, and avoid direct cold draughts and rapid extremes of heat and cold.

A QUESTION OF DIET.

Anxious.—The letter you enclose is certainly a somewhat remarkable missive, but its very vagueness and the general character of the sweeping statements almost put it out of the pale of criticism. The writer is, of course, perfectly entitled to his opinion, but, unfortunately, the whole weight of real practical experience is dead against his theories as far as they may be taken to relate to Canaries, and many other species of cage birds, too, for the matter of that. It is noteworthy that no particular class of birds is named in the sweeping statement that "it is never advisable to feed to cage birds any biscuit, or other breadstuff; much, if any canary seed, or millet, or suchlike very unsuitable foodstuffs." Had such a statement referred to, say, members of the Thrush or Warbler families, Swallows or Flycatchers, or any such exclusively insectivorous species, little could be said against it, but to go to the other extreme if one applied it to such species as the small Foreign Finches, Waxbills, or the small Parrakeets, one will readily see the utter uselessness of such wide and general assertions. I cannot express any opinion about the report of the six-weeks' old youngster dying from fatty degeneration from this kind of dietetic error, but it must have been a wicked little glutton which richly deserved its fate. You do not give sufficient details as to your feeding after the young were taken away from the parents and their general treatment for me to suggest any definite cause of death. But as you are now adhering to advice in "Canary Breeding for Beginners" I would advise you to go on with this method right through next season, and do not withdraw the soft food too soon after the young are placed on their own, nor allow any stale portions of food to lie about the cages. See the latter are kept in a clean and sanitary condition, and the food and water-vessels frequently washed quite clean; and I see no reason whatever why you should not succeed in rearing all that are weaned from the parents to maturity. If any such losses occur next year write at once and give the fullest particulars, and I will do what I can to assist you to overcome them.

LOSING YORKSHIRE HENS.

Perplexed.—The symptoms might be accounted for almost entirely by ptomaine poison being absorbed with the food, but considering the way the birds are kept this could only be explained by the birds having some kind of tainted food, such as rancid hemp, as an extra, which was largely monopolised by the birds that afterwards became the victims of the disease. But on the whole I am rather inclined to think that it is due to chills or broncho-pneumonia, to which these specimens are more predisposed than the rest of the stock kept under the same conditions. In the latter case the best treatment, as soon as you see a bird showing signs of becoming affected, is to remove it at once to a quite warm place where the heat is as equable as possible, give a supply of plain canary seed and in addition a little bread and milk well sprinkled with maw seed, and a slight dusting of soft sugar. A small teaspoonful of boiled summer rape may be offered occasionally, but the above items may be all that will be really appreciated. In the water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for two days, and after this give instead 30 drops of brandy and six of syrup of buckthorn until the urgent symptoms have passed. If this does not quickly set matters right you would be well advised to send the body of the next that dies to our Mr. Yates, as soon as possible after death, for a post-mortem, as per rules under heading "Post-mortems," in order to ascertain whether there is any contagion attached to it.

BORDER FANCY COCK MOULTING.

Crafter.—(1) It is quite likely that the change from the breeding cage with a companion to a wire cage is mainly responsible for the bird going soft in condition. You certainly did quite right to separate the sexes, which should have been done some time ago, and you should not reintroduce them in the same cage until time to mate them for breeding, which will not be earlier than the end of next March. For the present, if you cannot place the cock in a box cage you should see that it is kept in a fairly cosy part of the room where the fluctuations of temperature are least felt. The sample of mixed seed you sent is not a good one. It contains too little variety and too much linseed. Omit the linseed, and add about the same proportion of each of the following: Teazle, inga, and broken groats. Then in addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of this mixture every third day, and on the alternate days give first a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and next a morsel of banana or boiled or raw carrot. Also dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add 30 drops of syrup of buckthorn, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the drinking water two days in every three until the feathers have quite ceased dropping. (2) Your proposed double breeding cage will certainly be small, but as it is intended for Border Fancy it will not be quite so objectionable as though it were for one of the larger breeds. At the same time you are much mistaken in thinking that an inch or two taken off the length is compensated for by an inch or two put on to the height. It is the floor space that is of the greatest importance in the dimensions of any cage, and by taking off the length you reduce the area of floor space, which remains quite unaffected by what is added to the height. This you may bear in mind for any future variations of the size of cages.

PROBABLE CAUSE OF DEATH.

J. A. H.—It is eminently unsatisfactory to hazard a guess as to the cause of death after it has taken place. Only a proper post-mortem is of any real service in such cases. But, judging from your description and the prevailing conditions at the time there is very little doubt that the bird was a victim to broncho-pneumonia, mainly due to the weather conditions, and in all probability aggravated by a chill caught by some means. The only thing that would have been of any service would have been to have put the bird in a very warm place, given a little bread and milk for food, and added half a teaspoonful of brandy, or some similar stimulant, to each tablespoonful of its drinking water, and left the rest to nature. This might have pulled it through, but it may be some consolation to know that in acute cases of this kind the hopes of recovery are very slight. Your treatment was not really bad except in one detail, that of giving three drops of castor oil. This would be an enormous dose for a Canary, and castor oil is never a very suitable medicine for Canaries. A much better treatment would have been to mix equal parts of the oil—if that were the only thing of the kind at hand, though syrup of buckthorn would have been preferable—and brandy and given two drops of this mixture in the beak, or on a crumb of bread and milk, every two or three hours for a day. With regard to your other questions: (1) A drop or two of strong brandy given in the beak now and again would not act as a poison, but I do not consider it a good plan to administer it in this manner for obvious reasons. A mixture of equal parts brandy and glycerine or any similar vehicle is less objectionable, and a very valuable stimulant when needed. (2) If by "concentrated glycerine" you mean pure glycerine as used for medical or toilet purposes this also certainly would not act as a poison. (3) Yes, I certainly think it highly probable that the bird contracted acute broncho-pneumonia, from which the chances of recovery are not great at any time.

MOPY BORDER FANCY HEN.

G. A. Arnold.—You give no idea as to the age of the hen when you purchased her, so I cannot say anything very definite as to whether she will be of any use for breeding next season. But if she shows any indications of having left her youth behind, such as thick and overgrown claws, or coarse, scaly feet and legs, I would not advise you to depend upon her another season, as you would run much less risk of disappointment by replacing her with a healthy, vigorous young hen. As regards her mopy condition, it would have been helpful had you mentioned whether she was in a plump, stout condition or the reverse. The mopiness may very probably be due to being a little overfed, the bad effects of which would not be so pronounced or noticeable whilst the bird was in the outdoor aviary. If it has one or two energetic companions in the flight to elbow it about a bit it will probably help to do it good. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. In addition give separately a pinch of summer rape every third day, except that once each week you may vary this by substituting a small teaspoonful of boiled rape. On the intervening days give first a morsel of banana, boiled or raw carrot, or sweet apple, and next a pinch of the mixed seeds you are now giving, but with the linseed omitted altogether. Keep the cage floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. In the water, for three consecutive days, add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

ONLY OCCASIONAL TRILL.

A. B. C., Bath.—The bird has not quite recovered from the moult, and is still in what is termed a "soft condition." This would largely account for it not coming into more vigorous condition and full song. See that it is not exposed to rapid extremes of temperature; allow it to bathe two or three times a week, offering the bath early in the day, and touch the ends of the perches in all the compartments of the aviary each week with paraffin or some other insecticide. A fairly warm, but not overheated, temperature as equable as you can make it will be all that is needed. Omit the linseed from the seed mixture altogether and replace it with an equal proportion of broken groats, and give half a teaspoonful every second day for a month, and on the alternating days give either a morsel of banana or boiled or raw carrot. Two days in every three for a month dissolve in half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add 30 drops of syrup of buckthorn, and add 20 drops of this mixture to the drinking water. This should bring the bird into good hard condition, and soon after it should resume its full song. It would help it considerably at the beginning to keep a morsel of the following paste stuck in the wires, for it to peck at when it likes for a week or two. Mix and knead well together a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, ditto of pure honey, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, ditto of powdered grain of paradise, and add whilst mixing as much finely powdered biscuit as will bring it to the consistency of soft cheese. When dry it will be fairly solid, and you can cut a cube or a pellet to stick on the end of the perch between the wires.

HEAT OR NO HEAT.

New Recruit.—If the room is really damp to any material extent, as you suggest, it is not a suitable one for your birds under any conditions, and I very much doubt if any form of artificial heating it would be of any benefit. Simple cold of itself is by no means a bar to successful keeping of Canaries, but cold and damp, or even damp alone, means birds continually out of condition and in soft moult. Personally, I do not know that ideal treasure, a stove with no chimney that will neither smoke nor give off fumes, and as you cannot have any flue to carry off any fumes into the open air you would, in my opinion, be far better without any heat at all. If you really wish to try I should place the different methods of heating applicable to your needs as follows:—1, a portable hot water coil heated by an atmospheric burner placed on a bed of stone or brick in the centre of the room, for which you would need in the first place to have gas laid on to the house; 2, a syphon oil stove, which is said to burn its own smoke, and of which you may see many designs in the lists of any large hardware stores; and 3, a slow combustion stove for coal or coke. The last is the least desirable, and I would not care to trust any other without a cover of some kind to entrap fumes or smoke and carry them off by means of a small pipe either to the air or into a chimney flue. If your birds have been bred and kept in a normal temperature hitherto the best advice I can give you is to place them now in a situation that is dry, and do not worry about cold. Add a little extra heat forming foods to the dietary, such as hemp, rape, and broken groats, or a few crushed oats now and again when the weather is very cold; cover the cages over at night if you like, and, as a final precaution, give each bird a little "goose box," such as you may have seen described in our columns recently, to roost in, or even the choice of roosting in a little box with a bit of crushed hay in it, and I do not think you need have the least fear of them suffering unduly from the cold. In a room of this kind you would need to be careful not to mate up the birds too early in the spring—the beginning of April would be quite soon enough.

FEEDING A STARLING.

F. E. H.—You will have no trouble in feeding your Starling, as they are birds easily kept. As a staple food there is nothing better than the first one you mention, which will keep much more delicate birds in health. With this as a staple food, and various scraps from the table, he should do admirably. He certainly should have some live food, as the bird is so much happier, and healthy, with it. Mealworms are very handy, and many other kinds can be collected in the open. Earthworms in any quantity are not at all suitable, but all kinds of grubs, caterpillars, and beetles will be appreciated. Soft fruit can be offered all the year round. The cage you mention will do nicely. It should be cleaned out at least twice a week. He should be allowed to bathe on all suitable occasions, giving the bath early in the morning, so that bird and cage are quite dry by roosting time. The perches should be large enough for the bird to get a firm grip, three quarters of an inch in diameter, should be about the correct size. As regards the birds in your other cage, if you have a surplus of hens you will not have much trouble with them; squabbles usually occur when the cocks are in the majority.

IMPROVING AN AVIARY.

E. Oglesby.—It would certainly be an improvement to your aviary to cover the back with branches. If you can get box and heather you will find these most suitable. As regards the nesting boxes, they must not be too dark inside or the birds will not enter. I should advise you to leave one end partly open and partly cover it with heather, which you will find admirable for thatching purposes if you can manage to get sufficient. Wild birds like seclusion when nesting, and the better you can arrange for this, the more likely you are to be successful. I would not advise you to turn in the Foreign birds with the Finches. I think the number and species you suggest having would do admirably. See that they are all healthy; if you have any doubts about any of them do not use them. If you can manage to get chaff from the thrashing machine it will make a capital floor covering and keep the birds busy hunting among it.

AVIARY MATTERS.

Various.—Do not apologise; our columns are always open to readers who are in doubt and seek advice. There is just one point you failed to mention, that is do you intend to try to breed with your birds, or do you only want to keep them as pets? If the former, I would advise the following: The two cock Goldies, the Linnet and Greenfinch, with these you could have two or three hen Canaries, and a hen Bullfinch. If it is not your intention to try to breed you could simply have a mixed collection of cocks and hens, but I would advise you not to have more cocks than hens. You might have pairs of the following: Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, and Bullfinch. This would be quite sufficient birds and make a bright and varied collection. (2) With a mixed collection you must give mixed seed, but it would be a waste of time for me to tell you what seeds to get until you have decided upon the birds you intend to have.

STOCKING AN AVIARY.

Manx.—Your screen and shutters should do admirably, as birds do so much better when they can be sheltered from very rough weather. Your selection for Hybrid breeding should do, but do not have more than one Bullfinch hen in it. As a rule they do not agree at all well. I do not think you should have the Softbills in with them if you can manage otherwise; Finches do best by themselves. (2) Your system of feeding the Blackbirds appears to be quite all right, but do not overdo the earthworms, and let them be small ones that you do give. If they have a little minced meat occasionally, they should not need much in the way of worms. Birds eat these when in a state of nature, but when caged, they do not agree with them quite as one would expect, consequently we only use them when other live food fails. Slugs and snails are good given occasionally, but far too relaxing for general use.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT IS A "ROCK PARROT"?

Kingston.—The bird frequently known and sold as a Rock Parrot is one of the species of Ring-neck Parrakeets common to India. It is also known here as the Alexandrine Parrakeet. This is a hardy species, and I have seen quite talented specimens. You may have an old bird, but I cannot be definite on this point from the information you supply. In the times, providing the bird is not a screamer and in good general condition, you have paid a fair price for it. Diet: A seed mixture of canary, white millet, hemp, sunflower, safflower, oats and monkey nuts—equal bulk of each well mixed together will about meet its simple requirements. It should also have ripe fruit, green-food, and such extras as biscuits, plain cake and dry crusts, a piece of dry boiled potato and raw carrot occasionally. Grit, cuttlebone, water, and a chunk of wood (for it to exercise its mandibles upon) should be continually in the cage. If you take the precaution to keep it out of draughts, and at the same time see that it gets plenty of light and fresh air, it should do well with you.

YOUNG SIERRA LEONE PARROT DROPPING FEATHERS.

Miss Corner.—I cannot help you till you supply me with details as to how your Parrot is fed and treated generally. I can only say provisionally, keep it strictly out of draught and lightly colour the drinking water with chemical food, and if the droppings are at all hard, give it a mild laxative in the drinking water (say, one teaspoonful Dinneford's Magnesia), omitting the chemical food while giving the laxative. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager, would greatly assist you as to general treatment. If you supply the information asked for above I shall be pleased to assist you in the difficulty.

SPECIALS AT LARKHALL SHOW.

A Larkhall Member.—Your letter is a personal attack on an individual, and conveys insinuations which you do not seem inclined to specify. Further, it is not accompanied by your name and address, and this is a second reason for our not publishing it.

WILD BIRDS AND PROTECTION ORDERS.

H. Brown.—Of course it is "possible to pass a law to put a stop to catching all wild birds all the year round in the United Kingdom." By the Wild Birds Act of 1880 the catching of many species is prohibited during the spring and summer, and in several counties the schedule of birds mentioned in this Act is supplemented by Local Government Orders so as to include other birds, and some species are by these Local Orders protected throughout the year. In reply to your question as to whether farmers would object to the passing of such a law, we would say certainly. Have you considered what would happen to the crops if Wood Pigeons, Sparrows, Rooks, and many other mischievous species were allowed to multiply indefinitely? Of course Nature would right herself in the end; there would soon be fewer crops and fewer birds, for thousands upon thousands would die in the fight for existence. But what about the farmer meanwhile? Your third question, "What birds are most troublesome to Farmers?" opens up a field for discussion into which we do not care to enter. We have indicated some troublesome birds, and there are other pebbles on the beach.

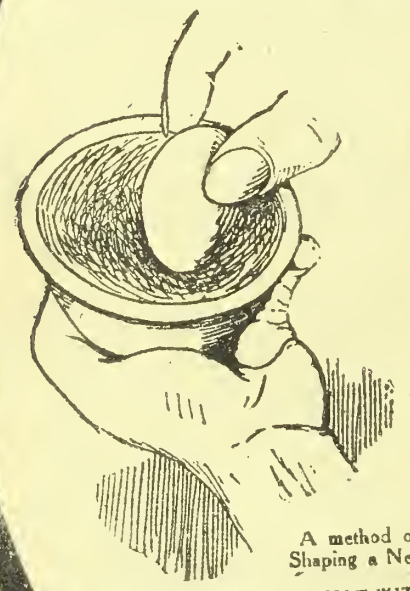
SECRETS
of Famous Canary Breeders
YOURS for only 1/- down



Judging the position of a bird by the clock.

HOW well-known Canary Fanciers bred their prize-winning birds—birds literally worth their weight in gold—how they trained them—the foods used. All this priceless information and much more is clearly given by the Breeders themselves in this splendid Canary Book. Every page—every line—is full of the practical experience of practical men—experts in their line. Fanciers who have specialised in Lizards give valuable information. Breeders of famous prize-winning crested varieties contribute to its 380 pages. Every feature of Canary Breeding and Exhibiting is clearly and fully dealt with—you have only to glance at the comprehensive index to turn up the information you desire.

The book contains 133 illustrations, a few of which are here reproduced. Thus, "Our Canaries" not only tells you but shows you. If you are a novice, or breed only for pleasure, you will be delighted with the increased enjoyment which the book will enable you to derive from your hobby. If you are an "old hand," or breed for profit, it will help you to increase profits.

"Our Canaries" will be sent you for Free Examination—Approval for a deposit of only 1/-. If, after examination, you return the book, your deposit will at once be refunded. If, however, you decide to keep the book, you can pay the balance by easy monthly instalments. Thus you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by sending for a copy. Do so TO-DAY.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

THE GREAT NEW NATIONAL NEWSPAPER,

. Every . Thursday "FOOD," 1D. WEEKLY

How to Produce it, Prepare it and Purvey it.

The most important question of the moment is Food. The Nation calls for an organisation of all its Resources in Food Production. For the first time in our history Agriculture is adequately represented in our National Councils by a Food Controller and a Practical Expert at the Head of the Board of Agriculture. The proper utilisation of waste spaces—the breaking up of big Estates—the development of the allotment system, all these ideas and many others equally beneficial seem in process of fulfilment. It will be the aim of "FOOD" to show the people of Great Britain how to grow their own food—cheaply and well. "FOOD" will bring all Food Growers, Food Dealers and Food Consumers into regular and easy touch with each other. "FOOD" will cover the production of all kinds of Foods and also their method of preparation for the table. The leading experts on Food will be retained for "FOOD" as regular writers and advisers, and readers of "FOOD" will be kept in close touch with the markets and the latest methods. All the work of the smallholding from week to week will be discussed—the plans for Fruit and Vegetable growing debated. The successful raising of Poultry and Pigs, Cattle, Sheep, Goats, etc., will all be comprehensively, simply and practically dealt with. There will be articles on Bee Cultivation and Rabbit Farming. In short, every phase and side issue of the Great Food Problem will be touched on. Under the Editorship of

MR. J. W. HURST,

(Editor of Nelson's Encyclopædia of Agriculture. The Farmer's Annual Register etc.)

"FOOD" will strive to be of real National Service. Place an order with your Newsagent to-day, for the first number. Tell all your friends about "FOOD" and if you have anything to advertise, take advantage of the huge sale and circulation such a Journal is sure to secure. If you desire on patriotic grounds to support such an enterprise by subscribing to it, send 6/- to-day for a year's Subscription to—

The Publishers of "FOOD," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BREED YOUR OWN WINNERS IN 1917.

and you can do it if you only pair up right; or if you want to purchase pairs, leave it to me; for it is no trouble to me to produce documentary proof that the foundation of many past and present exhibition studs have been laid by birds purchased from me. Great value for money is my forte. I herewith give a few prices of exceptionally good

NORWICH PLAINHEADS and YORKSHIRES.

You may have all the so-called strains and bogus pedigrees in the world, but you cannot purchase better blood than I now hold, and I am certain you cannot procure the same value. Cocks 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/-. Hens 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-. Pairs 25/-, 30/-, 40/-, 60/-. These prices are for show birds and stock birds to breed winners. OTHERS, really good, containing many of the best strains in Great Britain, Cocks 11/6, 12/6. Hens 4/6, 5/6, 7/6, 10/6. Pairs 15/6, 21/- upwards. Cages 4d. and 6d.; approval with pleasure. All above prices relate to Norwich and Yorkshires. For Belgians, Cinnamons, Lizards, etc., see my detailed free price list for 1917.—W. R UDD, Specialist, NORWICH.

IMPORTANT.

we are prepared to pay the very highest cash prices for large or small quantities of Canaries, including Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, Rollers, etc.; also Mules. Do not dispose of your surplus stock until you have received our offers. All our birds are for retail trade—not for export—therefore we can pay the very highest prices in the trade. All Canaries we purchase are retained in this country. Do not be misled with idle boast and exaggerated statements. Send your offers to a reliable firm, where you will receive a genuine offer and your cash.

DUBMIRE C.B.S.

Annual show, Dec. 16, in the Dubmire Club Hall, kindly granted for the occasion by the committee. Mr. G. T. Lynn had everything in his old style, assisted by a hard-working committee, and there was a very nice display of birds. Mr. M. Bissett won special best young bird with a very nice dark Crest. Mr. Bissett, like many more true fanciers, is away serving his King and Country, and we all wish for him a safe and speedy return. Mr. A. J. Notley judged, and gave satisfaction.

PLYMOUTH W. COUNTIES O.S.

Pair show, held Dec. 12, many members being on Government work, entries must be considered fairly well up, 52 pairs being staged, but not one Crest put in an appearance. Each section contained birds of grand merit, but the class of the show was the pairs for muling, no less than 17 grand pairs facing the judge, who had his work cut out to find the winners, so close were they. The following judged, and gave general satisfaction: Yorks and Clnns., T. Cope; Nor., W. Spillman; Muling Pairs, G. Pridham.

FALKIRK, GRANGEMOUTH AND BANNOCKBURN C.B.S.

3rd annual combined show, Nov. 25, Union Hall, Falkirk, an ideal hall for a show, with plenty of room. The birds were nicely staged round the sides. Entries were about 350 and contained the cream of the Fancy in all sections. The office-bearers had everything in order and gave satisfaction to everyone. The Secretary (Mr. Aitken), although only his first year, had everything in tip-top order. Judges were: Norwich, Mr. Sloan; Borders and Crests, Mr. Chalmers; British, etc., Mr. Bell; Scotch Fancy, Mr. Hutchison. These classes were well patronised and some excellent birds were in these classes. Cup winners: Norwich, D. Main; Bord., A. Drysdale; Crests, J. Prentice; Brit., J. Richardson.

DOUGLAS AND ISLE OF MAN.

Annual show, Masonic Hall, Loch Promenade, Dec. 26. The hall is very snug and free from draughts, and the birds were nicely arranged round the room. Although a good many members have left the island for the mainland through the war, the remaining members put up a good fight, staging some very creditable birds, both in Norwich and Yorkshires. Britishers were rather scarce; unusual at this show. The show manager, Mr. Gawne, had everything in hand, and was assisted by an energetic committee, and everything passed off without a hitch. The cup for the best Norwich fell to Mr. Gawne, best Yorkshire Mr. Caley, and a good Yorkshire shown by Mr. Teare secured cup for best unflighted, a very promising youngster. Judges: Mr. T. Hogg, Yorks., Mr. Gill the remainder.

YELL. NOR.: 1, 3, Curphy, hot col., rather long in barrel; 3rd, fine in head, nice qual.; 2, Boddon, good size, fair colour; 4, Kelly; vhc, Corkill; hc, Crellin; c, Quirk. BUFF: 1, Gawne, mkd. head, good size and qual., good chest, well cut away, good wings and tail, very cobby, takes cup best Nor.; 2, Boddon, plenty of size, nice type and col.; 3, Curphy, nice col. and size, rather rough when judged; vhc, Moore; hc, Cain; c, Carrin. BUFF: 1, 3, Gawne, plenty length and qual., nice col., well up on leg, very nervy, good cond.; 3rd, not so good pos. as winner; 2, vhc, Caley, close up, good head, length and style, lovely qual., hardly so good on leg; hc, Qualtrough; c, Tinker. YELL. HEN: 1, 3, Caley, beauty, good in all points, very typical, good col. and length, well up on leg, very stylish; 3rd, lengthy bird, neat head, wings and tail, hardly the pos.; 2, Qualtrough, lengthy and typical, nice col., neat head; vhc, Gawne; hc, Tinker; c, Celling. BUFF: 1, hc, Caley, splendid col. and qual., very nervy, nice round head, pipe tail, good legs; 2, Gawne, close up, nice wings and tail, plenty length, paler col.; 3, Qualtrough, lengthy bird, hardly so stylish, still very useful; vhc, Gawne; c, Teare. UNFLIG. YELL. CK.: 1, cup, Teare, head tkd., grand col. and qual., plenty length, pipe tail, well moulded, best of pos., only fault a little browy, still a good one; 2, 3, Dougherty, good shoulders and length, neat wings and tail, paler, not so stylish; vhc, Caley; hc, Qualtrough. BUFF: 1, Teare, splendid qual., col. and pos.; 2, Caley, close up, hard to separate; 3, Dougherty; vhc, Gawne; hc, Tinker; c, Kelly. YELL. HEN: 1, 2, Teare, good one, neat head, straight back and pipe tail, best of legs, very taking; 2nd, close up, very much the same in style, both well moulded, very warm col.; 3, Caley, plenty of length, good col. and pos., the makings of a good one; vhc, Dougherty; hc, Tinker; c, Cain. BUFF: 1, Qualtrough, good length and shape, nice col., good legs, typical; 2, Caley, close up, feathered like boxwood, stands well, nice col., neat head and shoulders; 3, Dougherty, good type and pos., lengthy; vhc, Gawne; hc, Teare; c, Tinker. GOLDF.: 1, Curphy, nice size, well tanned, large square blaze, good bars and buttons, high cond., steady as a top; 2, Kelly, grand Finch, large bright face, nice tanning, bars and buttons, has a slip heel; 3, Curphy, not up in col. LINNET, H.M.: 1, Curphy, nice size and shape, rich nutty brown col., well laced, lovely qual. and cond.; 4, Boddon, larger, well mkd., not so well filled in on breast, fails in col. and ticking to winner; 3, Boddon, fair col. and marking; 4, Kelly, rather wild, fair size and markings; vhc, Golling; hc, Cain; c, Moore. F.M.: 1, 2, Boddon, best col. and markings in class, nice size and shape; 2nd, fine col. and markings, rather wild; 3, 4, Kelly, nicely marked; vhc, Clarke; hc, Martin; c, Kewey. GREENF.: 1, 2, Curphy, leader fine cond., yell., great size, fine head, level col., very steady; 2nd, not so massive, lovely tone of col., good bars, a bit pale underco.; 3, Boddon, fine size, good col. for a buff; vhc, Kelly; hc, Kinnish; c, Martin. MULES: 1, 2, Kelly, jonque Linnet Mules; 1st, good size and col., showing the Linnet up well, well shown; 2nd slimmer, not so well mkd. or so shapey, both in good cond.

Twitterings.

We have received the new price list of Mr. E. M. Stanton, cage and appliance maker, Winton, Patricroft. All kinds of cages and cage-fittings are on offer, and the prices seem particularly reasonable.

The December issue of "Bird Notes," the Journal of the Foreign Bird Club, finishes Vol. vii., and is mainly occupied by indexes to the contents of the volume. The articles comprise "The Crimson-ringed Whydah," with photographic illustrations of the birds and their nest, by Mr. W. Shore Baily; "Bakloh Aviary Notes," by Mrs. and Major Perreau; "Mesopotamian Birds," a cutting from "The Times," and Editorial Notes.

The new price list of sanitary white pottery manufactured by Mr. Edwin Parr, North Road Works, Burslem, should certainly be seen by bird-keepers. It is exceedingly well produced, and shows patterns of every conceivable kind of egg drawer, food or water troughs, bird and poultry fountains, nest pans, and many other appliances which are indespensable in a bird room or aviary.

We have received the 16th annual report and balance sheet of the Reading C.B.S. The cash at bank and in secretary's hands, which stood at £2 17s. 11d. at the commencement of the year, is now £6 8s., a very gratifying result in the times. We note from the report that one member, Mr. H. Wilkins, has been killed in action, another, Mr. P. Chalker, is so badly wounded as to be unfit for further service, and 20 others are serving with the forces.

Cheap at the Price.

The Newmarket and District Sparrow Club have destroyed in 15 villages during the last three years 158,860 Sparrows and their eggs at a cost averaging ¾d. an acre.

British Birds at Mansfield Show.

Your reporter, writes Mr. R. D. Parlett, gives me credit for having a good team of British at Mansfield Show. I should like to say that owing to a railway accident my birds did not get to the show until 1 o'clock, and only competed, therefore, in two classes. My bird which won 1st in the Siskin, Redpoll or Twite class is a Twite, not a Redpoll, as stated in the report.

Thanks from Halifax Secretary.

Kindly thank all exhibitors and visitors who so helped to make our open show a great success, also our untiring members, who have worked hard through the exceptional circumstances in having the show postponed, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, hon. sec. Halifax C.B.S. The best thanks are also due to CAGE BIRDS, without which the shows would be at a loss. By the time this note is published the prize money will all be paid.

Birds and Frosty Weather.

Writing of the frost prevailing during the last days of the old year, "W. C.," in the "Manchester Dispatch," says: "Yesterday, in one of the woods near here, the guns put up an abnormal number of Jays, and quite a flock alighted chattering upon the fields, only to be driven back again by the report of firing in the adjoining woods. Missel Thrushes and Redwings, driven by force of circumstances to seek food away from the open, have played havoc with the berries of the hawthorn, until very few trees are to be found with any weight of berries. The Robins, bolder than ever, now come to feed, almost in the house, and, quick as lightning, pick up the little pieces of meat thrown out for their benefit."

Correction in Llanelly Schedule.

Mr. H. Webster writes that class 59 in Llanelly schedule should read "Thrush, Blackbird, or Starling."

Dispersal of a Well-known Fancier's Stock.

One of the consequences of the existing conditions of living is that Mr. H. Huggins, the well-known hon. sec. of the London and P.O.S., finds himself compelled to dispose of his whole stock, birds, cages, appliances, and everything which has gone to make him successful in the hobby of Canary keeping and exhibiting. Owing to his duties with the Volunteer Training Corps, Mr. Huggins is for the time compelled to give up bird keeping, and all his birds and accessories are advertised for sale this week in our columns. We are sure that the many friends of Mr. Huggins will join with us in wishing him a speedy return to the hobby which has given so much pleasure to himself and Mrs. Huggins.

"It's an Ill Wind—"

We are sorry to have to record the untimely end of one of the now celebrated Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrids bred by Mr. Anderson, Darvel. The bird in question won 1st prize in its class at Larkhall show, but arrived home dead. The body has been set up, and will be added to the fine collection of stuffed specimens belonging to the London and Provincial Ornithological Society. Mr. Anderson's loss will be a gain to bird keepers in general, for there will now be a permanent record of the first really authentic production of a hybrid between a Thrush and a Blackbird. We had the body of the bird in our office while it was on the way to the taxidermist, and we were pleased to note that the double parentage is so clearly indicated as to be unquestionable. When better times come along, and the L. and P.O.S. collection of stuffed birds is again on view at the shows of the Society, the Hybrid between the Song Thrush and Blackbird will prove one of the most interesting of the many birds contained therein.

AN IMPORTANT NEW PUBLICATION.

A PAPER FOR EVERYONE.

On Jan. 18th, there will appear the first number of a new weekly paper, entitled "FOOD." The title itself conveys an idea of its contents, and on page 799 there appears an advertisement which gives full particulars of the manifold subjects which will be found dealt with week by week.

In these times no one can afford to be without an up-to-date knowledge of how to make the best of such opportunities as exist. The poultry keeper will want to know how to get more eggs; the vegetable grower will want to know how to make the best use of whatever piece of ground, large or small, is at his disposal; the person with a fancy for rabbits will want to know the best kinds to keep for the table and how to keep them; in short, everybody will want to know how to grow his own food, and how to dispose of it if he has a surplus.

The weekly paper, "Food," will tell all this, and much more. Nobody must miss the first number, it should be bought if only to see how such subjects can be treated within the limits of a penny paper, and those who buy the first number will certainly become permanent subscribers. There will be another penny added to the weekly expenditure, and many pennies saved which now go to buy necessaries which may easily be produced at home if one only knows how to do it.

A "Correction" Corrected.

Considering the many thousands of awards which are printed during the show season in our columns it would be a matter of wonder if we never had to make a correction, and when we are notified of a mistake we always accept the notification in good faith, and publish a correction accordingly.

When we heard from a Mr. Bobbett that he had won 4th prize in the Bramblefinch class at Bristol show, not Mr. West as reported, we published a Twittering to that effect, and we now find that what really took place was that Mr. West's bird was sent by mistake to Mr. Bobbett, and Mr Bobbett's bird to Mr. West, and that the awards were correct as reported.

The mistake as to the birds themselves has been rectified, and the birds have been exchanged, but it appears that Mr. Bobbett still claims that his bird won the 4th prize. The end of very considerable correspondence is that we have received from Mr. Maggs, the secretary of Bristol show, a letter of which the following is an extract:

"In reply to your enquiry, your report is confirmed by the award slip. No. 231 (West) was 4th, and No. 237 (Bobbett) was commended. I am more than surprised at Mr. Bobbett's action. . . You will note that Mr. Bobbett did not notify me of the receipt of a bird which was not his, nor has he made any other communication to me with regard to his claim."

Corrections in Show Reports.

In the novice cock class at Porth, 4 Williams should read 4 Briscoe. Mr. J. Little writes that in the Scotch Fancy cock class at Gateshead he won 2nd, not 4th, as reported, and that he was reserve in the hen class.

Stolen Linnet at Whitehaven Show.

On receiving my birds from Whitehaven Show, writes Mr. H. Fleck, one was missing, and I found a note in the cage to say it had been stolen while packing. There surely must have been some neglect on the part of the stewards, but it only shows that some people will stick at nothing.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

TO JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1917 is now in active preparation, and those judges who wish their names to appear in next year's Directory of Judges should please send us on a postcard their present address and the varieties they are prepared to judge, naming, if any, those in which they specialise. No charge whatever is made for the insertion, but only the names of those who send us the particulars desired will be included in the list, as some of the judges named in previous lists are not now acting, some have died, and many have changed their addresses. The information should be conveyed in the same form as in the following example:—

Smith, J. A., 175, Doncaster Street, Edinburgh.—A.V., Spl., H.B. and F.

Jack Tomlinson and J. Tomlinson.

For some reason unknown to me, writes Mr. J. Tomlinson, Newcastle, Staffs, Mr. Jack Tomlinson has found it necessary to state that he is of no relation to myself. As queries frequently reach me on the same subject, I would like to say that we are complete strangers, and although I have recently been to Wigan and judged at their show, the pleasure of making the acquaintance of this plucky exhibitor still awaits me. The fancy may also take it for granted that where birds appear as belonging to J. Tomlinson, as they sometimes do, that they belong to Mr. Jack Tomlinson, of Wigan.

The Alario Greenfinch Hybrid.

I was pleased to note your quotation from the "Scotsman" in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. S. A. Reynolds, Stourbridge. It may interest you to know that this Hybrid was vhc at Cardiff and 4th at Birmingham. Both parents are "in the pink" at the present time, and I have hopes of further success this season. The Alario is a constant singer in spite of the snow-covered aviary. The crossing between British and Foreign finches undoubtedly opens out a new field that should appeal to the average Hybrid breeder, providing we had sufficient encouragement from our leading Ornithological Societies. Last season my cock Siskin paired with a hen Ribbon Finch, and got so far as nest and eggs, but unfortunately the Ribbon Finch died whilst sitting.

At the members' shows of the Blaenavon C.B.S., Jan. 11 and Feb. 1, writes Mr. George Broome, hon. sec., Mr. H. H. Mortimer, Abertillery, has kindly given a special of a peck of canary seed for most points in the two shows.

THE ROLLER CANARY; ITS BREEDING AND FEEDING.

A translation from a pre-war time German paper, supplied by Mr. F. A. Lester to "Roller Notes," and reprinted by the desire of Mr. J. J. Norris, Hon. Sec. British Roller C.C.

A CONNOISSEUR of Seifert birds, referring to a statement that Crest birds could be found occasionally in the Seifert strain, writes as follows:—According to Seifert's own words to me, when I was once on a visit to him, and I mentioned this question to him, he replied, "There are no Crest birds in my strain at all. This kind of bird does not exist among my Canaries; whether it is to be found in other breeds I do not know."

These were Seifert's own words concerning crested birds. I have visited him during several years in various seasons, but a crested bird I have never met, either among the cocks or hens; there can, therefore, be no talk about an occasional case. Never allow yourself to be deceived with Crest birds as being a pure breed of the original Seifert strain, even if they go ever so deep, and possess all the peculiarities of the Seifert strain, for example, the strong rolling notes, the drawn du. du. pipes, etc. In such cases cross breeds have to be dealt with.

The breeding and keeping of Seifert birds is now the aim of most breeders; with feverish anxiety the intelligent ones among them read every article in the press concerning Canaries when the peculiarities of this strain are talked about. Many have made large profits, who, understanding the breeding of the birds, knew their light and shady sides, and understood how to regulate the proper breeding of these noble birds, but many have already, or will in time, *"throw the gun amongst the corn," because in the first year the pure notes may go back and the hard ones gain the upper hand.

Song the only Consideration.

The principal factors you have to consider in this strain are the selection of the breeding birds and the feeding of the cocks. Those who make mistakes about this will be compelled to begin again after two years. He who takes notice of Seifert's words would learn with what care he chose his hens, only from nests which had produced the best cocks would he take his hens; his chief interest was concentrated in the singing, all the rest was immaterial to him. The usual formula, only to keep such young hens as come from good feeding mothers, is of no value here, because it is always questionable whether these are also prominent as regards their singing capabilities. It is no good if some individuals combine both these things. If you make your choice of breeding hens in this way, then it is evident that the quality of the breeding in this respect is small. The choice of the breeding cocks presents no difficulty if every breeder makes up his mind to use only those who sing the deepest tours.

Those who have to do with dealers and the lay public, and must select mostly yellow birds for breeding, take already the first step backwards if they consider such little things as plumage, because the majority of good and best cocks are splashed or greens. Every breeder of the Seifert strain must admit that you have to watch the yellow ones during their apprenticeship, because in these you have to fight their hard Klingel.

The second principal thing in deep singing birds is their feeding. It is common for people to fancy that under all circumstances Seifert birds must be fed on mixed food. Even the papers which deal with this question do not know whether to advise it or not.

I will give you Seifert's own words to me when I asked about the best way to feed the birds.

Expert Hints on Feeding.

"My cocks, as soon as they are able to stand alone, get nothing but rape seed and egg food; only those which easily get hoarse get mixed food and no egg food. The hens I feed all the year with mixed foods, viz., glazed corn, peeled oats, and hemp seed, in addition to rape seed; if you do so you will have good birds." These are Seifert's words concerning the feeding. I have watched and examined the feeding boxes of the cocks as well as those of the hens, and found his words true.

Naturally, if the birds are in the breeding cage you must give them mixed food if the hens are used to it, but as soon as the young cocks are self supporting, at about 30 to 35 days old, the mixed food is replaced by rape seed, at first washed in sieves, then dried again, with the addition of egg in the usual way, namely, as long as the cocks are in the flight cages, three parts biscuit to one part egg.

After they are put in single cages, strengthen the mixture to two parts biscuit and two parts egg. In case the song of some of the birds gets feeble, you may nourish them as Seifert mentions, but never allow yourself to be persuaded to feed the cocks on mixed food as a rule. When Seifert sent birds away he may perhaps have put mixed food in their boxes, the so-called travelling food, but nobody should take any notice of that. Many breeders give this food to the birds as an inducement to sing quickly when they arrive at their destination. Many breeders feed the birds for exhibition with mixed food, eight days before, to make them fiery, so that they sing at once before the judges. I was induced three years ago to give the birds mixed food, and my birds became excited and wild in their song, and the pleasing notes ceased; it was therefore necessary to give it up, so as not to go the wrong way.

Birds that are too fat can be brought again to normal condition if you give them rape seed only, a piece of apple placed between the wires of the cage, and green food. It would be foolish to cure the birds by hunger; the consequence would be that the birds would sicken.

*NOTE.—The expression "throw the gun amongst the corn," as far as I can find out, means that a man would have no more to do with it and give it up.

THE GIANT OF THE CANARY FAMILY.

By T. PEASE (Chorlton-on-Medlock), Founder of the Manchester Ornithological Society.

Some practical hints by an old lover of the Lancashire Canary, telling how to select and pair for breeding the largest of all the numerous varieties of Canaries.

WITH a view of encouraging beginners and amateurs to fall into the ranks of the keepers of the giant of the Canary family, the Lancashire, I am writing these few notes giving an experience gained over a period of about 40 years.

In the early days the Lancashire Canary was very inferior both in quality and in crest, and was only known in the outlying townships and rural hamlets of Lancashire. It was chiefly bred by mill hands and hand-loom weavers, and was shown at week-end club shows in their own localities. The advent of the Fancy Press, however, and of open shows, helped to bring the Lancashire Canary to the front.

A Good Send Off.

In the early nineties the Manchester Society gave a ten guinea silver cup for Lancashires alone, with the object of encouraging the breed, and the leading breeders of the day, men who have since passed away, competed for this trophy. It aroused the fancy, and showed what could be done with a little perseverance.

Two very important things that might be mentioned in the favour of the Lancashire Canary are that they are good breeders and require no colour feeding.

The selecting of the stock is a very important point. The novice fancier should visit a few prominent breeders and endeavour to keep in his mind the birds which he sees in their rooms; the secret of success is a good start, and the first selection made means all the difference between success and failure.

A satisfactory commencement will help the beginner a long way on the road to the show bench, so be cautious in your selection. Do not buy from Tom, Dick, and Harry, for to do so is simply to court disaster. Purchase of some prominent breeder, and commence if you possibly can with two sets. For one set get a clear yellow Plainhead cock and two buff Coppy hens, one of the hens to be clear and the other ticked. The second set should consist of a ticked buff Coppy cock, a clear yellow Coppy hen, and a clear yellow Plainhead hen; thus with one of your hens you will "double-coppy."

In double-coppying see that the hens are level in crest, well filled in at the back of the head, and avoid any slackness of feather. It is most important that a strict and exact record be kept in the stud book of all breeding proceedings.

The breeding cage for Lancashire Canaries should be large and roomy; two cross perches should extend from back to front, and these should be half-an-inch in thickness in order to allow the bird to have a perfect grip.

In View of the Breeding Season.

The preparation of the cocks should begin a month or so before the breeding season commences; the hens come more readily to hand. Procure a bag of Spratts' cage bird food, boil an egg for 15 minutes, pass this through perforated zinc or the egg mill, add two tablespoonfuls of the bird food to the egg, a little brown sugar and a pinch of maw seed, mix the whole well together, and give a little each morning.

The following is a recipe for an egg cake which I have used with good results, both when pairing up and for the young when out of the nest: Take ¾ lb. flour, ¼ lb. ground rice, pinch of salt, 1 oz. baking powder, and a gill of milk, mix into a stiff batter; warm ¼ lb. honey in an oven until fluid, well mix this into the batter, and bake in a sharp oven until crisp. After this has been kept for three days it is ready to grind in the mill, and will keep indefinitely as long as it is kept dry.

The first week in April is soon enough to pair up the birds, then give good sound seed in the hopper, with a little mixed hemp, linseed, summer rape and inga, the latter to be stopped when nesting. There should be a good supply of grit on the cage bottom, together with a little crushed egg shell; some nesting material should be supplied, and this may be of moss, with some goat or cow hair to finish off with.

Let the hen have the use of the bath for a couple of days before hatching; this helps to chip the eggs. She should also have, for the purpose of feeding the young, a good supply of green food such as watercress, dandelion, groundsel, and lettuce. When the young are ready to be got on to crushed seed then I stop the green food to the hen.

It is as well to be provided with a few "feeders" to assist in the rearing of the young, and for this purpose I have found the common greens or green-marked Norwich very reliable. I endeavour to have one or two of these always handy, and get them to nest at the same time as the Lancashires; then, if the parent birds are not feeding the young satisfactorily I transfer them during the evening, just before roosting time, to a good feeding hen. Some of the cock birds will assist greatly if left in with the hens.

Pairing Up for Breeding.

In pairing up Lancashire Canaries I would advise pairing the clear Plainhead yellow cock with the clear buff Coppy hen in the first instance, and then with the ticked buff Coppy hen. For the second set I should pair the ticked buff Coppy cock to the clear yellow Coppy hen for the first nest, and for the second with the yellow Plainhead hen; thus you will be double Coppying with one of your four hens, but see that your birds are perfect in crest to start with. You will no doubt breed a few Mopheads, but these are not to be despised, they are very valuable as stock birds. Should the crest curl cut out a little around the eyes. By a judicious use of the double Coppy birds you will be able to build up a strain that will be of great service to you. Occasionally you may get a few Plainheads from them; if you do they must be paired up with the Coppies which are deficient in crest, and they will assist greatly to fix a strain for you that is deficient in size and crest properties.

If your birds are particularly good in the points you desire, such as length and size, you will do well to inbreed a little, but do not go too close with it. One thing I should advise the beginner is not to part with his own young hens, that is, those which he has himself bred; the second season he should go in for a little double buffing, and if the birds so bred require a little toning down use a double yellow bird, but double bred birds should always be used with great discretion, as double yellow blood is likely to tone the feathers too finely. Make use also of your ticked birds by pairing two ticked birds together.

At Moulting Time.

When the moulting commences see that the cages are perfectly clean and sweet, and avoid as much as possible disturbing the birds during this period. Assist the birds with a little egg food and maw seed and a tablespoonful of the following liquor in their water: Get from the chemist ¼ oz. of hay saffron, divide this into two parts, and put one of the portions into a pint of water with a little brown sugar, and simmer it for ten minutes over a slow fire. When cold, strain, bottle off, and keep in a cool place for use.

When the birds are nearing the end of their moult give a little boiled carrot; it will help to fine their feathers and to tighten them up. At this time it will be useful to dissolve in the drinking water a piece of sulphate of iron the size of a pea. Be sure not to omit the bath, for this will help to tighten them up and get them into condition.

I hope the few hints I have been able to give in this short article will be of some assistance to beginners, and will help them on the road to success.

Three Charming Migrants.

By M. DARLOW, Attercliffe.

The owner of the three beautiful birds whose portraits appear on our front page this week, gives a short account of each, and tells how to keep them in captivity.

The Redstart.

(Ruticilla phœnicurus.)

THIS lovely bird comes to us during the second week in April, and the bird enthusiast rejoices when he sees the first Redstart of the season. It is a pleasure, indeed, in the early spring to see the Redstart with its beautiful plumage and his fiery tail quivering as he alights on a branch or an old gate post. When the birds arrive they at once begin to seek for nesting sites, usually selecting a hole in an old stone wall, especially in the parts of England where stone walls form the boundaries between fields and estates. I have, however, frequently found Redstarts nests in holes under the exposed roots of trees, sometimes under pieces of the bark of trees lying on the ground, and once in an old boot.

The eggs, six or seven in number, are blue; occasionally I found nests containing eight eggs. The nest is usually lined with hair and small feathers. The young birds resemble the females in plumage until the moult, and they do not acquire their full dress until the second or third year.

The Redstart is not a very difficult bird to keep in captivity, and the bird depicted on the front page has reared me a nest of young in captivity. For their proper keeping they must be provided with a really good class insectile food, and this must be supplemented with plenty of live "ants' eggs" in season, wasp grubs, and any small insects that may be procurable.

The Willow Warbler.

(Phylloscopus trochilus.)

NEST OF THE WILLOW WREN IN WILD ROSE BUSH.
This bird very rarely builds its nest in bushes, generally the nest is on the ground among long herbage or under a thick bush.

This dainty little Warbler arrives here in South Yorkshire during the first half of April, and departs in September. The earliest record I have of the arrival of the Willow Wren is April 4th. If on their arrival the weather is at all cold they keep in the closest of cover, and may not be observed until the warm sunshine brings them out to reward us with their pleasing song. No nature lover can take a stroll in the woods in spring without noticing, just when the birch trees are coming into full leaf, the melodious song of the Willow Wren.

Nidification commences during the last week in April, and from six to eight eggs are laid in their little domed nest on the ground, the nest being well lined with a supply of warm feathers. The eggs are white in colour, speckled with small red spots, some being more intensely marked than others.

In a fortnight the young are hatched, and then commences the hard task of the parent birds to keep their little gaping mouths well supplied with living food. It is difficult to imagine a more delightful sight than a nest of young Willow Wrens just as they are about to leave the nest.

The Willow Wren may be kept in captivity, and as food requires a good insectile mixture, a little fruit, and plenty of grubs, flies, and other live food.

The Spotted Flycatcher.

(Muscicapa grisola.)

The Spotted Flycatcher arrives here during the second week of May, although sometimes its arrival is deferred until early in June. The first one sees of the Flycatcher when taking a walk in the country will be that most likely on going down a country lane one will see a little brown bird suddenly fly in the air after a passing insect, and return immediately to the place from which he started.

Flycatchers mostly arrive in pairs, and at once settle down to nesting, usually selecting a place in the bark of a cherry tree or some other fruit tree, in the ivy on sides of walls, on trained fruit trees against walls, or in holes in old barns or quarries.

From three to five eggs are laid, the eggs being pale green in ground colour, or bluish green with claret, violet, and red mottlings. The bird has a very pleasing little song, but it is only faint compared with the songs of our best native songsters.

The Flycatcher may be kept in captivity, but its keeping is quite hopeless unless its food consists mainly of small living insects.

Tits and Coconuts.

A correspondent has kindly forwarded us the following interesting extract from the "Church Family Magazine" of Dec. 29:—

"My own Tits, about which I have written, are more tame and inquisitive than ever in the little shrubbery outside my study window. Great Tits, Blue Tits, Cole Tits—there are quite a crowd of them all day long, especially in this cold weather.

They cannot be fed with fat now—that is too much needed—but they have a coconut or two to feed from; and though they seem to be always nibbling, it is wonderful how long a coconut lasts them. I can interpret now all their little moods and whims.

The Blue Tit flutters his crest and half closes his eye in annoyance at the sight of another perched close by and waiting till he is done.

The Great Tit half spreads, half crosses his wings stiffly over his back when he is afraid of being interrupted.

The Cole Tit is the most decisive of all; he goes straight to the coconut and falls to, without any sort of consideration. But they are very peaceable on the whole, and quite willing to wait till the occupant has finished his meal, while the Sparrows and Blackbirds and Thrushes come meekly below and peck up the fragments which fall.

The Smallest Bird in Europe.

But I have had an immense delight lately. A little orange-brown bird, smaller far than and Tit, with bars of white on his wing, suddenly arrived one day, and made a quick but fearless meal. He reminded me of a traveller alighting at a wayside junction and rushing to a refreshment room. The other birds sit about after a meal and admire the view, but this little bird was bent on business. He went and examined the ground for crumbs, he picked up sharply some little bits which had fallen into a wire mat on the steps, and off he went again.

I had a good look at him one morning, and I was delighted to see that he had a tiny orange-flaming crest which he kept unfolding and folding again. He was, indeed, a Golden-crested Wren. He is not a Wren, of course, at all, but a Tit, but he generally lives in flocks in wild woods, high up in the trees, and how a single Golden-crested Wren comes to be living in my town-encircled garden is a mystery which I cannot explain, but I think he somehow brings a blessing with him.

In these laborious and troubled days, when the reading of the newspaper is the most mournful of tasks, and when the world seems so full of darkness and sorrow, from which nothing can extricate us, it is a strange comfort and delight to turn in my chair and see the little creatures so full of life and beauty, swinging on the coconut, darting to and fro, without a thought in the world except their own contentment.

I hardly know why they should be such a consolation, but it seems so delightful that they should come as my guests, even though they do not know that I entertain them, but think themselves, perhaps, both lucky and clever to have found a place where such rich fruits grow.

Nearly a Fatality.

I often, on coming in, find them exploring my room now, but that is not always a success, for they are apt to fly into the glass. Indeed, the other day a Blue Tit, who had ventured into the furthest corner of my room, flew straight into a pane and fell down stunned. I picked up the little fresh, warm body, fearing it was dead. Its tiny beak and head, and its clean-cut wings seemed amazingly small and tender.

I put it outside in the sun. Presently it began to stir a little, shake its head, unfurl its wings, and then, to my delight, it gave a little flourish, and flew straight up to a coconut and took a healthy meal. That was, I am sure, a good omen.

I wish I had the time to sit outside; I have no sort of doubt that in a very little while, if I held a coconut in my hand, they would come and feed there; they are not very shy of me. If I come close to the window they will look round and go on with their meal, or else fly a yard away and wait; but they notice a stranger at once, and will do nothing while he is by.

The Boldness of Bobbie.

The Robin is the boldest. He will come and look for a long time into the room, and then shake his head, as if to say, "Well, I can't think what goes on in there!" and then he is off to his work again. Sometimes I roll a crumb up and flick it out with my fingers, and he will pounce from a tree and catch it before it has finished rolling.

The Robin is surely the best designed of all birds, the uniform olive-coloured plumage with the ruddy waistcoat, the bright eyes, the sharp beak and slender legs, that is a real artistic conception, while I have no doubt at all that his song, so deliberate, so flavoured with a pleasant reflectiveness, is the sweetest of all the songs of birds.

Fanciers at the Front.

A London Fancier Would Like to Meet Other Bird Lovers in His Battalion.

Sir,—Having read your notes re fanciers meeting at the front, I should be very pleased to learn if there are any old fanciers in my battalion out here. Perhaps a note in your columns would enable me to know. It would be very interesting for fanciers who may be out here to be able to see each other and talk of old times together. I am glad to see by Cage Birds that the fancy in general is going on as smoothly as possible.

Canaries and War Bread.

No Fear of Its Being Harmful.

Sir,—I have duly received the loaf of war bread and the sample of flour so kindly sent by your esteemed correspondent, Mr. C. F. Flint. If this is "war bread," then all I can say is that we in Cardiff have had much darker and coarser bread during the past fortnight. There is not much to fear from this, but will it stop at this?

When I wrote my first letter I was under the impression that war bread would ultimately mean wholemeal bread, and if that were so, the consensus of opinion in our correspondence tends to prove "bran" to be a cause of looseness in birds, especially seed-shelling birds. At that I leave it, being assured that we have all arrived at a more-or-less like opinion.

The Scotch Fancy Canary.

Why it is Not More Popular.—A Question of Price.

Sir,—I should be glad if you will allow me a few lines in response to Mr. Dunlop. With regard to the Scotch and Belgian Fancy I think there is not a person in Yorkshire with a better liking than I have for these. Mr. Dunlop says this fancy is as cheap as either Norwich or Yorkshire, but so far I have failed to come across that cheap source. Some six years ago I asked a party what he could let me have a pair for, and the answer I got was that he would let me have a pair for 70s., and at that I should have to take the pair he thought to give me, no choice for my own selection of course.

At that time I gave up all my dreams of having for breeding the birds I liked and admired so much, and my fancy then fell to the Norwich. So far as I have seen, the Belgian Fancy seems a rather isolated class. I only wish they were to be obtained within the limit of working man's pocket, for then every cage I have would be Belgians from end to end. Whether they will ever come to the front I cannot say, but if ever I get hold of ten or twelve cocks and hens, they would be greatly increased with a bit of luck attached.

Mistakes in Judging.

May a Judge Alter His Awards?

Sir.—I have read with considerable interest the "alleged mistake in judging at Hamilton show," in Cage Birds of Dec. 31, for it so happens that a somewhat similar circumstance happened to myself quite recently.

The judge having finished his task, and the award tickets placed, an objection was taken as to the merits of a certain bird, and after considerable discussion the judge found he had made a mistake in his judging sheet. The prize cards were removed, and a second judging took place which altered the awards.

Having never heard of such a case, I think it would be of considerable interest to the fancy, if you will kindly give us your opinion as to whether the judge was within his jurisdiction in so doing, and if so, it seems to open a very wide gate. For if a second judging, why not a third and fourth and so on, ad lib.? In the case of a bird of position such as the Yorkshire, for instance, the awards might very well be reversed every time.

H. S. Walter.

[When a judge has once parted with his slip he has no proper right to alter it. As a matter of fact he generally has no chance of doing so, for the slip in most cases is sent to the printer directly the steward has handed it to the secretary. It is certainly a very irregular proceeding to rejudge a class on a question of merit after the cards have once been placed.—Editor, Cage Birds.]

Blakston a Back Number.

Sir,—It isn't so much what Blakston says as what is the popular opinion. Personally, I have never read Blakston, but I don't reckon he is a greater authority than some of our living writers, especially on so elementary a subject as the above. Even allowing him to be a great authority, we have to remember that his book was written before some of us were born, that the fancy doesn't stand still, and that we are sometimes obliged to jettison many principles and many ideas which were good enough 50 years ago.

The question is whether we are to be governed by popular opinion, or whether we are to assume a dictatorship. Forty years is a long experience, and I have a great respect for it; but I should have a greater respect for Mr. House if he would sometimes allow himself to be in the wrong. But he doesn't, and he is in the unenviable position of preaching to the fancy that he is right and all the other fellows are wrong.

I have no hesitation in giving my opinon that the bird in question is a marked bird. Blakston notwithstanding, and it is time we had a definite ruling on the matter.

T. Johnson.

Practical Fanciers v. Oxford Professors.

Sarcasm is not logic. Mr. Wills may be clever, but he certainly is not wise. This is not a question of infallibility, or fallibility; it is a question of fact. The bird in question is a ticked bird according to all the rules governing the fancy, and no man living will make me alter my opinion on that point. Why? Not because I am not capable of making a mistake, but because my judgment and knowledge tell me that in this matter I am right. This is no question for learned science professors, come they from Oxford or Edinburgh. I know what a ticked bird is according to all known rules of the fancy, and therefore I know that this bird of Messrs. Stubbs is ticked, and not marked. In exactly the same way I know that A is A, and not B, and no man could convince me otherwise.

I have not yet reached that stage when I am too old to learn, but I am too old to change my opinions at the dictates of those who know not what they teach, or those who, being interested, argue to support their own interests be they right or wrong. At Port Talbot I was the disinterested party. I knew neither the bird nor who owned it, but I did know it was not in its right class, and therefore I "wrong classed" it. I had a duty to perform, and I did it.

If instead of making a direct personal attack upon myself Mr. Wills had tried to prove I was either right or wrong, he would have shown more wisdom than he has. We want no Oxford or Edinburgh professors in this matter, but the practical men of the fancy, and Mr. Wills' sarcasm will not help to solve the matter.

Messrs. Silk and Martin are both as confident as myself. Mr. Wills should turn the fountains of his sarcasm on to them, but I have faith enough in the common sense of the fancy to know that it will prefer their logic to Mr. Wills' sarcasm. They have tried to help the fancy to a decision, Mr. Wills has not.

C. A. House.

How Trouble Might Have Been Avoided.

Sir,—I see that Mr. F. J. Martin has introduced my name into this discussion, and asks me, as secretary of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club, to wake it up. Personally I think, like the slumbering dog, it has one eye open, and had the show heeded our silent warning there would have been no unpleasantness.

Still, Mr. Martin can raise the question if he thinks necessary at our next meeting. He has only to comply with Rule 14, and I shall be happy to do my part. There is nothing like time present, and if he sends the press a copy of his suggested rule it can be fully discussed before the meeting. We shall then get a census of opinion, and perhaps members of the other specialist clubs will bring the new rule before their societies. But even granted that the rule is adopted by all the specialist clubs, will the matter be finally settled? No. All shows are not under specialist club rules, and if not then the judge will be placed in Mr. House's awkward position.

I do not think I have seen Messrs. Stubbs' bird, but from what I understand it has a grizzle saddle. Now a grizzle saddle is not a "technical mark," but the bird is certainly marked, and if the extent of the marking be larger than a sixpence I think it should go in the marked class. Anything less I should call a tick, no matter whether it was on the body, eye, wing or tail, so long as there was only one spot. Two spots, however small, and wherever placed, should make a marked bird. This is, I think, a simple ruling, but I know Mr. Martin will not accept this, because he does not agree with me as to the markings of one of my own birds. It also does not agree with the Yorkshire ruling, as there are technical marks in this variety, and herein lies the difficulty.

As I have said, the show did not heed the silent warning of our club. It should be unnecessary for me to remind Mr. Martin that our Rule 10 suggests a classification which is beyond dispute. The eight classes suggested should be ample. In one class we have "Clear and invisible tick," and another "Ticked, marked or variegated." Had this classification been adopted Messrs. Stubbs would not have been left in the cold. Is not this the solution of the difficulty? I think so. It is very easy to make a rule as to a tick, but hard, and even at times impossible, to determine it. I know it is rather hard sometimes on a variegated to meet a ticked, but we all start off the same line, and after all it should be more a question of type than marking. That the most typical bird should win and that the judge should not be hampered with an indefinite classification or unnecessary rules are the aims of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club. Not much asleep, eh?

Frank Cole,
Hon. Sec.

The Owners Still Unconvinced.

Sir,—Mr. House quotes Blakston to support his action for wrong classing our bird at Port Talbot. Frankly speaking, we do not accept Blakston as an authority. Why should we? Are we to go back into the dark ages to see if we are doing the right thing to-day? Have our judges of to-day got to refer back to Blakston to see what a definition of a tick should be? Do the Norwich Clubs to-day accept Blakston's definition of what a ticked bird should be, and are we to take it for granted that Blakston's authority is greater than that of our leading men of to-day? Mr. House, it seems, would have us to believe so, and believes so himself.

We ask him why he should go to all the trouble of writing a book himself when we have only to get Blakston's book to know all we want to know. Mr. House says he may be old fashioned; with this we heartily agree, but we ourselves don't want to be old fashioned. We are living to-day, not 50 years ago, and, this being so, we would much rather leave it to our present-day judges' decision to know what in their opinion should constitute a tick. And they have given us their answer. The Norwich Clubs have no rule on this matter, which is a great pity, but it is generally accepted that a tick should be no larger than a sixpence on an otherwise clear body. The Birmingham and Leicester schedules clearly give this in their rules, and it would have been interesting to see what Mr. House would have done had he been judging at these shows.

The bird in question has again been put on the bench, this time at Porth, under Mr. Robson. He was allowed to stand, and we are perfectly sure that had Mr. Robson thought the bird was only a ticked bird he would have done the same as Mr. House did. For three years the bird has been accepted as a marked bird, and we are perfectly satisfied that that is what he is. How a bird that is marked all over his back and part of his wings can be called a ticked bird passes our comprehension.

Just recently we have had several fanciers call in to see the bird, amongst whom are fanciers with forty years' experience of breeding Canaries. After an examination of the bird they all came to the conclusion that he cannot be shown as a ticked. Mr. Silk now comes into the discussion, and agrees with Mr. House, which is only to be expected, but instead of making matters better he has made them worse. Blakston says the markings are to be grey or grizzly. Mr. Silk says it does not matter how heavy the tickings are, and very shortly we shall be having some heavy variegated birds in the ticked class. At the same time Mr. Silk is not in a position to give us his views of what a ticked bird should be. We none of us are individually. Mr. House sets himself upon a pedestal, and demands in an imperative voice, "Who is the man that shall decide whether I am right or wrong?" We are small indeed compared to such men as this. Like Nelson, he says, our judges go to work with one eye shut; but they can see a tick from a mark. Blakston is not a cage bird law, at least not with the Norwich clubs, and judges of to-day are not expected to go back to between 30 or 40 years ago to see what one man said as to what a tick should be. They have their own opinion, and they act accordingly. They do not want to be old fashioned; they judge the birds as they are to-day, not as they were forty years ago. The Norwich Canary clubs should take the matter in hand and have in their rules book what a tick should be, but at the same time they must be careful how they bring in the definition of a tick, or there will always be trouble. Mr. Martin says he is quite satisfied from what he has been told that the bird is a ticked bird. What an easily satisfied man he must be. He has only got to be told about a thing to know whether it is right or wrong. What is Blakston to such men as this?

Stubbs Bros.

The Judging at Whitehaven Show.

The Hon. Sec. Replies to a Criticism.

Sir,—Kindly permit me space to answer the letter of Messrs. Cook and Adams in Cage Birds of Dec. 30.

The label attached to the cage made no difference; the bird with the 1st prize card won the 1st prize, and is the same bird which has won 1st and 2nd in full prize money classes. The bird with the figure 1 on the cage label was 1st at Cleator Moor, in a class of seven, its one and only win.

As to the delay in the special cards Messrs. Cook and Adams know that I told them that if there was a mistake we would see to it when the judge came in again, and we did. I should have thought that a man like Mr. Cook would know that the decision of the judge is final, except in the case of fraud.

As to the special, there was no special for best bird, it was for most points, and it was made a local prize at the donor's request.

As to the British birds, anyone knows that if they will not live on plain canary seed they will not live on sawdust. Birds with mixed seed got judged.

J. McLaughlin.

Judge Acted Upon Distinct Instructions.

Sir,—As judge of the Borders and British birds at this show, and in fairness to myself, I beg to say that upon arriving at the show room my attention was drawn by the secretary to their rule in schedule which stated that cages had to have canary seed only inside. He said that this rule had to be adhered to, and I pointed out to him and others of the committee that it would cause trouble, etc., but their instructions were to stick to the rule. When British were mentioned I was told to stick to seeds.

I admit missing at least one cage with a small amount of husks, etc., amongst the seed; this bird had 2nd prize, otherwise I consider this bird eligible for its class.

On returning to the show room for a catalogue, near to train time, I was accosted by a gentleman, who, I presume, to be of Messrs. Cook and Adams, respecting his bird, whose cage tab had a mark upon it; he asked a civil question and got a civil answer from me, but the secretary and he were having words at the time, so I went and got my catalogue, as my time then was limited.

In conclusion, for this finishes so far as I am concerned, let me say that I may have made mistakes, especially under the conditions prevailing, and no one regrets more than I the carrying out of this vexing rule, some good birds having to be set back, which damped any little pleasure I might have had in this event.

In Aid of a Stricken Roller Fancier.

More than Half the Necessary Amount Subscribed.

Sir,—Many thanks for the reminder in Cage Birds this week re the appeal for Mr. T. Simpson. I am pleased to inform you that we have received up to Dec. 30th from friends and Roller fanciers the following amounts:—From the Bishop of Wakefield, £1; Mrs. F. Thompson, £1; Misses E. Mackie, £1; Lady C. M. Gaskell, 10s.; Mrs. Gaskell, 10s.; Rev. A. G. Whaley (Vicar), 10s.; Canon Phipps, 10s.; Hon. Sec. P.R. C.C., Mr. J. T. Smith, 5s.; J. Hardman, 1s.; J. Farrimond, 2s. 6d.; F. Oldroyd, 2s.; Leeds R.C.C. per F. Heaton, 12s.; G. Broadbent, 2s. 6d.; G. Hemingway, 2s.; A. Clarke, 2s.; M. Jacquemin, 2s. 6d.; total, £6 11s. 6d.

H. Roebuck.

72, New Brunswick Street, Thorne's Lane,
Wakefield.

[With the half-crown sent to us by Mr. Shepley, as acknowledged last week, the money at present subscribed amounts to £6 14s., and as the self propelling car so urgently needed can be purchased for about £10, there remains less than £4 to be raised. Those who will help in this necessitous case may either send their donations to Mr. Roebuck as above, or to our office. In either case they will be acknowledged in our columns.—Ed. Cage Birds.]

Since the above letter was in type we have received 5s. from Messrs. Stubbs Bros., and 2s. 6d. from Mr. J. Tomlinson, bringing the total to £7 1s. 6d.

A Bird Catching Problem.

SIR,—Would Mr. Arthur Burrows, who wrote the letter headed "British Birds scarce in the Markets" in CAGE BIRDS of Dec. 30, be kind enough to describe an outfit suitable for an amateur who would like to catch a few Linnets and Chaffinches; if he would recommend clap or side nets, and the size, etc., of same. Any information on the subject would be appreciated.

BIRDLET.

The Everlasting Novice Question

A Ruling Body Again Suggested.

SIR,—I would like to make a few remarks on the novice question. I believe there is only one method of dealing with this and many others concerning the bird fancy. What we need is a National Bird Fanciers' Club on the same lines as other fancies, such as dogs, pigeons, etc. Then the winners would be penalised as well as their owners, as all winning birds would be registered.

Some may say this is too big a thing, but I say it is not as big as it looks; all that is needed is the clubbing together of our leading fanciers and judges, to draw up rules and standards according to variety, exhibitors to pay a small annual subscription, and clubs running open shows to adopt such rules. Others may say we have our specialist clubs. This is so, and they could remain to act as sub-committees. Take, for instance, my own case, I am a member of two of these clubs (same variety) and I have exhibited successfully under both, but their rules so differ that I really don't know how I stand. However, I hope that you, Mr. Editor, will use your influence in this matter, and also that other readers will give us their views, for I am only now

UNFLIGHTED.

A Disclaimer and an Explanation.

SIR,—There is an inwardness and a suggestiveness in the letter of your correspondent Mr. C. F. Winson which I cannot allow to go unchallenged. He says: "I would like to say to him (Rev. C. B. Jolliffe) that we in the Colonies always felt that the breeders of England considered that anything was good enough for export, but we never expected a parson to be so brutally candid over it." He further says that if the co-operative society of which my article dealt was to be "a co-operative bird society in order that he (Rev. C. B. Jolliffe) and others may dispose of their weedy birds incognito, for export, I hope," etc.

I would ask him to read my article again, and if I have suggested any such thing I am quite willing to send you the sum of £2 to be given to any charitable object he chooses. I am at this moment pressed beyond measure with professional duties and family bereavements, and this article must be from four to six months old, so that I cannot spare time to go over the argument again just now. Moreover, if he can produce any fancier, male or female, to whom I have ever exported a feather I am quite willing to give £5 for every such bird. Again, I am willing to give £5 for any and every Canary I have ever sold to a dealer.

I am informed that two unflighted hens I sold to a fancier were this year re-sold at an enhanced price and sent to America, and, whilst I am not adverse to exporting, if any should write me direct, I beg to wholeheartedly protest against an insinuation wholly unjust to one who is constantly fighting for a clean, honest, and straightforward transaction in every department of the fancy.

If in the several years I have been breeding and exhibiting any can accuse me, and prove the accusation, of any unworthy and dishonest practice I am quite willing for such exposure to appear in your columns. Your correspondent and I are total strangers to each other, so that I am sure he has no personal charge to make.

(REV.) C. B. JOLLIFFE.

In fairness to our esteemed correspondent we are of course publishing his letter as received. We are very sorry to find that Mr. Jolliffe has taken the remarks of our Natal correspondent as being of a personal nature, and we are sure that the writer of the letter will, upon seeing Mr. Jolliffe's answer, reply that in making a general statement he had no intention of reflecting upon any individual.

The paragraph which appeared in one of the instalments of Mr. Jolliffe's article, and which seems to have caused all the trouble read as follows:—

My suggestion is that the Society gather all the members' surplus and unsaleable stock, any time after Christmas, and buy each bird at a price, and then offer them to the many advertisers who are willing to take surplus stock at from 24s. per dozen up to £1 per pair "for export"! They would go without fear that your good name would be written on a label and tied to each bird's leg.

We took it that Mr. Winson's remarks were a fair criticism of this, and if we had had the slightest suspicion that a personal slur could have been read into the letter we should not have allowed its publication. As it is we unreservedly express our regret that words have been permitted to appear which have given offence to so widely respected a bird-lover as the Rev. C. B. Jolliffe.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.

Wild Birds and Protection Orders.

Birds that Prefer Captivity.

SIR,—I was much interested in your reply to H. Brown under "General Queries" in this week's CAGE BIRDS. Presumably he does not think it right to keep any birds in captivity, but perhaps he has not given the matter consideration from a bird lover's standpoint. There is not the slightest doubt that a bird in captivity is generally as happy as those who have their liberty, whilst there is also no doubt that in captivity they enjoy a much longer life.

Wild birds do not have quite such an easy time of it as some of us might be inclined to think; they are in constant fear of their lives owing to other birds of prey, and animals too, who get their living by devouring the flesh of wild birds. Naturally, with an increase of the smaller seed eating and soft billed birds, there would be an increase in the varieties which live on them, to say nothing of the ravages of farmer's crops. It would, I think, be more to the point if there could be a law passed that no birds should be caged in such cages as are used by some (who do not know any better) for keeping such birds as Chaffinches and Linnets in, and in which their life consists of hopping from perch to perch, a distance of a few inches at the most. A few years back I kept a Linnet in a cage by himself, which measured 2ft. 6in. by 2ft. 11in., and he was always singing, and always looked in the pink of health.

As for proof that wild birds do not seem to object to a captive life, I once caught a Greenfinch hen with a trap cage, and, after keeping her a few days as a call bird. I opened the door of the trap cage so that she could fly out in the garden, which she did, and in less than five minutes she was caught again in the same trap cage. I took her out and let her go, but she would not leave the garden, and sat in the tree in a mopy condition for a few minutes, and came back and got caught again, so I decided to keep her until the better weather came, and then I let her go. I also once lost a Goldfinch by accidentally leaving the cage door open when the cage was hanging in the garden on a wall. He flew out and about the garden for over an hour, and then returned to his cage for food. When I tried to shut him in he flew out again, so I tied a piece of black cotton to the door, and after waiting some time he came back, and I pulled the door to, and made him captive and I had him for some years after that.

DUMFRIES. S. OF SCOTLAND.

Annual general meeting, Fountain Cafe Hotel, President, Mr. W. Crosbie, chair, and a large number present. The show and club secretaries gave their report of the working of the club and the result of the show. The chairman complimented the club on the splendid result they had had with a show in such stressful times, the balance they had to hand to the war funds being £8 7s. Agreed to allocate it as follows: Maxwelltown Red Cross Hospital, £4; Dumfries do., £2 7s.; Belgian Children's Fund, £2; total, £8 7s.

The show was one of the best held since the formation of the club, both for quantity and quality, and the competition was so keen that the judges were on their mettle in awarding the prizes. The thanks of the Society are tendered to the ladies and gentlemen who so handsomely supported the club by special prizes, subscriptions, etc., and especially to Messrs. Dunbar, Pattie and Gibson, who have given their hall free of charge each year for the annual exhibition.

ROUND THE SHOWS.

LARKHALL.

Larkhall C.B.A. held its 2nd open Red Cross Show in Drill Hall, Larkhall, Dec. 15, 16. Entries did not come up to expectation, no doubt owing to the fact that other Red Cross shows were being held on same date, also the uncertainty of railway facilities at present. Pres. Rundell and Sec. McGregor, along with a hard-working committee, had everything well in hand, and the show was carried out with great credit to everyone concerned. The birds forward included the very cream of the Fancy, and in many classes each of the first three birds was fit to top a class at most shows. It was regrettable to learn that several lots of birds were delivered too late for competition—hard lines on the exhibitors. Special winners were:—Borders, best in section and open, B.F.C.C. medal, J. Lowerson, with a clear buff cock. Novice B.F.C.C. medal, W. B. Gillies, yell. cinn. hen. Norwich, best in section, J. Braidwood, an unflig. buff cock. S.P.C. medal for best cock, A. Harris, an unflig. yellow hen. S.P.C. medal best hen, J. Gallacher, unflig. buff hen. Best Mule or Hybrid, R. Heggie, with his famous light Greenie Mule. Best Hardbill, W. N. Linton, with his moulted Grecnie. The judges were: Borders, Dan Hamilton (Hamilton); Norwich, T. Morrison (Burnbank); Yorks. Wm. Priest (Partick); and British, etc., Sykes (Musselburgh). Their awards seemed to give satisfaction, as grumbling was conspicuous by its absence.

IRVINE.

Annual show, Good Templars' Hall, Dec. 16; entries totalled 439. The hall is most suitable for a bird show, being nicely lighted on all sides and free from draughts. This society is fortunate in having such a band of willing workers, foremost among them being the worthy Pres., Mr. W. S. Clark. The Sec., Mr. Jas. Paterson, is an ideal man for the post, being here, there and everywhere, and had a thorough grip of the business throughout the show. The feature of the show was a big muster of Borders, and some gems were on view. A regular swell was the medal winner, a most perfect even marked cock, the property of W. S. Wilson. The Green medal was won by Mr. E. Showler's buff green cock. The Novice medal went to Mr. G. Raeside with a beautiful head tkd. hen, a very typical and jaunty lady. Scots Fancies were poorly represented, and the society would be well advised to alter the wording of their schedule to include variegated in lieu of foul; this we understand to be the reason of such a poor entry in this section. The judges got through their duties in good time, and their awards were well received. Borders, J. Hyslop and R. Lambie; Norwich and British, A. Chalmers.

MARDY F.S.

Show held at Workmen's Institute, Dec. 14. Our section was staged in the Lesser Hall, one of the best rooms we have yet seen for a show, being well lighted and free from draughts. The exhibits were nicely staged in tiers, and looked very comfortable. Mr. H. Greaves had charge, and carried out his duties admirably, the birds being staged and judging commenced early. The Sec., Mr. D. D. Jones, is an ideal official, carrying out his many duties in a very obliging manner, and we are sure his efforts are greatly appreciated by the society and exhibitors alike. Mr. T. L. Castree judged.

WIGAN ROLLER C.C.

133 BIRDS IN THE NOVICE CLASS.

Second annual open exhibition, 15 and 16 Dec., in the Assembly Rooms, Old Arcade, Wigan. These rooms afford lofty, well-lighted, spacious premises, well adapted for a contest; in fact, one of the best it has been our good fortune to visit. Yet another surprise awaited us in the number of fanciers in the show room during the evening before the show. In numbers they were quite equal to the attendance one may see at some fixtures during the opening night. Mr. P. Greenall, the hon. sec., assisted by a well-chosen staff of enthusiastic helpers, had the birds unpacked, staged, and everything in apple-pie order quite early. The prominence given to advertising this fixture in CAGE BIRDS, together with an elaborate array of special prizes, resulted in the fine number of 331 entries, and an extra judge (Mr. Wareing) was called upon to assist. In Champion young birds and Novice young birds the prize money was 12/-, 10/-, 8/-, 6/-, 4/-, and 2/-, and in addition each class had 14 special prizes. In Champion old birds, Amateur and Novice any age, the prize money was 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, and 2/-; and in classes 3 and 4 six specials were allotted to each class, while class 5 had nine specials. Medals by the Provincial Society were given to their members in classes 1 and 2. There was no lack of good, well-lighted, and heated judging rooms, and with each judge being allocated to a separate room, and the birds now being strong in song, the judging went on apace. Amongst the numerous visitors were fanciers from Leeds, Bacup, Chester, Swinton, Manchester, and Bolton, and many were accompanied by their wives. In passing, a word of praise should be accorded to the Secretary's wife, Mrs. Greenall, who did a great deal of "spade" work connected with the clerical side, also to Mr. Vernon, who interested himself in the judges' welfare.

FELINFOEL F.S,

Annual open show held at Public Hall, Dec. 16. Our section was neatly staged in a separate room, and their wants well attended to. Judging started promptly, and awards were up in good time. The Chairman, Mr. J. Richards, and Treasurer, Mr. M. L. Morris, are keen fanciers, and much of the success of the show is due to their efforts. The Secretary, Mr. Thomas J. Davies, and his assistant, Mr. P. Jenkins, carried out their duties admirably, and are both most courteous and obliging officials. Mr. W. J. Harry judged.

CANARY QUERIES

SEEMS OUT OF BREATH.

E. N. (Pelton).—The bird is probably run down and somewhat anæmic from the moult. Try the following treatment for a month, and if not then quite well write again and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further. First of all see that it is not exposed to direct cold draughts, and do not hang it near or over burning lights in the evenings nor high up near the ceiling. Keep it in a nice, bright, and fairly warm place, and see that the temperature is fairly equable. Add a fourth part of summer rape to the canary seed as a staple diet, and in addition give separately every second day a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana, boiled carrot, or sweet apple, giving preference to them in the order named, and also a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, white millet, and half a part each of maw and gold of pleasure. Every second day for a week in the drinking water add ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence; and after this give instead 20 drops of Chemical Food two days in every three for a fortnight.

MITE INFESTED CAGE.

Novice.—When a cage is badly infested, and of such a size as will allow of it, the best method of dealing with it is to plunge it bodily for a few minutes in a copper of boiling water. Then dry, and, if necessary, re-paint or enamel, first filling all crevices or open cracks with soft putty, and allowing the paint, or whatever material is used, to dry thoroughly before reintroducing the bird. Whilst the cage is undergoing these operations, the place where it has hung should be examined and thoroughly dealt with in whatever way is most applicable to eradicate any trace of the pest. After the bird is returned, the cage should be touched up at the ends of the perches, joints of door, and any similar harbour, at least once a week for a few weeks with a small camel hair brush dipped in paraffin or some other insecticide to be more sure of preventing the return of the pest in a short time. To deal with cages not manageable by this method, the same general plan will suffice, save that the scalding should be replaced by a thorough cleaning and scraping out of all open joints or crevices, and then saturating them with a solution of camphor in paraffin or turpentine, working it well into the cracks with a small paint brush. Then set aside to dry, and repeat the process next day before giving the cage the finishing touch.

SOFT CONDITION.

Ajax.—Keep the birds in a fairly equable temperature, which need not necessarily be a very warm one. A quite moderate or cool temperature that is fairly steady day and night is infinitely preferable to one which is frequently hanging up and down the scale from "summer heat" to "freezing point." It is the latter kind of condition that plays havoc with Canaries rather than the lack of applied heat. Under judicious management the latter is by no means an essential adjunct to Canary rearing. You might add a morsel of bread and milk dusted with soft sugar to the dietary every second day for a week or fortnight, and three times a week give a morsel of banana or boiled carrot. Also dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry; add thirty drops of syrup of buckthorn, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water every second day for a fortnight; or you may cease giving it sooner if the birds appear in sufficiently hard condition.

ABNORMAL FEATHERS.

Buff Norwich.—You might try touching the substance every fourth day, until it has been done four times, with a feather dipped in tincture of iodine, and see if that will cause the lumps to be absorbed. If it does not, then I am afraid there is no other remedy but excision, by carefully slitting the skin and removing the accumulated matter, and this is a job which is best done by a trained hand, such as a veterinary, or your medical man. If you use the bird for breeding you should certainly not mate her with one nearly related as, considering the history of the male parent, it is by no means unlikely that the predisposition to the trouble may become a congenital trait which it would be difficult to combat once it got established.

MAKES WHEEZING NOISE.

Bonnie Doon.—Sorry, I cannot at the moment lay hands on my previous reply, and you give me no clue as to the treatment then advised. But the symptoms are suggestive of the bird being exposed either to irritating fumes, such as may arise from being kept too near burning lights, smoky fires, or too near the ceiling, or from extremes of heat and cold. See that either or all of these predisposing causes are eliminated, and the bird kept in a fairly equable temperature, not necessarily overheated, nor yet on the chilly side. Try what the following will do for it in the next month or so. In addition to the staple seed diet, give twice a week a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, and on two other days give a morsel of banana. Get a chemist to mix you one drachm each of oxymel of squills, specacuanha wine tincture of lobelia and liquid extract of liquorce, and add five grains of iodide of potassium, and give ten drops of this mixture in each two tablespoonfuls of the drinking water every second day for a fortnight. After this you may stop this mixture and give instead 20 drops of chemical food in the water every second day for another fortnight. It would also help matters if you kept a little of the paste advised to "A.B.C., Bath," in last issue, stuck in the wires for two or three weeks, for it to peck at when it likes. If these symptoms do not entirely disappear before the breeding season comes round, I doubt the advisability of breeding with it again.

SUFFER FROM COLD.

Roller.—Judging from your description, I should say that the birds affected are, from some cause, rather abnormally sensitive to cold, and as these are so much in the minority it seems not quite the wisest couse to go out of the way to set up any system of artificial heating on their account, especially as your room does not seem to be an exceptionally cold one by any means. These particular specimens may perhaps have been kept in song boxes for the most part before you got them, and if you now keep them in open cages that would account in a large measure for their susceptibility, or, on the other hand, they may be of somewhat delicate constitution. In either case it would be better to remove them to a rather warmer room until the weather becomes milder in the spring, or even until you were ready to mate them than to run the risk of enervating all the rest of your stock. Possibly, if you kept these specimens in song boxes in a cosy part of the ordinary bird-room this susceptibility would vanish. Anyway, if you prefer to slightly heat the room and have gas laid on in the house, a small portable hot-water coil heated with an atmospheric burner would be about the best and most convenient thing for you. You will, I think, often see this appliance advertised in our columns. A staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape, instead of the proportions you now use, would probably help these susceptible specimens to pull themselves together better.

NORWICH COCK AILING.

W. A. C.—I should imagine the bird has been much exposed to the wretched vagaries of weather we have had of late, or something very similar in the way of extreme fluctuations or direct draughts. All such predisposing causes must now be removed before you can hope for any treatment to be of any avail. See that it is kept in a fairly warm place, and that the temperature is fairly equable, and strictly avoid direct draughts and exposure to the fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and keep a light cover thrown over the cage until the feathers have quite ceased dropping. Every second day, in addition to the staple seed diet, give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and dusted with soft sugar, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana. In the water add 20 drops of chemical food two days in every three until the moulting stops, and then you may remove the cover and treat the bird the same as advised to "Bonnie Doon" in this issue, for a month, using the mixture named in that reply all through this part of the treatment. You may also with advantage keep a morsel of the paste advised to "A.B.C., Bath," in last issue, stuck in the wires for the next month or so.

MATE FOR YORKSHIRE.

W. L.—As you say the cock is an even-marked bird, I take it that it has more than one dark flight, and it would have been better to have mentioned how many, or approximately so, it had in each wing, or at least, to have said whether it is lightly or heavily marked. But you cannot go far wrong in mating the bird to a hen from a green and even-marked strain which is ticked or very lightly marked on one or both eyes and the body, otherwise quite clear. If, however, the cock has only one or two dark flights, which should be the inner secondarics, in each wing you may use a hen which is slightly ticked on the inner secondaries in addition to the marks or ticks on the eyes. From these you will stand a very fair chance of getting a fair proportion of marked birds, with some useful ticked, and possibly a few clear specimens. You should, of course, see to it that the hird also compensates as far as possible any distinct failings of its prospective mate, and does not possess the same faults, in order to make as perfect a match as possible, and the colour, yellow or buff, must be the opposite of the cock.

A BRASS BIRD CAGE.

Island.—The cage you describe is just one of the usual fancy cages in which a singing Roller is often kept hanging in some such unsuitable place as a window recess, or suspended from the ceiling. It is, I take it, open wire all round. So far as the size is concerned, it will do nicely for a single Roller, kept as a songster, provided sufficient attention is given to it, to keep the floor in a nice clean condition, and well strewn with clean gritty sand. Do not hang it in a window, nor keep it in a position where it will be exposed to cold, cutting draughts between doors or windows, nor near or over burning lights in the evenings. The best position for such cages is on a table or stand in a bright place in a well-ventilated room, but void of draughts, and not higher than the level of burning lights in the evenings. It is also well to see that the wires are kept dry, by wiping them after the bird has been bathing, and not to form the habit of sticking moist things between them for the bird to peck at, as by so doing there is a risk of the moisture forming verdigris on the brass wires which would be poisonous if the bird picked it off. These are only a portion of the objections to these fancy open-wire brass cages, and although it is quite possible to keep birds in them for years without any ill-effect, it does not remove the fact that the risk is always there and a well-made box cage is far preferable for the welfare of the hird.

LOSS OF PLUMAGE.

H. Latchford.—You do not give sufficient particulars to enable me to form any definite idea as to what is wrong. You should have given me some idea of the probable age of the bird, how it is kept, if it bathes much or at all, and if it is troubled with insect pests. The sample of seed you sent, though not really bad, would be better with a small proportion of good sound hemp added to it, and then used as a seed mixture for occasional use as a tit-bit than as a staple diet. Try a month of the following treatment and then report progress and give the fullest particulars you can, referring to this reply, and I will advise you further if necessary. As staple diet give a plain mixture of three parts canary seed to one part summer rape—the small reddish-brown seed, not the large blackish seed like that in the mixture you are now using. In addition to this give separately every third day half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture you are now using with about the same proportion of hemp added to it as there is rape. On the intervening days give first a morsel of banana, boiled or raw carrot, sweet apple, or a morsel of some green salad if you can get the latter quite free from frost and snow, and without any decayed portions, and next a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, lightly dusted with flour of sulphur and then sprinkled with soft sugar. In the drinking water every third day for a fortnight add ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, then miss a week, and repeat it for another fortnight. Examine the cage thoroughly for the presence of red mites, and if any are found at once adopt the necessary steps to eradicate them as you will have seen described frequently in this column. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and allow the bird to bathe twice a week if it will do so, but always offer the hath this time of year in the early part of the day and choose the wildest days for offering it.

A CONUNDRUM.

H. V. T.—Let me refer you to the reply to "Anxious" in last issue, which applies precisely to your case, except that the restrictions in your own case are applied definitely to Canaries. It is a conundrum which I will not attempt to solve, and I am afraid I shall have to leave you to decide for yourself which system you adopt in the feeding of young Canaries—the old and tried, or this new theory, which has been advised you. With the restrictions named, you will still have hemp, rape, and inga, and such like oily seeds as a stand-by, but little else that I can see, with green stuff as a supplement, and although I am quite sure that there is the possibility of rearing some youngsters on such lines, I am also convinced that anyone using the orthodox method of to-day would be able to give you 50 per cent. as a handicap and win at a jog-trot. Given good normally healthy stock birds, I have yet to discover a better all-round method of management than that you will find given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and this is what I would still advise for you so long as you want only really practical results, leaving these fanciful experiments in the curious for times when you are not so anxious whether there are any material results or not. I do not presume to make any post-mortem exams. in any case, and not having even seen your birds it would be invidious for me to attempt to criticise the conclusions of one who had. But if you wish to get a good plain understanding how septic fever may arise from errors of dietary you should get Dr. Clarke's brochure on the subject, entitled "Septic Fever," which our Manager would send you for 7d., post free. As regards the meaning of the words you underlined, it is, may I say, very obvious, viz., that all notions of others about the dieting of Canaries and the developments made in modern times are so much waste of time. And yet we have succeeded very well with them.

SMALL BIRDS FOR AVIARY.

L. W. R. You cannot do better than confine yourself to seed-eating birds for your aviary. I would suggest the following pairs: Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll and Greenfinch, and if your aviary is a suitable one, there is just a chance of four pairs out of the six going to nest. The doubtful ones are the Bullfinches and Siskins, but even those will sometimes build and lay, in fact the Bullfinch hen is used a good deal by Hybrid breeders, but unfortunately her rightful partner is seldom of much use in confinement. I would not recommend Blue Tits for a mixed collection, they would be far more trouble than any of the others, and would probably brain any young ones that were hatched. You do not tell me the size of your aviary, but, any way, do not overcrowd, have too few rather than too many.

GOLDFINCHES DOING BADLY.

Cymro Bach.—It appears to me there is something wrong with your treatment of your Finches, possibly it is the inferior quality of the seed you are using; you should have sent a sample for examination, and though you state the names of the seeds you say nothing about the proportions. Carefully examine your hemp, crack a few seeds and see if the kernel is white and the shell well filled; should it be discoloured discard it, and procure some from a different source. Discontinue the linseed and niger, get some good teazle, and make up the following stock mixture: Teazle and canary three parts of each, hemp two parts, sunflower and summer rape half part of each. Then you should procure a packet of genuine wild seed mixture, or, failing that, buy a little maw, dandelion, thistle, sesame, and gold of pleasure, and give a teaspoonful of the mixture every other day. I would also advise you to soak a little hemp and teazle, and offer a teaspoonful daily. Put a little in a cup, and pour on it boiling water, let it stand for an hour, when strain off and rub in a cloth. Go to the chemist and get sixpennyworth of iron and quinine, and put three drops in two tablespoonfuls of water, fresh daily; give this for four days, then miss a couple of days and repeat. Keep the birds fairly warm, do not let them bathe until they are somewhat better. Give a spray of green food daily, see that it is quite free from frost.

FEEDING A MIXED COLLECTION.

T. B. M., Leeds.—As your collection contains Buntings, I would advise you to have one hopper filled with canary seed only, and another one with equal parts of canary, teazle and rape. All the other seeds you mention should be given in small quantities every other day; for this purpose make up the following mixture: Hemp two parts, niger and maw one part each, and linseed half part. Then if you can procure a packet of genuine wild seed mixture, give a spoonful to every two birds on the days you do not give the hemp mixture. Sunflower seed may be given daily. Continue the green food and apple, and occasionally offer a dish of soaked rape and teazle. (2) The question as to what is the best food for Larks is a rather difficult one, as there are many recipes for Lark food. I have kept them myself in the best of health and song on insectile food as used for Warblers, made crumbly moist with scraped carrot, boiled potato, or new milk. The first recipe given in the Nutshell Booklet on the Skylark is a good one, and I know of several Lark keepers who use it. I would advise you to send for this book; in it you will find several methods of feeding, besides other useful information. Our Manager will send it you post free for three stamps.

KEEPING FRESH CAUGHT BULLFINCHES.

Selling Plater.—When first caught they should be put in separate cages if you have enough, and stood in a quiet corner of the bird room. Food and water should be placed inside the cages. The former should consist of hemp, teazle, rape, canary, and a little maw seed, also a few cracked sunflower seeds. Do not put these in a seed box, but scatter them on the floor; for the first few days supply them with any of the seeds they appear to like, also a little soaked rape and teazle. You can also offer a spray of shepherd's purse and privet berries. Notice if they drink the water, if not, you can sometimes manage to give them a drop or so on the point of a stick. Get the Nutshell booklet on the Bullfinch, this will assist you.

CAGE OR AVIARY.

H. V. T.—If you can manage it I would advise you to conduct your breeding operations in cages, using your recess for the young birds. If you are desirous of breeding more Mules than Canaries, place two hens and the Goldfinch in one of the double breeders, and work him with these two during the season. Should the hens come on to nest before he is ready, you can run the cock Canary with them for a first round. Pair the Linnet up with one hen, and keep them together all the season (that is, of course, if he does not interfere with the eggs), as you can seldom run a Linnet with more than one hen. As you say, Greenfinch Mules, unless exceptionally good ones, are not in much demand. I think you are more likely to be successful breeding in cages, as Finches are sometimes very destructive when flying loose, and you are not able to manage them quite so nicely.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

DIET FOR RED-CRESTED CARDINAL.

T. Huxtable.—This is not difficult, as the main dietary will consist of seed—canary and white millet, with a dash of hemp and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed together. Ripe fruit daily, also green food, and one or two live insects per diem. Of course, the other cage essentials must be provided, viz., grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. They are active birds and will be the better for a roomy cage, sufficiently long that the bird cannot jump from perch to perch, but must use its wings. In the summer time it will appreciate a small turf, similar to a Lark's turf, and it will keep the bird actively and healthily occupied in picking about among the grass, securing therefrom many small insects and wild seeds. The Red-Crest usually needs no inducement to take sweet apple and banana when it is offered. It is a hardy species, but, nevertheless, must not be subjected to draught. At the same time it must get light and air.

COCKATOO WELL, BUT THIN.

E. M. Cobden.—Give it a piece of bread thinly spread with cod liver oil emulsion once or twice daily. Once a week put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in its drinking water, and twice a week well colour drinking water with chemical food. Try a separate tin of the following seeds for it, side by side with the mixture it is now taking: two parts white millet, and one part each sunflower and white oats. If it will take them it can have any of the following in reason: shelled nuts, biscuits, ripe fruit (any kind), plain cake, raw carrot, and raisins, or muscatels. Grit and cuttlebone should be continually in the cage, also a chunk of wood for it to exercise its mandibles upon. Do not aim at making it really fat. The aim should be the happy medium between fat and thin, commonly spoken of as "being thoroughly fit." Report progress in a couple of months.

BREEDING ZEBRA FINCHES.

Tickie.—I am pleased to note you have put your pair in a larger cage, and that they are already preparing to go to nest in earnest. It is not easy to get the incubation period to a day with species which build domed nests or in a closed nestbox, but the time is from eleven to thirteen days, from the laying of the last egg. I certainly timed one clutch of eggs for eleven days, but could not be certain that they had not been incubated for a day when I noticed clutch to be complete. As soon as you know that they have eggs, and have been sitting for ten days, give them as an extra a piece of sponge cake that has been moistened in hot milk, and keep a small tin of ants' "eggs" in the cage; also a millet spray, and supply flowering grass and other weeds ad. lib. as green food. There should be no difficulty in getting the young reared. Many of these have been bred in cages, especially on the Continent, but in these days Zebra Finches are mostly kept in garden aviaries, when their successful breeding is a matter of course.

ARRANGING FOR THE BREEDING SEASON.

Esperance.—If the hen Budgerigar you have left was amiable and showed any inclination in the past to use the coconut husks (i.e., go to nest), then retain it. If not, sell it or give it its liberty and procure another hen to replace it from the source you suggest. You can't do better. I should start with two pairs in the aviary; there is no reason why you should not put in three pairs, but do not leave in any odd adult bird. Unmated adult birds are sure in some way to interfere with nesting pairs. I consider it better to put them in all at once and not to disturb them when nesting has begun, or when they are preparing for it. You might venture a pair of Zebra Finches. These will require nesting material, though there is always the risk of them getting nipped by the Budgies; but the Zebras are usually well able to look after themselves. It would perhaps be as well to sell the odd cock Budgie and start the season with two pairs Budgies and one pair Zebra Finches. It would be better to get adult Zebra Finches, as you want them to go to nest at once, and, of course, unless you buy them direct from an outdoor aviary they must not be put outside till the first or second week in April, and if the season should be late, not till May 1st. I hope you will have better luck this season.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. The Post Office regulation is that bodies of birds must be sent at the letter rate of postage, and must be packed in hermetically-sealed receptacles which must themselves be enclosed in strong wooden, leather, or metal cases. If this regulation be infringed the packets may be destroyed by the authorities. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. A. Harrison.—Canary died of inflammation of the bowels.

S. Wallace Barr.—Pneumonia was the cause of death, a result of the present spell of cold wet weather.

J. W. Goldsmith.—Canary succumbed to exhaustion following gastro-enteritis and induced by cold. These birds are more delicate by far than the buffs. It was a sound bird otherwise.

GENERAL.

IDENTIFICATION OF BIRD.

Thrush.—From the very slight description you give, we are inclined to think your bird is a Fieldfare, but we cannot quite make out the "dark breast mixed with red, like a Robin." If you will send a carefully detailed description of the bird we will endeavour to help you further.

BE PATRIOTIC !

Wanted, Common or Crossbred Canaries, cocks or hens, also Mules, cocks or hens, for patriotic purposes. Just remember this—cut out or make a note of same.

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 2/2.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatoels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts, Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2. "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

HOW well-known Canary Fanciers bred their prize-winning birds—birds literally worth their weight in gold—how they trained them—the foods used. All this priceless information and much more is clearly given by the Breeders themselves in this splendid Canary Book. Every page—every line—is full of the practical experience of practical men—experts in their line. Fanciers who have specialised in Lizards give valuable information. Breeders of famous prize-winning crested varieties contribute to its 380 pages. Every feature of Canary Breeding and Exhibiting is clearly and fully dealt with—you have only to glance at the comprehensive index to turn up the information you desire.

The book contains 133 illustrations, a few of which are here reproduced. Thus, "Our Canaries" not only tells you but shows you. If you are a novice, or breed only for pleasure, you will be delighted with the increased enjoyment which the book will enable you to derive from your hobby. If you are an "old hand," or breed for profit, it will help you to increase profits.

"Our Canaries" will be sent you for Free Examination—Approval for a deposit of only 1/-. If, after examination, you return the book, your deposit will at once be refunded. If, however, you decide to keep the book, you can pay the balance by easy monthly instalments. Thus you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by sending for a copy. Do so TO-DAY.
